(b) Review.—If Amtrak and the States (including the District of Columbia) in which Amtrak operates such routes do not voluntarily adopt and implement the methodology developed under subsection (a) in allocating costs and determining compensation for the provision of service in accordance with the date established therein, the Surface Transportation Board shall determine the appropriate methodology required under subsection (a) for such services in accordance with the procedures and procedural schedule applicable to a proceeding under section 24904(c) of title 49, United States Code, and require the full implementation of this methodology with regards to the provision of such service within 1 year after the Board's determination of the appropriate methodology.

SEC. 207. INDEPENDENT AUDITOR TO ESTABLISH METHODOLOGIES FOR AMTRAK ROUTE AND SERVICE PLANNING DECISIONS.

(a) Methodology Development.—The Federal Railroad Administration shall obtain the services of an independent auditor or consultant to develop and recommend objective methodologies for determining intercity passenger routes and services, including the establishment of new routes, the elimination of existing routes, and the contraction or expansion of services or frequencies over such routes. In developing such methodologies, the auditor or consultant shall consider—

(1) the current or expected performance and service quality of intercity passenger train operations, including cost recovery, on-time performance and minutes of delay, ridership, on-board services, stations, facilities, equipment, and other services;

(2) connectivity of a route with other routes;

(3) the transportation needs of communities and populations that are not well served by other forms of public transportation;

(4) Amtrak's and other major intercity passenger rail service providers in other countries' methodologies for determining intercity passenger rail routes and services; and

(5) the views of the States and other interested parties.

(b) Submittal to Congress.—The auditor or consultant shall submit recommendations developed under subsection (a) to Amtrak, the House of Representatives Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, and the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

(c) Consideration of Recommendations.—Within 90 days after receiving the recommendations developed under subsection (a) by the independent auditor or consultant, the Amtrak Board shall consider the adoption of those recommendations. The Board shall transmit a report to the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the House of Representatives Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure explaining its action in adopting or failing to adopt any of the recommendations.

(d) Authorization of Appropriations.—There are authorized to be made available to the Secretary of Transportation, out of any amounts authorized by this division to be appropriated for the benefit of Amtrak and not otherwise obligated or expended, such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

(e) Pioneer Route.—Within 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, Amtrak shall conduct a 1-time evaluation of the Pioneer Route formerly operated by Amtrak to determine, using methodologies adopted under subsection (c), whether a level of passenger demand exists that would warrant consideration of reinstating the entire Pioneer Route service or segments of that service.

SEC. 208. METRICS AND STANDARDS.

(a) In General.—Within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration and Amtrak shall jointly, in consultation with the Surface Transportation Board, rail carriers over whose rail lines Amtrak trains operate, States, Amtrak employees, and groups representing Amtrak passengers, as appropriate, develop new or improve existing metrics and minimum standards for measuring the performance and service quality of intercity passenger train operations, including cost recovery, on-time performance and minutes of delay, ridership, on-board services, stations, facilities, equipment, and other services. Such metrics, at a minimum, shall include the percentage of avoidable and fully allocated operating costs covered by passenger revenues on each route, ridership per train mile operated, measures of on-time performance and delays incurred by intercity passenger trains on the rail lines of each rail carrier and, for long distance routes, measures of connectivity with other routes in all regions currently receiving Amtrak service and the transportation needs of communities and populations that are not well-served by other forms of public transportation. Amtrak shall provide reasonable access to the Federal Railroad Administration in order to enable the Administration to carry out its duty under this section.

(b) Quarterly Reports.—The Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration shall collect the necessary data and publish a quarterly report on the performance and service quality of intercity passenger train operations, including cost recovery, ridership, on-time performance and minutes of delay, causes of delay, on-board services, stations, facilities, equipment, and other services.

(c) Contract with Host Rail Carriers.—To the extent practicable, Amtrak and its host rail carriers shall incorporate the metrics and standards developed under subsection (a) into their access and service agreements.

(d) Arbitration.—If the development of the metrics and standards is not completed within the 180-day period required by subsection (a), any party involved in the development of those standards may petition the Surface Transportation Board to appoint an arbitrator to assist the parties in resolving their disputes through binding arbitration.

SEC. 209. PASSENGER TRAIN PERFORMANCE.

(a) In General.—Section 24308 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f) Passenger Train Performance and Other Standards.—

"(1) Investigation of substandard performance.—If the on-time performance of any intercity passenger train averages less than 80 percent for any 2 consecutive calendar quarters, or the service quality of intercity passenger train operations for which minimum standards are established under section 208 of the Passenger Rail Investment and Improvement Act of 2005 fails to meet those standards for 2 consecutive calendar quarters, the Surface Transportation Board shall investigate whether, and to what extent, delays or failure to achieve minimum standards are due to causes that could reasonably be addressed by a rail carrier over the tracks of which the intercity passenger train operates or reasonably addressed by the intercity passenger rail operator. In carrying out such an investigation, the Board shall obtain information from all parties involved and make recommendations regarding reasonable measures to improve the service, quality, and on-time performance of the train.

"(2) Problems caused by host rail carrier.—If the Board determines that delays or failures to achieve minimum standards investigated under paragraph (1) are attributable to a rail carrier's failure to provide preference to Amtrak over freight transportation under subsection (c), then the Board shall enforce its recommendations for relief under this section.

"(3) Penalties.—

"(A) In general.—The Board shall publish a schedule of penalties which will—

"(A) fairly reflect the extent to which Amtrak suffers financial loss as a result of host rail carrier delays or failure to achieve minimum standards; and

"(B) will adequately deter future actions which may reasonably be expected to be likely to result in delays to Amtrak.

"(B) Assessment.—The Board may assess these penalties upon a host rail carrier.

"(C) Use.—The Board shall make any amounts received as penalties under this paragraph available to Amtrak or a State contracting with Amtrak, as applicable, for capital or operating expenditures on such routes.".

(b) Change of Reference.—Section 24308 is amended—

(1) by striking "Interstate Commerce Commission" in subsection (a)(2)(A) and inserting "Surface Transportation Board";

(2) by striking "Commission" each place it appears and inserting "Board";

(3) by striking "Secretary" the last 3 places it appears in subsection (c) and each place it appears in subsections (d) and (e) and inserting "Board".

"(3) beginning in fiscal year 2009 for those routes identified as being in the best performing third under subsection (a)(2).

"(d) ENFORCEMENT.—The Federal Railroad Administration shall monitor the development, implementation, and outcome of improvement plans under this section. If, for any year, it determines that Amtrak is not making reasonable progress in implementing its performance improvement plan or in achieving the expected outcome of the plan for any calendar year, the Federal Railroad Administration—

"(1) shall notify Amtrak, the Inspector General of the Department of Transportation, and appropriate Congressional committees of its determination under this subsection;

"(2) shall provide an opportunity for a hearing with respect to that determination; and

"(3) may withhold any appropriated funds otherwise available to Amtrak for the operation of a route or routes on which it is not making progress, other than funds made available for passenger safety or security measures.".

"(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—

"(1) The Secretary of Transportation may make grants under this section to an applicant to assist in financing the capital costs of facilities and equipment necessary to provide or improve intercity passenger rail transportation.

"(2) The Secretary shall require that a grant under this section be subject to the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions the Secretary decides are necessary or appropriate for the purposes of this section, including requirements for the disposition of net increases in value of real property resulting from the project assisted under this section and shall prescribe procedures and schedules for the awarding of grants under this title, including application and qualification procedures and a record of decision on applicant eligibility. The Secretary shall issue a final rule establishing such procedures not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of the Passenger Rail Investment and Improvement Act of 2005.

"(b) PROJECT AS PART OF STATE RAIL PLAN.—

"(1) The Secretary may not approve a grant for a project under this section unless the Secretary finds that the project is part of a State rail plan developed under chapter 225 of this title, or under the plan required by section 203 of the Passenger Rail Investment and Improvement Act of 2005, and that the applicant or recipient has or will have the legal, financial, and technical capacity to carry out the project, satisfactory continuing control over the use of the equipment or facilities, and the capability and willingness to maintain the equipment or facilities.

"(2) An applicant shall provide sufficient information upon which the Secretary can make the findings required by this subsection.

"(3) If an applicant has not selected the proposed operator of its service competitively, the applicant shall provide written justification to the Secretary showing why the proposed operator is the best, taking into account price and other factors, and that use of the proposed operator will not unnecessarily increase the cost of the project.

"(c) PROJECT SELECTION CRITERIA.—The Secretary, in selecting the recipients of financial assistance to be provided under subsection (a), shall—

"(1) require that each proposed project meet all safety and security requirements that are applicable to the project under law;

"(2) give preference to projects with high levels of estimated ridership, increased on-time performance, reduced trip time, additional service frequency to meet anticipated or existing demand, or other significant service enhancements as measured against minimum standards developed under section 208 of the Passenger Rail Investment and Improvement Act of 2005;

"(3) encourage intermodal connectivity through projects that provide direct connections between train stations, airports, bus terminals, subway stations, ferry ports, and other modes of transportation;

"(4) ensure that each project is compatible with, and is operated in conformance with—

"(A) plans developed pursuant to the requirements of section 135 of title 23, United States Code; and

"(B) the national rail plan (if it is available); and

"(5) favor the following kinds of projects:

"(A) Projects that are expected to have a significant favorable impact on air or highway traffic congestion, capacity, or safety.

"(B) Projects that also improve freight or commuter rail operations.

"(C) Projects that have significant environmental benefits.

"(D) Projects that are—

"(i) at a stage of preparation that all pre-commencement compliance with environmental protection requirements has already been completed; and

"(ii) ready to be commenced.

"(E) Projects with positive economic and employment impacts.

"(e) LETTERS OF INTENT, FULL FUNDING GRANT AGREEMENTS, AND EARLY SYSTEMS WORK AGREEMENTS.—

"(1)(A) The Secretary may issue a letter of intent to an applicant announcing an intention to obligate, for a major capital project under this section, an amount from future available budget authority specified in law that is not more than the amount stipulated as the financial participation of the Secretary in the project.

"(B) At least 30 days before issuing a letter under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph or entering into a full funding grant agreement, the Secretary shall notify in writing the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations of the proposed letter or agreement. The Secretary shall include with the notification a copy of the proposed letter or agreement as well as the evaluations and ratings for the project.

"(C) An obligation or administrative commitment may be made only when amounts are appropriated.

"(2)(A) The Secretary may make a full funding grant agreement with an applicant. The agreement shall—

"(iii) cover the period of time for completing the project, including a period extending beyond the period of an authorization; and

"(iv) make timely and efficient management of the project easier according to the law of the United States.

"(B) An agreement under this paragraph obligates an amount of available budget authority specified in law and may include a commitment, contingent on amounts to be specified in law in advance for commitments under this paragraph, to obligate an additional amount from future available budget authority specified in law. The agreement shall state that the contingent commitment is not an obligation of the Government and is subject to the availability of appropriations made by Federal law and to Federal laws in force on or enacted after the date of the contingent commitment. Interest and other financing costs of efficiently carrying out a part of the project within a reasonable time are a cost of carrying out the project under a full funding grant agreement, except that eligible costs may not be more than the cost of the most favorable financing terms reasonably available for the project at the time of borrowing. The applicant shall certify, in a way satisfactory to the Secretary, that the applicant has shown reasonable diligence in seeking the most favorable financing terms.

"(3)(A) The Secretary may make an early systems work agreement with an applicant if a record of decision under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) has been issued on the project and the Secretary finds there is reason to believe—

"(i) a full funding grant agreement for the project will be made; and

"(ii) the terms of the work agreement will promote ultimate completion of the project more rapidly and at less cost.

"(B) A work agreement under this paragraph obligates an amount of available budget authority specified in law and shall provide for reimbursement of preliminary costs of carrying out the project, including land acquisition, timely procurement of system elements for which specifications are decided, and other activities the Secretary decides are appropriate to make efficient, long-term project management easier. A work agreement shall cover the period of time the Secretary considers appropriate. The period may extend beyond the period of current authorization. Interest and other financing costs of efficiently carrying out the work agreement within a reasonable time are a cost of carrying out the agreement, except that eligible costs may not be more than the cost of the most favorable financing terms reasonably available for the project at the time of borrowing. The applicant shall certify, in a way satisfactory to the Secretary, that the applicant has shown reasonable diligence in seeking the most favorable financing terms. If an applicant does not carry out the project for reasons within the control of the applicant, the applicant shall repay all Government payments made under the work agreement plus reasonable interest and penalty charges the Secretary establishes in the agreement.

"(4) The total estimated amount of future obligations of the Government and contingent commitments to incur obligations covered by all outstanding letters of intent, full funding grant agreements, and early systems work agreements may be not more than the amount authorized under section 101(c) of Passenger Rail Investment and Improvement Act of 2005, less an amount the Secretary reasonably estimates is necessary for grants under this section not covered by a letter. The total amount covered by new letters and contingent commitments included in full funding grant agreements and early systems work agreements may be not more than a limitation specified in law.

"(f) Federal Share of Net Project Cost.—

"(1)(A) Based on engineering studies, studies of economic feasibility, and information on the expected use of equipment or facilities, the Secretary shall estimate the net project cost.

"(B) A grant for the project shall not exceed 80 percent of the project net capital cost.

"(C) The Secretary shall give priority in allocating future obligations and contingent commitments to incur obligations to grant requests seeking a lower Federal share of the project net capital cost.

"(2) Up to an additional 20 percent of the required non-Federal funds may be funded from amounts appropriated to or made available to a department or agency of the Federal Government that are eligible to be expended for transportation.

"(3) 50 percent of the average amounts expended by a State or group of States (including the District of Columbia) for capital projects to benefit intercity passenger rail service in fiscal years 2003, 2004, and 2005 shall be credited towards the matching requirements for grants awarded under this section. The Secretary may require such information as necessary to verify such expenditures.

"(4) 50 percent of the average amounts expended by a State or group of States (including the District of Columbia) in a fiscal year beginning in 2006 for capital projects to benefit intercity passenger rail service or for the operating costs of such service above the average of expenditures made for such service in fiscal years 2003, 2004, and 2005 shall be credited towards the matching requirements for grants awarded under this section. The Secretary may require such information as necessary to verify such expenditures.

"(g) Undertaking Projects in Advance.—

"(1) The Secretary may pay the Federal share of the net capital project cost to an applicant that carries out any part of a project described in this section according to all applicable procedures and requirements if—

"(A) the applicant applies for the payment;

"(B) the Secretary approves the payment; and

"(C) before carrying out the part of the project, the Secretary approves the plans and specifications for the part in the same way as other projects under this section.

"(2) The cost of carrying out part of a project includes the amount of interest earned and payable on bonds issued by the applicant to the extent proceeds of the bonds are expended in carrying out the part. However, the amount of interest under this paragraph may not be more than the most favorable interest terms reasonably available for the project at the time of borrowing. The applicant shall certify, in a manner satisfactory to the Secretary, that the applicant has shown reasonable diligence in seeking the most favorable financial terms.

"(3) The Secretary shall consider changes in capital project cost indices when determining the estimated cost under paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(h) 2-Year Availability.—Funds appropriated under this section shall remain available until expended. If any amount provided as a grant under this section is not obligated or expended for the purposes described in subsection (a) within 2 years after the date on which the State received the grant, such sums shall be returned to the Secretary for other intercity passenger rail development projects under this section at the discretion of the Secretary.

"(i) Public-Private Partnerships.—

"(1) In general.—A metropolitan planning organization, State transportation department, or other project sponsor may enter into an agreement with any public, private, or nonprofit entity to cooperatively implement any project funded with a grant under this title.

"(j) Special Transportation Circumstances.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall allocate an appropriate portion of the amounts available under this section to provide grants to States—

"(1) in which there is no intercity passenger rail service for the purpose of funding freight rail capital projects that are on a State rail plan developed under chapter 225 of this title that provide public benefits (as defined in chapter 225) as determined by the Secretary; or

"(2) in which the rail transportation system is not physically connected to rail systems in the continental United States or may not otherwise qualify for a grant under this section due to the unique characteristics of the geography of that State or other relevant considerations, for the purpose of funding transportation-related capital projects.

"(k) Small Capital Projects.—The Secretary shall make available $10,000,000 annually from the amounts authorized under section 101(c) of the Passenger Rail Investment and Improvement Act of 2005 beginning in fiscal year 2007 for grants for capital projects eligible under this section not exceeding $2,000,000, including costs eligible under section 206(c) of that Act. The Secretary may wave requirements of this section, including state rail plan requirements, as appropriate.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2528) making appropriations for military quality of life functions of the Department of Defense, military construction, the Department of Veterans Affairs, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2006, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House of Representatives and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The Senate amended the House bill with two amendments. The Senate amendment to the text deleted the entire House bill after the enacting clause and inserted the Senate bill. The conference agreement includes a revised bill.

The Senate amended the title of the House bill. The conference agreement adopts the title of the bill as proposed by the House.

ITEMS OF GENERAL INTEREST

Matters Addressed by Only One Committee.—The language and allocations set forth in House Report 109–95 and Senate Report 109–105 should be complied with unless specifically addressed to the contrary in the conference report and statement of the managers. Report language included by the House, which is not changed by the report of the Senate or the conference, and Senate report language, which is not changed by the conference is approved by the committee of conference. The statement of the managers, while repeating some report language for emphasis, does not intend to negate the language referred to above unless expressly provided herein. In cases where the House or the Senate have directed the submission of a report, such report is to be submitted to both Houses of Congress.

Timely Submissions of Military Construction Reprogramming Requests.—The conferees regret that submissions of military construction reprogramming requests to Congress are often delayed. Such delays are of particular concern when projects carry bid expiration deadlines, which can lead to increased costs when those deadlines are not met. Therefore, the conferees direct the Comptroller of the Department of Defense to ensure reprogramming requests are processed expeditiously to allow Congress sufficient time to consider and act upon such requests.

Impact of Natural Disasters on Military Construction Costs.—The conferees are aware that military construction costs have increased in the United States due to reduced contractor availability and increased competition, as well as increased prices for certain materials, as a result of recent natural disasters. The conferees are additionally concerned that damage and reconstruction requirements caused by these natural disasters will seriously exacerbate this problem. Therefore, the conferees direct the Department of Defense to account for the potential increased cost to military construction projects in the fiscal year 2007 budget request. Further, the Assistant Secretary of each military department with responsibility for installations and the head of each Defense agency should certify that such costs have been taken into account upon the submission of the Administration's fiscal year 2007 military construction budget request.

Revisions to CENTCOM Master Plan.—The conferees have rescinded funds for the repair of an airfield at Karshi-Khanabad Air Base, Uzbekistan, because access to that base is no longer available to the United States. The conferees understand that revisions to the Central Command (CENTCOM) master plan, submitted to Congress in 2005, have already been made for Iraq, and the conferees believe that the loss of access rights in Uzbekistan will require further revisions to the plan. The conferees emphasize that it is the duty of CENTCOM to keep the congressional defense committees apprised of any changes to this plan and direct CENTCOM to report to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress on changes made since its original submission no later than January 31, 2006.

Submission of Defense-Wide Military Construction Future Years Defense Plan.—The conferees clarify that Military Construction, Defense-Wide is not exempt from the Future Years Defense Program (FYDP) submission requirements of 10 U.S.C. 221. The conferees direct the Department of Defense to submit the FYDP for the Defense-Wide military construction budget with the fiscal year 2007 request.

Military Construction and Global Rebasing.—The conferees are aware that the Army spent approximately $71,400,000 of fiscal year 2005 operation and maintenance funds on the renovation of 14 "rolling-pin" barracks at Fort Carson, Colorado, to accommodate soldiers of the 2nd Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division, which was restationed from Korea as part of the Department of Defense's Integrated Global Presence and Basing Strategy (IGPBS). The Army indicated that the expected life cycle of these renovated barracks is 15–20 years and asserted that, at a cost of approximately $41,000 per soldier, renovated barracks are more cost-efficient than new construction, at a cost of approximately $71,000 per soldier. The conferees note that given the Department of Defense's recapitalization goal of 67 years, the comparable cost of the renovated barracks is likely to be much higher. The Army, however, further indicated that the overriding factor was not cost efficiency, but expediency, which raises another concern of the conferees. Costs associated with IGPBS and the modularity initiative should not be funded solely through supplemental appropriations and reprogrammings, but rather should be considered through the regular authorization and appropriations process. The conferees therefore direct the Department of Defense to integrate IGPBS, and the Army's modularity initiative, with the regular military construction program beginning with its fiscal year 2007 budget submission.

TITLE I

(INCLUDING RESCISSIONS)

The conference agreement appropriates $1,775,260,000 for Military Construction, Army, instead of $1,652,552,000 as proposed by the House and $1,640,641,000 as proposed by the Senate. Within this amount, the conference agreement provides $170,021,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services, and host nation support instead of $168,804,000 as proposed by the House and $179,343,000 as proposed by the Senate. The agreement also includes $50,000,000 for force protection activities in Iraq as proposed by the House. The Senate bill contained no similar provision.

The conference agreement also rescinds $3,046,000 from Public Law 107–249 and $16,700,000 from Public Law 108–324. The conferees direct the Army to submit by March 31, 2006 a report describing how the rescissions of funds in this Act will be applied. This report shall list, by project, the amount of funds to be sourced to such rescissions.

The conference agreement does not include language proposed by the Senate to designate funding for two projects. The agreement addresses this language in the attached detail table by State. The House bill contained no similar provision.

Of the funds provided for planning and design in this account, the conferees direct that $90,000 be made available for the planning and design of the land purchase, Main Gate, Yakima Training Center, Washington.

Of the funds provided for minor construction in this account, the conferees direct that $1,100,000 be made available for the construction of a high explosive magazine at McAlester Army Ammunition Plant, Oklahoma.

Of the funds provided for minor construction in this account, the conferees direct that $1,500,000 be made available for the construction of the first phase of a tactical operations center on Kwajalein Atoll, instead of dome housing as proposed by the Senate. However, the conferees continue to expect the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress no later than December 1, 2005, detailing the timeline for the replacement of substandard housing on Kwajalein Atoll.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, NAVY AND MARINE CORPS

The conference agreement appropriates $1,157,141,000 for Military Construction, Navy and Marine Corps, instead of $1,109,177,000 as proposed by the House and $1,045,882,000 as proposed by the Senate. Within this amount, the conference agreement provides $34,893,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services instead of $36,029,000 as proposed by the House and $32,524,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement rescinds $5,767,000 from Public Law 108–132. The agreement also rescinds $44,270,000 from Public Law 108–324, instead of $92,354,000 as proposed by the Senate. The House bill contained no similar provision. The conferees direct the Navy to submit by March 31, 2006 a report describing how the rescissions of funds in this Act will be applied. This report shall list, by project, the amount of funds to be sourced to such rescissions.

North Island, California—Bachelor Enlisted Quarters, Homeport Ashore.—The conferees are very supportive of the Homeport Ashore program to provide unaccompanied housing for enlisted sailors when in port, and encourage the Navy to pursue this initiative as part of the bachelor enlisted quarters (BEQ) privatization pilot program. Although the conferees commend the Navy for seeking innovative solutions, including privatization, to expedite the construction of new BEQ units, they also note that the authorization, as contained in the fiscal year 2003 Defense Authorization Act, limits the Navy to three pilot projects. The North Island proposal is not among the projects earlier identified by the Navy as part of the pilot program, and is therefore not authorized under current law. Although the conferees have denied funding for the North Island project for this reason, they urge the Navy to proceed as expeditiously as possible with the projects currently authorized under the BEQ privatization pilot program so that Congress has a basis on which to evaluate the potential for expansion of the program in future years.

Military Construction, Air Force

The conference agreement appropriates $1,288,530,000 for Military Construction, Air Force, instead of $1,171,338,000 as proposed by the House and $1,209,128,000 as proposed by the Senate. Within this amount, the conference agreement provides $95,537,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services instead of $91,733,000 as proposed by the House and $83,626,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement rescinds $13,000,000 from Public Law 108–11, $6,600,000 from Public Law 108–132, and $9,500,000 from Public Law 108–324. The agreement also rescinds $46,500,000 from Public Law 109–13 for the runway repair project, including associated planning and design, at Karshi-Khanabad Air Base, Uzbekistan. The conferees direct the Air Force to submit by March 31, 2006 a report describing how the rescissions of funds in this Act will be applied. This report shall list, by project, the amount of funds to be sourced to such rescissions.

The conference agreement does not include language proposed by the Senate to designate funding for two projects. The agreement addresses this language in the attached detail table by State. The House bill contained no similar provision.

Military Construction, Defense-Wide

(INCLUDING RESCISSION AND TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement appropriates $1,008,855,000 for Military Construction, Defense-Wide, instead of $976,664,000 as proposed by the House and $1,072,165,000 as proposed by the Senate. Within this amount, the conference agreement provides $136,406,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services instead of $107,285,000 as proposed by the House and $133,120,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement also rescinds $20,000,000 from Public Law 108–324 due to unobligated balances in contingency construction.

The conference agreement provides $50,000,000 for the Energy Conservation Improvement Program as proposed by the House, instead of $60,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. The agreement does not provide funding for contingency construction due to the recurrence of carryover amounts.

The conferees direct the National Security Agency to follow standard acquisition and design-review procedures on its fiscal year 2006 projects.

Military Construction, Army National Guard

The conference agreement appropriates $523,151,000 for Military Construction, Army National Guard, instead of $410,624,000 as proposed by the House and $467,146,000 as proposed by the Senate.

Of the funds provided for planning and design in this account, the conferees direct that $186,000 be made available for the planning and design of the Combined Support Maintenance Shop, Searcy, Arkansas.

Of the funds provided for minor construction in this account, the conferees direct the specified amounts be made available for the construction of the following facilities: Marana, Arizona—Fire Station, $1,499,000; Camp Murray, Washington—Homeland Security Multi-Functional Education Center, $1,424,000.

Military Construction, Air National Guard

(INCLUDING RESCISSION)

The conference agreement appropriates $316,117,000 for Military Construction, Air National Guard, instead of $225,727,000 as proposed by the House and $279,156,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement also rescinds $13,700,000 from Public Law 108–324. The conferees direct the Air National Guard to submit by March 31, 2006 a report describing how the rescission of funds in this Act will be applied. This report shall list, by project, the amount of funds to be sourced to such rescission.

Of the funds provided for planning and design in this account, the conferees direct that the specified amounts be made available for the planning and design of the following facilities: New Castle County Airport, Delaware—Replacement C–130 Maintenance Hangar, $1,440,000; Duluth IAP, Minnesota—Addition to Joint FAA/ANG Fire Station Facility, Phase 2, $700,000; March ARB, California—Replace Aircraft Maintenance Hangar and Shops, $960,000; Fresno Yosemite IAP, California—Replace Vehicle Maintenance Complex, $340,000.

Of the funds provided for minor construction in this account, the conferees direct that $1,500,000 be made available for the construction of an arm and disarm apron at the end of runway 13 at Atlantic City IAP, New Jersey.

Military Construction, Army Reserve

The conference agreement appropriates $152,569,000 for Military Construction, Army Reserve, instead of $138,425,000 as proposed by the House and $136,077,000 as proposed by the Senate.

Military Construction, Naval Reserve

The conference agreement appropriates $46,864,000 for Military Construction, Naval Reserve, instead of $45,226,000 as proposed by the House and $46,676,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement also rescinds $5,368,000 from Public Law 108–132 and $11,192,000 from Public Law 108–324. The conferees direct the Naval Reserve to submit by March 31, 2006 a report describing how the rescissions of funds in this Act will be applied. This report shall list, by project, the amount of funds to be sourced to such rescissions.

Military Construction, Air Force Reserve

The conference agreement appropriates $105,883,000 for Military Construction, Air Force Reserve, instead of $110,847,000 as proposed by the House and $89,260,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement also rescinds $13,815,000 from Public Law 108–324. The conferees direct the Air Force Reserve to submit by March 31, 2006 a report describing how the rescission of funds in this Act will be applied. This report shall list, by project, the amount of funds to be sourced to such rescission.

Of the funds provided for planning and design in this account, the conferees direct that $207,000 be made available for the planning and design of the Addition Alteration Aerial Port Facility, Homestead ARB, Florida.

North Atlantic Treaty Organization Security Investment Program

(INCLUDING RESCISSION)

The conference agreement appropriates $206,858,000 for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Security Investment Program as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The conference agreement also includes a rescission of $30,000,000 from Public Law 108–324 due to the slow spendout rate of the program and the recurrence of carryover amounts.

Family Housing Overview

Family Housing Reprogramming Requests.—The conferees note the language contained in House Report 109–95 regarding the applicability of reprogramming guidelines to family housing projects. The conferees feel strongly that these guidelines should continue to apply to family housing projects, including privatization projects, to enable adequate congressional oversight.

Family Housing Construction, Army

The conference agreement appropriates $549,636,000 for Family Housing Construction, Army as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The conference agreement also rescinds $16,000,000 from Public Law 108–324. The conferees direct the Army to submit by March 31, 2006 a report describing how the rescission of funds in this Act will be applied. This report shall list, by project, the amount of funds to be sourced to such rescission.

Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Army

The conference agreement appropriates $803,993,000 for Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Army as proposed by the House, instead of $812,993,000 as proposed by the Senate.

Family Housing Construction, Navy and Marine Corps

The conference agreement appropriates $218,942,000 for Family Housing Construction, Navy and Marine Corps as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Navy and Marine Corps

The conference agreement appropriates $588,660,000 for Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Navy and Marine Corps as proposed by the House, instead of $593,660,000 as proposed by the Senate.

Family Housing Construction, Air Force

The conference agreement appropriates $1,101,887,000 for Family Housing Construction, Air Force, instead of $1,236,220,000 as proposed by the House and $1,142,622,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement also rescinds $7,700,000 from Public Law 107–249, $4,500,000 from Public Law 108–132, and $31,700,000 from Public Law 108–324. The conferees direct the Air Force to submit by March 31, 2006 a report describing how the rescissions of funds in this Act will be applied. This report shall list, by project, the amount of funds to be sourced to such rescissions.

Adjustments to Air Force Family Housing Program.—The conferees note the progress made in the Air Force family housing privatization program, allowing the 2006 construction program to be adjusted without adversely affecting Air Force families. The privatization program leverages private sector capital and expertise to build superior family housing at less direct cost to the Federal government. Progress in the privatization program has resulted in unanticipated savings most recently on projects at four installations: Peterson AFB, Colorado; the United States Air Force Academy, Colorado; Bolling AFB, District of Columbia; and F.E. Warren AFB, Wyoming. The conferees note that privatization at these four installations will now allow for the construction or renovation of 3,156 homes, a 33 percent increase over the 2,371 units originally proposed in the budget request.

Spangdahlem Air Base, Germany.—The conferees note the current need for housing at Spangdahlem Air Base, Germany, and have provided funding for such purpose. The conferees urge the Air Force to consider all options to address the housing need at Spangdahlem Air Base. Specifically, build-to-lease housing has the potential to provide quality housing quickly to the families at Spangdahlem, while also providing a more cost-effective and flexible option to the United States. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to report on the housing plan at Spangdahlem.

The report must include the following:

Footprint requirements for family housing relative to land on hand at Spangdahlem and land purchase, if any, required.

A complete cost-benefit analysis of all available housing options at Spangdahlem, including build-to-lease. The analysis should include, but not be limited to, the cost per housing unit of each option and evidence of efforts made to lower such cost.

A certification that all options have been pursued with the German government, including, but not limited to, cost-sharing, road repair between housing units, and loan guarantees.

As provided in the administrative provisions of this title, none of the funds appropriated for family housing at Spangdahlem may be obligated until the Secretary of the Air Force certifies to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress that the above-mentioned report has been completed and received the Committees' response, or a period of 30 days has elapsed after receipt of the report.

Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Air Force

The conference agreement appropriates $766,939,000 for Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Air Force as proposed by the Senate, instead of $755,319,000 as proposed by the House.

Family Housing Construction, Defense-Wide

The conference agreement does not appropriate funding for Family Housing Construction, Defense-Wide. The Administration's budget request did not propose funding for this account in fiscal year 2006.

Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide

The conference agreement appropriates $46,391,000 for Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

Department of Defense Family Housing Improvement Fund

The conference agreement appropriates $2,500,000 for the Department of Defense Family Housing Improvement Fund as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

Chemical Demilitarization Construction, Defense-Wide

The conference agreement does not appropriate funding for Chemical Demilitarization Construction, Defense-Wide. The purpose of this account is to provide funds for the design and construction of full-scale chemical disposal facilities and associated projects to upgrade installation support facilities and infrastructure required to support the chemical demilitarization program.

Because the Department of Defense requested no funding for this account for fiscal year 2006, the conferees have not provided funding. However, the conferees remain mindful that obligations exist to complete construction associated with the Department's chemical demilitarization program, including the Assembled Chemical Weapons Alternatives (ACWA) program. The chemical demilitarization construction account within the Military Construction title of the relevant House and Senate appropriations bills is the appropriate account for funding construction associated with this program. The conferees expect the Department of Defense to include any requests for chemical demilitarization construction funding in future years, including for ACWA, to be included in the Chemical Demilitarization Construction, Defense-Wide account.

Base Realignment and Closure Overview

Past Years Military Construction Impacted by BRAC.—The conferees note that some projects appropriated in this Act or in previous Acts making appropriations for military construction may be rendered unnecessary as a result of the 2005 base realignment and closure recommendations, which became effective on November 9, 2005. The conference agreement rescinds funds due to anticipated savings as a result. In the event that additional savings are realized, the conferees remind the Department that excess funds may not be reprogrammed except in accordance with the guidelines set forth by the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress. Further, the conferees have provided a single appropriation for the implementation of BRAC 2005, as requested by the Department, in order to ensure the Department has maximum flexibility to carry out this effort. All expenses resulting from the 2005 base realignment and closure recommendations should be paid from this account. The conferees have also included a statutory reporting requirement to maintain appropriate fiscal oversight.

BRAC Environmental Remediation.—The conferees note the language included in the Senate report regarding the use of Office of Economic Adjustment (OEA) funding, which is appropriated through the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, for the community share of certain environmental remediation activities at the former McClellan Air Force Base, California. The conferees support this language and further emphasize that OEA funds are to be used in all instances for the purpose for which they were appropriated and not used to supplant BRAC environmental remediation funding at any Department of Defense installation.

Department of Defense Base Closure Account 1990

The conference agreement appropriates $254,827,000 for the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 1990, instead of $377,827,000 as proposed by the House and $402,827,000 as proposed by the Senate. This amount fully funds the Administration's request for environmental cleanup and other activities associated with past BRAC rounds of all the Services with the exception of the Navy, which will self-finance its program. Included in the funding is an additional $14,000,000 for the Army and $6,000,000 for the Air Force above the Administration's request. The purpose of this additional funding is to expedite cleanup activities in fiscal year 2006 that the Services have identified as candidates for acceleration.

The conferees note that the Navy has collected approximately $650,000,000 from the recent sale of property at the former El Toro, California, Marine Corps Air Station. By law, proceeds from the sale of property closed under the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 must be deposited into the 1990 Department of Defense Base Closure (BRAC) account to be used for BRAC related activities, including environmental cleanup. By agreement between the military Services and the Office of the Secretary of Defense, BRAC land sale revenues are credited to the military Service owner of the property that was sold and are used to offset BRAC costs by that Service. Based on this agreement and the Navy's recent land sale revenues, the Navy no longer requires the $143,000,000 in fiscal year 2006 appropriated funds as requested in the President's budget submission for activities funded through the BRAC 1990 account.

Environmental remediation associated with the BRAC process remains a key concern of the conferees. The conferees commend the Navy for its efforts to maximize revenue from the disposal of property from installations closed under previous BRAC rounds and for its application of those revenues to the environmental cleanup of closed Navy facilities. The conferees further encourage the Department of Defense and the other Services to pursue similar land sale strategies to provide additional revenue for the cleanup of their installations. To ensure that Navy land sale revenues are used to expedite environmental remediation activities at Navy installations, the conferees have included a provision in the conference report directing that no less than $300,000,000 of the revenues deposited into the BRAC 1990 account from the sale of Navy property be used to execute the Navy's fiscal year 2006 environmental cleanup program. This level of funding is $24,000,000 above the original budget estimate, including both appropriated funds and earlier projected land sale revenues.

The conference agreement appropriates $1,504,466,000 for the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 2005, instead of $1,570,466,000 as proposed by the House and $1,479,466,000 as proposed by the Senate. The agreement includes language proposed by the Senate to prohibit the use of these funds until the Secretary of Defense submits and receives approval of a report describing the specific use of these funds. The House bill contained no similar provision.

Administrative Provisions

The conference agreement includes section 101 to limit the use of funds under a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract as proposed by both Houses of Congress.

The conference agreement includes section 102 as proposed by the House to allow the use of construction funds in this title for hire of passenger motor vehicles. The Senate bill contained a similar provision, but allowed the use of all funds in the title for such purpose.

The conference agreement includes section 121 to limit the obligation of funds for Partnership for Peace programs as proposed by both Houses of Congress.

The conference agreement includes section 122 to require congressional notification prior to issuing a solicitation for a contract with the private sector for family housing as proposed by both Houses of Congress.

The conference agreement includes section 123 to allow transfers to the Homeowners Assistance Fund as proposed by both Houses of Congress.

The conference agreement includes section 125 to prohibit the use of NATO Security Investment Program funds for missile defense studies as proposed by both Houses of Congress.

The conference agreement includes section 126 as proposed by the House to require the Department of Defense to respond to a question or inquiry, in writing, within 21 days of the request. The Senate bill contained no similar provision.

The conference agreement includes section 127 to extend the availability of funds in the Ford Island Improvement Fund as proposed by both Houses of Congress.

The conference agreement includes a modified section 128 to place limitations on the expenditure of funds for projects impacted by BRAC 2005.

The conference agreement includes a new section 129 to designate $300,000,000 of the funds available in the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 1990 for the Department of Navy and require a report on a plan for the use of the funds.

The conference agreement includes a new section 130 to require a report from the Secretary of the Air Force containing a housing plan for Spangdahlem Air Base, Germany.

The conference agreement does not include a provision proposed by the House to allow the transfer of expired funds to the Foreign Currency Fluctuation, Construction, Defense account. The Senate bill contained no similar provision.

The conference agreement does not include a provision proposed by the House to prohibit the use of funds in this title for maintenance and repair of general and flag officer quarters in the National Capital Region until the Department submits a report as required in Public Law 108–375. The Senate bill contained no similar provision.

The conference agreement does not include a provision proposed by the Senate to provide planning and design funds for a project. The agreement addresses this language under the Military Construction, Air National Guard account. The House bill contained no similar provision.

The conference agreement does not include a provision proposed by the Senate to provide funding for a project. The agreement addresses this language in the attached detail table by State. The House bill contained no similar provision.

The conference agreement does not include a provision proposed by the Senate regarding funding for the Department of Defense Base Closure Accounts. The House bill contained no similar provision.

TITLE II—DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Centers of Excellence.—The conferees feel the Department of Veterans Affairs should consider designating specialized medical treatment facilities for mental health and post traumatic stress disorder as "Centers of Excellence". Establishing these centers would allow the VA to consolidate personnel, training and specialized resources. This will ensure the VA utilizes these resources in the most efficient manner, while providing better service to our Nation's veterans. The conferees are concerned that mental health care is one of the most critical needs of our Nation's veterans, particularly those veterans returning from Operations Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom.

Therefore, the conferees direct the Department of Veterans Affairs to place more emphasis on psychiatric care of our veterans by designating three centers of excellence to focus on mental health/PTSD needs. These three centers will be established at Waco VAMC, Texas; San Diego VAMC, California; and the Canandaigua VAMC, New York.

The VA should submit a report within six months of enactment of this Act to the Committees on Appropriations in both Houses of Congress outlining the progress made in this area.

Housing for Low-Income Veterans.—The conferees agree that the Government Accountability Office shall conduct a study on housing assistance to low-income veterans and submit the report to the Congress within six months of enactment of this Act. As jurisdiction over assistance to veterans spans many departments, the conferees expect the Government Accountability Office to consult with the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress concerning the scope of such a study. This issue was addressed by the Senate as an administrative provision, section 222.

Veterans Benefits Handbooks.—The conferees recognize the valuable information contained in the Department's annual publication "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents." Adequate distribution of this publication is essential to keep veterans informed of the benefits to which they are entitled. The conferees urge the Secretary to work in coordination with the various veterans services organizations, including the National Association of County Veterans Service Officers, as well as with State departments of veterans affairs, to ensure that a comprehensive plan exists to distribute an adequate supply of the 2006 and future editions of "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents." This issue was addressed by the Senate as section 223 of the administrative provisions which the conferees have deleted from the bill.

Post Traumatic Stress Disorder.—The conferees agree with the House direction under the "Items of Interest" regarding Post Traumatic Stress Disorder Clinical Teams.

Changing Veterans Population.—The conferees agree with the direction of the Senate responding to the changing population of veterans.

VETERANS BENEFITS ADMINISTRATION

COMPENSATION AND PENSIONS

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement appropriates $33,897,787,000 for Compensation and Pensions, instead of $33,412,879,000 as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The amount provided reflects the most current estimate of funding required for this mandatory account and reflects a 4.1 percent cost-of-living adjustment. Of the amount provided, not more than $23,491,000 is to be transferred to General Operating Expenses and Medical Services for reimbursement of necessary expenses in implementing the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 and the Veterans' Benefits Act of 1992.

Annual Benefits Report.—The conferees agree with the Senate language directing the Department to continue production of the annual benefits report which shall include select veteran data for all benefit programs by State.

READJUSTMENT BENEFITS

The conference agreement appropriates $3,309,234,000 for Readjustment Benefits, instead of $3,214,246,000 as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The amount provided reflects the most current estimate of funding required for this mandatory account.

Task Force on VRE Benefits.—The conferees direct the Department to report to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress by March 16, 2006 on its efforts to implement the recommendations of the Task Force on the Vocational Rehabilitation and Employment benefits program.

VETERANS INSURANCE AND INDEMNITIES

The conference agreement appropriates $45,907,000 for Veterans Insurance and Indemnities as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

VETERANS HOUSING BENEFIT PROGRAM FUND PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement appropriates such sums as may be necessary for costs associated with direct and guaranteed loans from the Veterans Housing Benefit Program Fund Program Account as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The agreement limits obligations for direct loans to not more than $500,000 and provides that $153,575,000 is to be transferred to and merged with General Operating Expenses.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION LOANS PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement appropriates $53,000 for the costs of direct loans from the Vocational Rehabilitation Loans Program Account as proposed by both the House and the Senate, plus $305,000 to be transferred to and merged with General Operating Expenses. The agreement provides for a direct loan limitation of $4,242,000.

NATIVE AMERICAN VETERAN HOUSING LOAN PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement appropriates $580,000 for administrative expenses of the Native American Veteran Housing Loan Program Account to be transferred to and merged with General Operating Expenses as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The agreement also provides for a loan limitation of $30,000,000 for the program as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

GUARANTEED TRANSITIONAL HOUSING LOANS FOR HOMELESS VETERANS PROGRAM ACCOUNT

The conference agreement provides up to $750,000 of the funds available in Medical Administration and General Operating Expenses to carry out the Guaranteed Transitional Housing Loans for Homeless Veterans program as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

VETERANS HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement appropriates $22,547,141,000 to finance Medical Services for all veterans and beneficiaries in Department of Veterans Administration facilities, State nursing homes, and contract medical facilities, of which $1,225,000,000 is designated an emergency. The House had proposed $20,995,141,000 and the Senate had proposed $23,308,011,000, of which $1,977,000,000 was designated as emergency funding.

Of the amount provided, $1,100,000,000 is available for obligation until September 30, 2007 as proposed by the House, instead of $1,500,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees also agree that the Department shall spend not less than $2,200,000,000 for specialty mental health care as proposed by the House.

The conference agreement includes a net increase of $1,100,000,000 to the original budget request to reverse policy proposals contained in the budget. These proposals included a priority system of care relating to veterans needing long-term or nursing home care, a proposal to institute an enrollment fee for certain veterans, and a change in the co-pay amount for prescription drugs. The conferees reject all of these proposals and direct the Department to maintain policies in existence prior to submission of the budget. It is the agreement of the conferees that the budget savings anticipated from such policy proposals in the future should not be included in the budget unless the proposals are enacted and savings are realized. For the last four years, there has been a proposal for an enrollment fee and an increase in pharmacy co-payments included in the budget with unrealistic savings. Every year the Congress has had to find resources to make up for savings projections which do not materialize.

In addition, the conference agreement includes funding of $1,452,000,000 tied to various corrections of errors in the original budget submission and adjustments for workload due to corrections of the Department's actuarial model. The conferees have made some funding adjustments to accommodate this increased need for funding, and language is included which requires submission of a revised budget amendment by the President to enable the use of emergency funding for the remaining funds.

The conference agreement retains language proposed by both the House and the Senate providing the Secretary with the authority to establish a priority system for veterans seeking medical care, allowing the Secretary to give priority to medical services for priority 1-6 veterans, allowing the Secretary to fill privately written prescriptions by Department of Veterans Affairs facilities, and provides $15,000,000 for the Department of Defense/Veterans Affairs Health Care Sharing Incentive Fund.

Long-Term Care.—The conferees do not agree with the proposal contained in the budget to alter the long-term care policies, including a policy of priority care in nursing homes. The conferees have provided, within this total appropriation, sufficient resources to maintain a policy of providing long-term care to all veterans, utilizing VA-owned facilities, community nursing homes, State nursing homes, and other non-institutional venues. The conferees expect there to be no change from the policy in existence prior to fiscal year 2005.

Prosthetics Research and Integrative Health Care.—The conferees note that the fiscal year 2005 conference agreement included language directing the Department to prioritize prosthetics in its research agenda and establish a new prosthetics and integrative health care initiative. The conferees are pleased with the response of the Department, including designating four VA Medical Centers as polytrauma centers which will provide medical care and rehabilitation to service members sustaining multiple conditions such as amputation, visual and auditory impairment, post traumatic stress, traumatic brain injury, and spinal cord injury. The conferees continue to be interested in progress being made in this area of integrative treatment and direct the Department to provide semiannual updates on the status of this initiative.

MEDICAL ADMINISTRATION

The conference agreement appropriates $2,858,442,000 for Medical Administration as proposed by the Senate instead of $4,134,874,000 as proposed by the House. The conference funding level includes the movement of information technology development funding to a new Information Technology Systems account, as proposed by the Senate, under Departmental Administration. The agreement also includes language allowing $250,000,000 of the funds to be available until September 30, 2007.

Revenue Improvement Demonstration.—The conferees share the Senate concern that the Department of Veterans Affairs is only collecting 41 percent (unadjusted for Medicare impacts) of the billed amounts from third party insurance companies and expect the Department to report to both Houses of Congress on its efforts to improve this collection rate by January 1, 2006. Furthermore, the conference agreement does not support all the guidelines as specified in House Report 109-95; however, the conferees do support the following guidelines regarding a revenue improvement demonstration project: the recommendation that the VA initiate a new pilot program that will provide a comprehensive restructuring of the complete revenue cycle including cash-flow management and accounts receivable processes in certain VA hospitals; the recommendation that the VHA Chief Business Officer must have the concurrence of the VA Chief Information Officer on the business plan for this demonstration; and that the Department provide quarterly progress reports to the Committees on Appropriations in both Houses of Congress.

In selecting a site for this project, the conferees direct the Department to select one medical center in a Veterans Integrated Service Network (VISN) other than 10, which is the host site of a demonstration project authorized by Public Law 108-357. The Department must initiate this project within 60 days of the date of enactment of this Act. The conferees expect that no Department full-time equivalent employees associated with the demonstration project would be terminated during the term of the project, except for purposes of personnel action relating to employee misconduct or unsatisfactory performance, in accordance with existing labor management agreements and personnel authorities of titles 5 and 38, United States Code, as applicable.

Contract Care Coordination.—The conferees support expeditious action by the Department to implement care management strategies that have proven valuable in the broader public and private sectors. It is essential that care purchased for enrollees from private sector providers be secured in a cost effective manner, in a way that complements the larger Veterans Health Administration system of care, and preserves important agency interest, such as sustaining a partnership with university affiliates. In that interest, the VHA shall establish through competitive award by the end of calendar year 2006, at least three managed care demonstration programs designed to satisfy a set of health system objectives related to arranging and managing care. The conferees encourage the Department to formulate demonstration objectives in collaboration with industry and academia, and the Secretary will report objectives to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress within 90 days of the enactment of this Act. Multiple competitive awards and designs may be employed that may incorporate a variety of forms of public-private participation. The demonstrations, in satisfying the objectives to be enumerated, must be established in at least three VISNs, be comprehensive in scope, and serve a substantial patient population.

Management Efficiencies.—The conferees share the concern of the Senate that estimated management efficiencies are not supported by adequate budget justification details. Therefore, in future budget submissions, the Department is directed to provide more detail on its justification for management efficiencies.

MEDICAL FACILITIES

The conference agreement appropriates $3,297,669,000 for operation, maintenance and security of Medical Facilities as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The agreement also includes language allowing $250,000,000 of the funds to be available until September 30, 2007.

Community Based Outpatient Clinics.—The conferees have received numerous requests for funding specific Community Based Outpatient Clinics (CBOCs) but have retained the practice of not earmarking funds for these facilities. However, the conferees are concerned that the commitments made as a result of the final recommendations of the Capital Asset Realignment for Enhanced Services Commission may not be kept due to a variety of reasons. The conferees direct the Department to report on the status of CBOC's in Bessemer, Alabama; Richmond County (Hamlet), North Carolina; Conroe, Texas; Athens, Tennessee; North Central Washington; Lynchburg, Virginia; and Charlottesville, Virginia, including the reasons for any delay associated with their establishment. In addition, the conferees urge the Department to re-evaluate the need for CBOC's in Capitola, California; Jackson County, Florida; Levittown (Bucks County), Pennsylvania; Sunbury (Northumberland County), Pennsylvania; Bellingham, Washington; and Gladstone, Michigan. The conferees direct the Department to complete this report no later than March 15, 2006 and submit it to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress.

Community Based Outpatient Clinics in Rural Areas.—The conferees remain concerned about veterans' access to healthcare in rural areas. As such, the conferees direct the Secretary to reevaluate Veterans Health Administration Handbook 1006.1 and other guidance and procedures related to planning, activating, staffing, and maintaining Community Based Outpatient Clinics to ensure that rural areas are adequately served. In addition, the Secretary should also review the criteria utilized, including geographic access, number of Priority 1 through 6 veterans, market penetration, cost effectiveness and distance to parent facilities, to determine whether planning criteria disadvantage rural veterans. The Senate had addressed this issue as administrative provision 227.

Beckley, West Virginia.—The conferees agree with language included in the Senate report urging the Department to include sufficient funding in its fiscal year 2007 budget request for construction of a 120-bed nursing home care unit at the Beckley, West Virginia VAMC, consistent with the CARES priority list as described in the Department's February 2005 Five-Year Capital Plan 2005–2010 report.

MEDICAL AND PROSTHETIC RESEARCH

The conference agreement appropriates $412,000,000 for Medical and Prosthetic Research as proposed by the Senate instead of $393,000,000 as proposed by the House. The conferees agree with the Senate provision which designates $15,000,000 for Gulf War Illness research.

Mental Health Research.—The conferees agree that research on mental health diagnosis and treatment should be a priority of the Department of Veterans Affairs. The conferees believe that more research may lead to earlier identification of problems and more effective treatment, thereby reducing the long-term complications and costs associated with mental health issues. The conferees strongly suggest that the Department encourage research in this discipline by establishing a balanced and goal-based research program which takes into consideration the potential benefit of better treatment as well as reducing the cost of care provided by the Department.

Gulf War Illness.—The conferees recognize the unique nature of Gulf War Illness and direct the Department to implement the recommendations of the Research Advisory Committee (RAC) on Gulf War Veterans' Illness in the context of the overall Department research program. One aspect of this effort is the establishment of a research center of excellence devoted to Gulf War Illness research. The conferees are supportive of this effort and direct the Department to report to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress regarding establishment of such a center by March 15, 2006. In complying with the RAC recommendations, the Department is directed to devote at least $15,000,000 to Gulf War Illness research in this fiscal year, and in each of the next four fiscal years. In addition, this initiative shall, at a minimum, begin with a pilot study involving collaborative research between a VA Medical Center and the University of Texas, Southwestern Medical Center, which is presently conducting extensive research on Gulf War Illness.

DEPARTMENTAL ADMINISTRATION

GENERAL OPERATING EXPENSES

The conference agreement appropriates $1,410,520,000 for General Operating Expenses instead of $1,411,827,000 as proposed by the House and $1,418,827,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement provides not less than $1,053,938,000 for the Veterans Benefits Administration, instead of $1,086,938,000 as proposed by the House and $1,093,937,500 as proposed by the Senate. Of the amount provided, $70,000,000 is available for obligation until September 30, 2007, as proposed by the House instead of $71,000,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The agreement also provides for a limitation on the purchase of passenger motor vehicles for use in operations by the Veterans Benefits Administration in Manila, Philippines, as proposed by the House. The Senate had proposed no limitation.

Senate language directing the Department to conduct an information campaign in States with lower disability compensation payments has been moved to administrative provisions, section 228.

The conferees do not agree to the Senate language calling for a report on the cost of replacing non-standardized home glucose monitoring equipment while maintaining existing equipment, depending upon patient choice. The report is not required since the conferees have adopted an administrative provision (section 220) prohibiting the Department from moving forward with a national standardization effort for home glucose monitoring equipment.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SYSTEMS

The conference agreement appropriates $1,213,820,000 for Information Technology Systems as a new account instead of $1,456,821,000 as proposed by the Senate. The House had maintained information technology funding as part of existing accounts, including Medical Administration.

Senate language regarding the HealtheVet program has been moved to administrative provisions, section 229.

Based upon the funding provided, the Department is to provide a comprehensive listing of priority projects for fiscal year 2006 and submit it to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress within 30 days of enactment of this Act.

The conferees note that on October 19, 2005, the Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs approved a federated information technology model for the Department. This model will require significant reorganization of the Department's information technology management and operations and will take a minimum of 12 months to accomplish. The conferees hope that the revised account structure approved in this appropriations Act and the management model approved by the Secretary will go far in improving the efficiency of the Department's information technology systems while giving the Congress better insight into these programs.

The conferees agree that in this first year of a major reorganization of information technology activities, funding will be available for a two-year period instead of one year. This will allow sufficient time for the Department to reorganize and execute its information technology projects in an effective manner.

The conferees agree that the Department is to provide the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress with quarterly reports on the status of each information technology project included in the budget. Each report shall include, but not be limited to, a milestone schedule for each project, each project's scheduled completion date, the amount appropriated for each project, planned and actual obligations of each project with explanations of the variance, and the unobligated balances of each project.

The conferees are in agreement that the amount provided for the CoreFLS project shall be limited to $30,000,000 in fiscal year 2006.

NATIONAL CEMETERY ADMINISTRATION

The conference agreement appropriates $156,447,000 for the National Cemetery Administration as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The conferees agree that the Department is to provide a report to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress on the potential use of land at Fort Ord, California, for a national cemetery. The conferees direct the Secretary and the Undersecretary for Memorial Affairs to examine the unique situation at Fort Ord and report back to the Committees no later than January 16, 2006.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

The conference agreement appropriates $70,174,000 for the Office of Inspector General as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

CONSTRUCTION, MAJOR PROJECTS

The conference agreement appropriates $607,100,000 for Construction, Major Projects as proposed by both the House and the Senate. Within the amount provided, $532,010,000 is for Capital Asset Realignment for Enhanced Services (CARES) projects as proposed by the House instead of $539,800,000 as proposed by the Senate. The agreement also provides $2,500,000 for reimbursement for contract disputes as proposed by the Senate, instead of $8,091,000 as proposed by the House. The conferees have included a modified provision, proposed by the Senate, which restricts the Department's ability to reduce the mission, services or infrastructure, including land, of 18 facilities on the CARES list requiring further study, without prior approval of the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress.

CARES Feasibility Studies.—The conferees are concerned with ongoing delays in the feasibility study for new veteran hospitals. The CARES decision recognized that these hospitals need to be replaced with new hospitals in order to provide veterans with the access and quality of care they need. The feasibility study delays are undermining the Secretary's decision and threaten to unnecessarily delay construction of these new hospitals. The Department is directed to work with the contractor conducting the feasibility studies to ensure that they are completed and the Secretary has made a final decision, by June 1, 2006, on building these new hospitals. The Department will report to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress within 30 days of enactment of this bill on the action it has taken to meet these requirements.

CONSTRUCTION, MINOR PROJECTS

The conference agreement appropriates $198,937,000 for Construction, Minor Projects instead of $208,937,000 as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The conference agreement provides $155,000,000 for construction projects implementing CARES recommendations, instead of $160,000,000 as proposed by both the House and the Senate. The agreement does not include a provision proposed by the Senate which would make additional funding available for CARES activities upon notification and approval by the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress.

GRANTS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF STATE EXTENDED CARE FACILITIES

The conference agreement appropriates $85,000,000 for Grants for Construction of State Extended Care Facilities instead of $25,000,000 as proposed by the House and $104,322,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees agree with the direction of the House calling for the Department to undertake a rigorous and extensive analysis of long-term care needs of veterans and report to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress by March 31, 2006, on the results of that study. This study is to be done with all interested stakeholders participating.

The conferees do not agree with the Senate position restricting grants to any one state to one-third of the amount appropriated in any one fiscal year.

GRANTS FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF STATE VETERANS CEMETERIES

The conference agreement appropriates $32,000,000 for Grants for the Construction of State Veterans Cemeteries, as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

Such transfers are subject to prior Congressional approval. Both the House and the Senate had proposed similar transfer provisions with slightly different language. The conferees would like to emphasize that the transfers permitted by this provision are to be highlighted to the Congress in a timely manner. The conferees note that this new account structure has been in place for three years and sufficient time has passed for the Department to budget properly in this account structure. The conferees do not expect to continue this provision in the future.

The conference agreement includes section 217 allowing for the transfer of funds from General Operating Expenses to the Veterans Housing Benefit Program Fund Program Account for the cost of a nationwide property management contract, as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

This provision was included in both the House and the Senate bills.

In addition, the service portion of the report will contain, at a minimum, the time required for new patients to get their first appointment, the time required for established patients to get their next appointment, and the number of unique veterans and patients being served. Each report should address data for the system total and for each VISN, and for comparison purposes the initial report shall also provide patient data for the preceding eight quarters. The conference agreement modifies Senate section 203.

The conference agreement includes section 223, requiring the Department of Veterans Affairs to submit to the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress, a plan for implementation of the third recommendation contained in Office of Inspector General Report No. 05–00765–137. The language in the conference agreement is a modification of the language included in the Senate bill.

The conference agreement includes section 224, as proposed by the Senate, calling for collaboration between the National Center for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder and the Department of Defense. The provision was not in the House bill.

There was no objection.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING REQUIREMENT OF CLAUSE 6(a) OF RULE XIII WITH RESPECT TO CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS

Mr. GINGREY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 109–306) on the resolution (H. Res. 563) waiving a requirement of clause 6(a) of rule XIII with respect to consideration of certain resolutions reported from the Committee on Rules, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

PLACEMENT OF STATUE OF ROSA PARKS IN NATIONAL STATUARY HALL

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on House Administration be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 4145) to direct the Architect of the Capitol to obtain a statue of Rosa Parks and to place the statue in the United States Capitol in National Statuary Hall, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio to explain the purpose of this legislation.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 4145, a bill to direct the Joint Committee on the Library to obtain a statue of Rosa Parks and to place the statue in the United States Capitol in National Statuary Hall.

Mr. Speaker, Mrs. Rosa Louise Parks is widely recognized as the mother of the civil rights movement. She did the unthinkable on December 1, 1955, when she refused to give up her seat on that bus in segregated Montgomery, Alabama. However, it was this simple act that inspired a young reverend, Martin Luther King, Jr., to lead a 381-day boycott of that city's bus system, thus providing the spark to ignite the civil rights movement.

Before she provided the inspiration for the civil rights movement, she was already working to break down the decades of Jim Crow laws by being an active member in the local Montgomery chapter of the NAACP. In 1992, she explained why she did not give up her seat that day. "The real reason of my not standing up was I felt that I had a right to be treated as any other passenger. We had endured that kind of treatment for too long."

In the aftermath of the boycott, Mrs. Parks and her husband found it difficult to find work and endured a hostile environment in Alabama. Therefore, she and her husband Raymond Parks moved north to Detroit in 1957. A year after my colleague from Michigan, Representative JOHN CONYERS, was first elected to the House, he made the brilliant decision to hire Mrs. Parks as a legislative aide. She worked for him until her retirement in 1988. By then she had founded the Rosa and Raymond Parks Institute for Self-Development. This nonprofit organization is committed to working with Detroit's youth to build leadership skills and inspire them to continue her work on civil and human rights. She spent the remainder of her life's work focusing on this organization.

In 1999, the United States Congress first honored Mrs. Parks in the Rotunda of the Capitol by awarding her with the Congressional Gold Medal, our Nation's highest expression of national appreciation for distinguished achievements and contributions. Just 2 weeks ago, the United States Congress honored Mrs. Parks in the Rotunda again by allowing the Nation to pay its final respects to this great and unique American by allowing her remains to lie in honor in the Rotunda. The United States Congress should eternally recognize the significant contribution she made in advancing civil and human rights in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I can think of no better way than by commissioning a statue of Mrs. Parks and placing it in National Statuary Hall. I want to commend JESSE JACKSON, Jr., of Illinois, MIKE ROGERS of Alabama, and all the Members that have signed on to this important house resolution. I want to thank our ranking member, JUANITA MILLENDER-MCDONALD of California, for her work on this to expedite it and the Speaker of the House and his staff and the staff of House Administration on both sides to make sure that this moved as fast as it could here. It is important, because I think that Rosa Lee Parks did something for every American in this country that day. I think it is something that we all recognize changed the entire nature of the country. I think that placing the statue in Statuary Hall is a great and deserving honor. Again I want to thank JESSE JACKSON, Jr., and MIKE ROGERS for this fine resolution.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I rise to join the chairman in support of this resolution which would allow a statue of the late Rosa Louise Parks to be placed in the U.S. Capitol. I would first like to congratulate my colleague from Illinois, JESSE JACKSON, Jr., and his partner, MIKE ROGERS, for their hard work in building the ground swell of support which this bill has as well as thanks to the chairman of the Committee on House Administration, my colleague, Mr. NEY; the Speaker; and the distinguished Democratic leader, NANCY PELOSI, for working so diligently with me to bring this bill to the floor.

Rosa Louise Parks was a great woman who simply sat down in order for us to stand up here today. I believe that it is only fitting that we honor this great American by placing a life-sized statue of her in the U.S. Capitol for all to see. I urge my colleagues to bestow upon Rosa Louise Parks this honor and include among the collection of statues here in the Capitol the very first statue of an African American woman. Support this resolution in honor of the mother of the civil rights movement, Rosa Louise Parks. Once this bill has been passed by Congress and has been signed into law, I look forward to my role as a member of the Joint Committee on the Library in overseeing the commissioning of the statue. It will be a high honor for me to be part of this effort to further pay tribute and honor to this heroine of mine and to all Americans who is also from my home State of Alabama.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to now yield to the distinguished Democratic leader, the Honorable NANCY PELOSI.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding and I thank her for her leadership on this very important matter. I want to join Congresswoman MILLENDER-MCDONALD in applauding the Speaker for making this accommodation so the legislation could move quickly and be enacted into law and that the statue hopefully soon will be standing in Statuary Hall and so that this law can be passed in time for the 50th anniversary of Rosa Parks' courageous action which occurs in December.

I want to join Congresswoman MILLENDER-MCDONALD in commending the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) as well and our distinguished colleague, Mr. JESSE JACKSON, Jr., who was the author of this legislation. By the time we all got to Rosa Parks funeral, we already had over 100 cosponsors of the bill and this action tonight will deliver on the promise that many of us made at that funeral. I considered it a great privilege to speak there. On behalf of the Democrats and the Republicans in the Congress, I said that we would soon have a promised statue in the Capitol. Congressman JOHN CONYERS of Detroit has been a godfather to all of this effort and he deserves a great deal of recognition and credit for this.

I said at the time that Rosa Parks loved young people. That was her focus. While we were all praising her for her past actions, she was always concerned about the impact on the future for America's children. She was the mother of the modern civil rights movement. She was the mother of modern society because she made such a change in America with her courage. She came to the Capitol to receive the Congressional Gold Medal. It was a proud day for all of us. She brought luster to that award by accepting it. She came here, as was mentioned, to lie in state, the first woman to lie in state in the Rotunda of the Capitol and she will return to the Capitol in a statue to be an ongoing inspiration.

We in Congress think we have a special relationship with Rosa Parks. She will live here with us as a constant inspiration of her courage and inspiration to future generations. When they visit the Capitol they will be sure to see, observe and be inspired by the life, the courage and the incredible contribution of Rosa Parks. I commend all of my colleagues, Congresswoman MILLENDER-MCDONALD, Congressman CONYERS, and Congressman JACKSON for their role in making this possible. It is an honor to be part of this effort. I look forward to the day when all of us can converge on this Capitol for the unveiling of this magnificent statue.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Thank you so much, Madam Leader.

Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the godfather, the Honorable JOHN CONYERS.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from California for yielding to me. This is a proud, especially pleasing evening for me. There has been so much outpouring of affection and respect and understanding of the contribution of Rosa Louise Parks that I am absolutely amazed by it and flattered by it.

Here is a woman who was, true, honored during her lifetime in many unusual ways; but it seems to me, and I think the leaders here on the floor tonight are especially cognizant of them, I know that they were all at one or more of the memorial services. First of all, she had three in three different States, in which Presidents, past Presidents, members of the Federal Government and religious leaders of all faiths came together.

I must say, I have been astounded by the outpouring of affection and recognition for her contributions. I want to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) for the incredible devotion and dedication he has put behind the resolution that we are taking up tonight. I appreciate it so much.

We, of course, appreciate the author, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON), because his father played such a critical role in the development of the civil rights movement and its continuation. He has a story that I never ask him to repeat too much, because I was the one that introduced Reverend Jesse Jackson to Dr. Martin Luther King in Chicago. I had no idea of the momentous consequences that were going to flow from that.

The fact of the matter is that Rosa Parks had no idea that the consequences of her determination to end this form of segregation, which she despised so much, was going to have the consequences that flowed from it, namely, that it would bring Martin Luther King, Jr., into the picture and recreate the modern civil rights movement.

I am very pleased to be here. I wanted to just close by thanking all of the Members of Congress and the other body who came to the memorial service. I see everyone on the floor here attended that service in Detroit at Greater Grace Church, where we had a tremendous turnout, just as there was in Washington D.C., not only at the church, but at the rotunda itself, and even before that in Montgomery, Alabama.

I have been so renewed in my faith in my civil rights struggle by the way the Members of the Congress, through many other legislative acts, and now this one, have responded to this great person who will now take her place in history in a way that I think will keep the memory of her contributions to the civil rights movement alive.

I again express my thanks to the author of this resolution, Mr. JACKSON, and the leaders, both the chairman and the ranking member of the subcommittee.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I would now like to yield to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman very much for yielding. What a special time and a moment. I know that our preference would be to be able to sing praises and to salute Rosa Parks for a very long time on this floor. I think it is important that we have the opportunity to hear from the author of this legislation.

I might share just a few moments of appreciation to you, Madam Ranking Member, for steadfastness and perseverance and the swift hand and the partnership you have with the chairman of this committee, who has, through his own love of history, managed to create more history in this Congress over the last sessions of his tenure as chairman with the hanging of a number of paintings. Now he joins in the celebratory announcement of the placing of the statue of Rosa Parks in the National Statuary Hall of the United States Congress.

Just as a reminder for those of us who grew up just a few short years ago, I can tell you that there was much lacking in the study of African American history in our school books. In fact, I might say to you that through my primary and secondary training, and primary and secondary schools, there was no study of African American history. I might say that there was Black History Month, yes, and there would be little cutout features and stories, maybe; but when I opened the book, I could not find the place that would tell me the story of a Rosa Parks or Martin Luther King or maybe even W.E.B. DuBois.

This legislation today has a special place for all of America. Rosa Parks's history is well known. We know that she first sat down in the back of a bus and then moved to the front of the bus so that others might stand and others might run and others might win. We know that she left Montgomery, Alabama; but I think we should be well aware that she left because there was no place for her there. The chiding, the chastising, the attacks on her life, the threats forced her to leave and go to Detroit, Michigan and what a refuge to find the Honorable JOHN CONYERS where she could find refuge in a job that lasted her until her retirement.

Then the founding of the Raymond and Rosa Parks Institute focused on one issue, and we heard it over and over again in the funeral services, and that was to help children. So it is appropriate that the Honorable JESSE JACKSON and MIKE ROGERS would come to the floor with this great legislation. The history of Jesse Jackson and his family but also his history of himself and being a student of history and recognizing the value of the Constitution and the presence of the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments that freed us from slavery, also gave us equal rights that Rosa Parks had so much of that that she deserved this honor. I might say to you that one of the themes that came out of her funeral was that when there was trouble, there was wrongness, Rosa Parks stood in the way.

I hope that this statue symbolizes the importance of America never forgetting her history. Rosa Parks was long-standing, determined, persistent, a demeanor that lit the world but also set the world on the right path.

We must remember Rosa Parks because, in fact, she brought about the ending of an America that was locked in the shackles of segregation. America was held hostage by discrimination, but it was through her determination and commitment and courageousness that she was able to break the shackles of segregation in a Nation that had found itself locked and forever committed to such a terrible way.

So I am excited about the fact that this legislation is on the floor, but more importantly, it will mean that no child that lives in America will ever have to worry about a history book that does not recount the story of Rosa Parks. For all they need do is come to the United States Congress as they have done over the years in school trips with their parents, with church groups and parishes and synagogues and mosques and simply walk up those steps and walk into Statuary Hall and look up and there at a statue of Rosa Parks and her story will be told.

This is a great day for America. It is a great day for the history of this Nation. It is a great day for our children.

I thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON) for his leadership, and the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. ROGERS), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY), and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD). It is a great day for America.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. It is an honor to see a new generation emerge, one who is walking in the footsteps of his own father. It is great to have the co-author of this legislation here. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON).

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, let me thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) for yielding.

At the outset, I would like to thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT) and his staff, specifically Ted Van Der Meid, the majority leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), the minority leader, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI) and her staff, specifically Jerry Hartz, Lorraine Miller and William Little.

This legislation simply would not be possible without the leadership of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY), the chairman of the House Administration Committee, and his staff, their extraordinary steadfastness and leadership for which we are all grateful, along with the ranking member, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) and her staff, specifically George Shevlin and Matt Pinkus.

I especially want to thank my new friend and co-sponsor, the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. ROGERS) who, along with his staff, worked closely with me and my staff to garner support for this bill. I would like to thank the more than 200 bipartisan co-sponsors of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to rise today to speak on this very important legislation that will honor the life and work of the late Mrs. Rosa Parks by placing a statue of her in National Statuary Hall. Everyone knows the story of how Mrs. Parks helped spark the modern civil rights movement when she refused to give up her seat on a legally segregated bus that fateful day, December 1, 1955, leading to the Montgomery bus boycott and the emergence of Martin Luther King, Jr.

From the beginning Mrs. Parks led a life dedicated to social change, becoming an active member of the Montgomery, Alabama chapter of the NAACP which in the 1940s and 1950s was considered a dangerous organization. It could cost you your job and even your life.

In 1943, along with State president of the NAACP, she mobilized a historic voter registration drive in Montgomery and was later elected NAACP chapter secretary. Mrs. Parks was a courageous woman who possessed the firm and quiet strength necessary to challenge injustice.

Following the 1954 Brown Supreme Court decision which provided equal protection under the law's legal framework, her refusal to give up her seat eventually led to the 1964 Civil Rights Act, the 1965 Voting Rights Act, the 1968 Open Housing Act, all of which helped make America a better Nation.

Rosa Parks remained a committed activist until the end of her life. In the 1980s, she worked in support of the South African anti-apartheid movement, and in Detroit in 1997 she founded the Rosa and Raymond Parks Institute for Self-Development, a career counseling center for African American youth.

With dignity, with grace and courage Rosa Parks inspired generations and helped to make the world a more just and compassionate place. In life she received the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1996 and the Congressional Gold Medal in 1999, the highest honors our Nation bestows on civilians.

This placing of a Rosa Parks statue in National Statuary Hall is a testament to the fact that the long arc of history bends towards freedom, justice and equality.

When Statuary Hall was created by law in 1864, African Americans could not be citizens of the United States. Indeed, the term "African Americans" did not exist. Under that law it was impossible for us to be considered favorite sons and favorite daughters of States. When Rosa Parks takes her place in Statuary Hall, she takes with her Frederick Douglass. She takes with her the United States coloreds troops. She takes with her Harriet Tubman and Sojourner Truth. She takes them there.

She takes with her countless, nameless people of African descent, who from slavery to today, sacrificed for an America many would never live to see.

As Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., who half statue is not Statuary Hall would implore us, Now is the time.

Let me once again, Mr. Speaker, close by thanking the many people who have worked so hard on a bipartisan basis to bring this bill to the floor. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD), House leadership, the minority leader, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER). Their staffs, Jerry Hartz, Lorraine Miller, William Little. The staff of the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD), specifically George Shevlin and Matt Pinkus. And also in his absence, the distinguished gentleman from Alabama (Mr. ROGERS), who, along with his staff, made it very possible for this bill to be on the floor today.

I would also like to thank Senator KERRY and his staff for introducing the companion bill in the other body and Senators McConnell and Dodd for their leadership on this important issue.

From my staff, Mr. Charles Dujon and Sandi Pessin who have labored late into the night to make the co-sponsors of this legislation comfortable with the language that places Mrs. Parks in National Statuary Hall. Again, I thank my colleagues for their support. I urge Members to join me in honoring this extraordinary woman and voting yes on this important legislation.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, this shows that the future generations will have hope now in this young Member of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I rise in strong support of this bill to honor an individual who chose to assert her civil rights and her human rights at a critical moment in our history and by doing so she has changed America forever.

I would like to thank my chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) for his devotion, his steadfastness, his dedication, and his commitment to all people. I would like to thank all of those, the leadership of the House on both sides, for ushering this bill to the floor.

Rosa Louise Parks richly deserves this honor.

Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to say again thank you to everyone, George Shevlin, Paul Vinovich of our staff, Ted Van Der Meid and also to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON) and the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. ROGERS) for doing this and, of course, to our ranking member.

We have had a lot of firsts recently in the short tenure of our ranking member. We have had the African American Museum. We have had the portrait of Mr. Ray, and we are about to embark on some other portraits, and also the first female Member and the first Hispanic Member. I think it is commendable to the House to look at the great diversity of our country.

Another thank you tonight. Thank you to Rosa Parks for what she did for this Nation.

I just want to close my comments with when I studied African American history. I can remember a quote that I had learned and I used it for years in many events and occasions because it fits in with just about anything you do, whether you are a soldier fighting or somebody struggling for civil rights. It is by Langston Hughes, a great African American poet and author, who said, "Dream your dreams but be willing to pay the sacrifice to make them come true."

Rosa Parks was a little woman with a big ball of thunder that day and courage, and she dreamed her dream of an America that cared about all its people in an equal way, and she paid a sacrifice to make that dream come true.

Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I would like to recognize the life and legacy of Rosa Lee Parks, whose refusal to give up her bus seat to a white man sparked the modern civil rights movement. She was 92 at the time of her death.

In tribute to Mrs. Parks, I would like to submit the following excerpt from the Washington Post Article, "Bus Ride Shook a Nation's Conscience," written by Patricia Sullivan on Tuesday, October 25, 2005.

"Rosa was a true giant of the civil rights movement," said U.S. Representative JOHN CONYERS Jr. (D–Mich.), in whose office Parks worked for more than 20 years. "There are very few people who can say their actions and conduct changed the face of the nation, and Rosa Parks is one of those individuals."

Parks said that she didn't fully realize what she was starting when she decided not to move on that December 1, 1955, evening in Montgomery, AL. It was a simple refusal, but her arrest and the resulting protests began the complex cultural struggle to legally guarantee equal rights to Americans of all races.

Within days, her arrest sparked a 380-day bus boycott, which led to a U.S. Supreme Court decision that desegregated her city's public transportation. Her arrest also triggered mass demonstrations, made the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. famous, and transformed schools, workplaces and housing.

Hers was "an individual expression of a timeless longing for human dignity and freedom," King said in his book "Stride Toward Freedom."

"She was planted there by her personal sense of dignity and self-respect. She was anchored to that seat by the accumulated indignities of days gone and the boundless aspirations of generations yet unborn."

She was the perfect test-case plaintiff, a fact that activists realized only after she had been arrested. Hardworking, polite and morally upright, Parks had long seethed over the everyday indignities of segregation, from the menial rules of bus seating and store entrances to the mortal societal endorsement of lynching and imprisonment.

She was an activist already, secretary of the local chapter of the NAACP. A member of the African Methodist Episcopal Church all her life, Parks admired the self-help philosophy of Booker T. Washington—to a point. But even as a child, she thought accommodating segregation was the wrong philosophy. She knew that in the previous year, two other women had been arrested for the same offense, but neither was deemed right to handle the role that was sure to become one of the most controversial of the century.

But it was as if Parks was born to the role. Rosa McCauley was born February. 4, 1913, in Tuskegee, AL, the home of Booker T. Washington's renowned Tuskegee Institute, which drew many African American intelligentsia. She was the daughter of a carpenter and a teacher, was small for her age, had poor health and suffered chronic tonsillitis. Still a child when her parents separated, she moved with her mother to Pine Level, AL., and grew up in an extended family that included her maternal grandparents.

Her mother taught Parks at home until she was 11, when she was enrolled in the Industrial School for Girls in Montgomery, where her aunt lived. Segregation was enforced, often violently. As an adult, she recalled watching her grandfather guard the front door with a shotgun as the Ku Klux Klan paraded down their road. Her younger brother, Sylvester, a decorated war hero in World War II, returned to a South that regarded uniformed veterans of color as "uppity" and demonstrated its disdain with beatings.

She married barber Raymond Parks in 1932 at her mother's house. They shared a passion for civil rights; her husband was an early defender of the Scottsboro Boys, a group of young African Americans whom rights advocates asserted were falsely accused of raping two white women.

Mr. Speaker, I take great pride in commending Mrs. Rosa Lee Parks for her outstanding and historical contributions to the State of Alabama, the State of Michigan, the Civil Rights Movement, and national politics.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KUHL of New York). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

PAKISTAN EARTHQUAKE RELIEF

(Mr. PAYNE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak about the recent 7.6 magnitude earthquake that struck Pakistan, India, and Afghanistan on October 8, 2005, and the Bush administration's response to that crisis.

Mr. Speaker, the devastation wrought by the natural disaster has caused an unimaginable humanitarian crisis, especially in Pakistan where approximately 90,000 people have lost their lives so far, and that number is expected to rise. In addition, over 3 million people have been left homeless.

Given the magnitude, one would expect the Bush administration to have a response with a pledge of aid that matched the severity of the situation, especially given our current efforts to win the hearts and minds of that region of the world. What have we done so far? A little over $50 million. That is not an adequate response, especially since we spend almost $6 billion a month on the war on Iraq. We know that Pakistan has joined us in fighting al Qaeda.

I think that we should actually have more of a concern for those who have joined us in this war on terror. I would like to add a March 17, 2003, article for the RECORD, where the U.S. forced inspectors out of Iraq, which could have proved that there were no weapons of mass destruction.

[From USA Today, Mar. 17, 2003]

U.S. ADVISES WEAPONS INSPECTORS TO LEAVE IRAQ

VIENNA, AUSTRIA.—In the clearest sign yet that war with Iraq is imminent, the United States has advised U.N. weapons inspectors to begin pulling out of Baghdad, the U.N. nuclear agency chief said Monday.

Mohamed ElBaradei, head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, said the recommendation was given late Sunday night both to his Vienna-based agency hunting for atomic weaponry and to the New York-based teams looking for biological and chemical weapons.

"Late last night . . . I was advised by the U.S. government to pull out our inspectors from Baghdad," ElBaradei told the IAEA's board of governors. He said U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan and the Security Council were informed and that the council would take up the issue later Monday.

U.N. officials have said the inspectors and support staff still in Iraq could be evacuated in as little as 48 hours.

No one has yet given the order for the inspectors to begin pulling out, and they were working on Monday. Most of the teams' helicopters have left Iraq because their insurance was canceled, chief U.N. inspector Hans Blix said, and the personnel level was low because of a scheduled rotation home.

IAEA spokeswoman Melissa Fleming said the nuclear agency would wait for Security Council guidance later Monday before deciding whether to pull out its inspectors.

The teams, which returned to Iraq on Nov. 27 after a nearly four-year absence, drew up contingency plans to evacuate even before their redeployment.

"A lot depends on the Iraqis," a senior U.N. inspector told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity. "If they let us use aircraft to get out, we could be gone in 48 hours or even less. If they won't let us fly out, we would have to drive to a border, and that could mean an eight-hour journey across hot desert. It would take longer, but we would get out."

Inspectors have experience in getting out of Iraq in a hurry: In December 1998, they pulled out on the eve of U.S.-British airstrikes amid allegations that Baghdad was not cooperating with the teams.

There have been some concerns that the Iraqis might hold the inspectors as human shields in case of a conflict. But Iraq's foreign minister appeared to play down those fears in a live television interview on the al-Arabiya Arabic satellite channel Sunday night.

"The inspectors came by a decision of the Security Council, which decides on their departure," Naji Sabri said.

ElBaradei told the nuclear agency's 35-nation governing board Monday that he was worried about the safety of the teams, yet still held out hope that war could be averted.

"Naturally the safety of our staff remains our primary consideration at this difficult time," he said. "I earnestly hope—even at this late hour—that a peaceful resolution of the issue can be achieved, and that the world can be spared a war."

ElBaradei, who has been monitoring the situation day to day, also confirmed that he and Blix had received an invitation from Baghdad "to visit Iraq with a view toward accelerating the implementation of our respective mandates." He did not say whether he or Blix had accepted.

"I should note that in recent weeks, possibly as a result of increasing pressure by the international community, Iraq has been more forthcoming in its cooperation with the IAEA," he said, adding that inspectors still have found no evidence that Saddam Hussein has revived his nuclear program.

But with the United States, Britain and Spain making clear that Monday would be the final day for diplomatic efforts to avert a conflict, it appeared that the inspectors were running out of time and could begin withdrawing at any moment.

In other signs that war could be imminent, the U.S. State Department on Sunday night ordered nonessential personnel and all family members to leave Israel, Kuwait and Syria in a precautionary move.

Germany closed its embassy in Baghdad on Monday after calling on its citizens to leave Iraq "immediately," and Britain advised all its citizens except diplomatic staff to leave Kuwait as soon as possible, citing a potential threat from war in neighboring Iraq.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3058), "making appropriations for the Departments of Transportation, Treasury, and Housing and Urban Development, the Judiciary, District of Columbia, and independent agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2006, and for other purposes", submits the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

This legislation intent in the House and Senate versions in H.R. 3058 is set forth in the accompanying House report (H. Rept. 109–153) and the accompanying Senate report (S. Rept. 109–109).

The Senate amendment deleted the entire House bill after the enacting clause and inserted the Senate bill. The conference agreement includes a revised bill.

The language and allocations set forth in the House and Senate reports should be complied with unless specifically addressed to the contrary in the conference report and the statement of the managers. Report language included by the House which is not changed by the report of the Senate or this statement of managers and Senate report language which is not changed by this statement of managers is approved by the committee of conference. The statement of the managers, while repeating some report language for emphasis, does not intend to negate the language referred to above unless expressly provided herein. In cases where the House or the Senate has directed the submission of a report, such report is to be submitted to both House and Senate Committees on Appropriations.

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conference agreement provides $84,900,000 for the salaries and expenses of the office of the secretary instead of $67,824,000 as proposed by the House and $86,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. As proposed by both the House and the Senate, bill language is included that specifies funding by office. The conference agreement is as follows:

Immediate office of the Deputy Secretary	698,000
Office of the General Counsel	15,183,000
Office of the Under Secretary for Transportation Policy	11,650,000
Office of the Assistant Secretary for Budget and Programs	8,485,000
Office of the Assistant Secretary for Governmental Affairs	2,293,000

Office of the Chief Information Officer	11,895,000
Office of Emergency Transportation	3,120,000

The conference agreement retains provisions proposed by both the House and the Senate limiting transfers among each office to no more than 5 percent and requiring that any transfer greater than 5 percent must be submitted for approval to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations. Bill language is also included which allows the Department to spend up to $60,000 within the funds provided for official reception and representation expenses.

The conference agreement retains bill language proposed by the House prohibiting funds from being used for the position of Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs. The conference agreement also retains bill language proposed by both the House and the Senate that allows up to $2,500,000 in user fees to be credited to salaries and expenses.

The conferees direct the Department to notify the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations no less than three full business days before any grant totaling $1,000,000 is announced and further clarify that such notifications shall be based on the grants full-year funding level, not just the incremental amount being released.

The conferees reiterate the need for better budget materials from the Department in general and direct the Department to provide additional details in the fiscal year 2007 budget justification materials as instructed in both the House and Senate reports.

The conferees direct the Secretary to submit an operating plan for fiscal year 2006 for the entire Department as described in the House report for approval by the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations within 60 days of enactment of this Act.

Further, the Assistant Secretary for Budget and Programs shall submit a report to both the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations at the beginning of each fiscal quarter on the status of all outstanding reports and reporting requirements, including the deadlines established by Congress for each report and an estimated date for delivery, as directed by the Senate. The Assistant Secretary for Budget and Programs is also directed to submit a quarterly report detailing all funding transfers made between offices within the office of the secretary (OST) pursuant to transfer authority in OST salaries and expenses.

The conferees direct the Secretary to immediately resume collecting, processing, and disseminating the motor carrier financial and operating statistics survey (Form M data), as was in effect in the Department prior to October 1, 2004, and to provide a report within 30 days of enactment of this Act to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations that identifies the agency responsible for the survey and the funds to be allocated to the survey in fiscal year 2006.

The conferees direct that up to $500,000 of the funds provided to the Office of the Under Secretary of Transportation for Policy be used for an independent forensic audit of expenses and payments made under the essential air service (EAS) program, as directed by the Senate. The conference agreement does not provide funds for an EAS audit to be conducted by the National Academy of Public Administration, as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees deny the funding requested by the Department for contractor support for oversight of credit programs. Further, the conferees direct the Assistant Secretary for Budget and Programs to submit a report detailing initiatives to improve the management and reduce the risk of the Department's credit programs and to provide this report to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations not later than March 1, 2006, as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees direct the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), to establish procedures not less than 60 days after the enactment of this Act to ensure that proper precautions are taken by airports and air carriers to recognize and prevent the spread of avian flu, as directed by the Senate.

The provision relating to Love Field, Texas, that was proposed by the Senate is addressed in the Title I administrative provisions.

The conferees once again urge the Department and the FAA to make it their highest priority to consider allocating permanent slots at LaGuardia Airport, as allowable under 49 U.S.C. 41716(b), to allow the communities of Akron-Canton, Ohio, and Newport News-Williamsburg, Virginia, to each have permanent third roundtrips to LaGuardia with stage III aircraft with no less than 110 and no more than 125 seats.

The conference agreement provides $3,000,000 for minority business outreach as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

PAYMENTS TO AIR CARRIERS

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement provides $60,000,000 for payments to air carriers to be derived from the trust fund as proposed by the Senate, instead of $54,000,000 as proposed by the House. In addition to these funds, the program will receive $50,000,000 in mandatory spending pursuant to the Federal Aviation Authorization Act of 1996, resulting in a program budget of $110,000,000.

The conference agreement includes bill language, as proposed by the House, which allows the secretary to take into consideration the subsidy requirements of carriers when selecting between carriers competing to provide service to a community.

Should the total amount of overflight fees collected not be sufficient to meet all the funding needs of the program in the fiscal year, then the secretary is authorized to transfer funds from the available balances of any program appropriated to, or directly administered by the office of the secretary to the essential air service program. The conferees direct the office of the secretary to consult with the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations if such a transfer is necessary and identify the source of the funds of said transfer subject to normal reprogramming guidelines.

The provisions relating to the transfer of funds to and from the FAA for the EAS program, as proposed by the House, are addressed in the FAA administrative provisions, as proposed by the Senate.

Of the total amount provided, $5,541,000,000 is to be derived from the airport and airway trust fund instead of $4,986,000,000 as proposed by the House and $5,686,500,000 proposed by the Senate. Funds are distributed in the bill by budget activity, as proposed by the Senate.

Contract tower cost-sharing.—The bill specifies $7,500,000 for continuation of the contract tower cost-sharing program as proposed by the House and Senate.

Transfers between budget activities.—The conference agreement retains Senate language that allows transfers of no greater than two percent from any budget activity, excluding aviation regulation and certification, to any budget activity. Transfers of more than two percent are subject to reprogramming procedures contained in this Act.

Flight service station transition costs.—The conference agreement provides an additional $150,000,000 for flight service station transition costs as proposed by the Senate, instead of $91,000,000 as proposed by the House.

The following table compares the conference agreement to the President's budget request and the levels proposed in the House and Senate bills by budget activity:

National airspace redesign.—The conference agreement includes $2,000,000 and language proposed by the Senate regarding the use of funds for the national airspace redesign project in the New York/New Jersey metropolitan area. The conferees agree to House language that no funds made available under this appropriation may be used to prepare the Environmental Impact Statement for the redesign of the New York/New Jersey/Philadelphia regional airspace, or to conduct any work as part of the review of the redesign project conducted under the National Environmental Policy Act and related laws, as long as the FAA fails to consider noise mitigation. Further, none of the funds made available for this purpose shall be reprogrammed by the FAA to other activities, including airspace redesign not directly related to New York, New Jersey, and Philadelphia airspace redesign.

Safety inspectors.—The conferees provide a total of $683,845,000 for flight standards safety inspectors and $162,271,000 for aircraft certification services to address staffing reductions. This funding level represents an increase over the budget request of $8,000,000 for flight standards safety inspectors and $4,000,000 for aircraft certification services.

The conference agreement modifies reporting requirements proposed by the House and Senate regarding safety inspector staffing in the offices of flight standards and aircraft certification, and directs FAA to submit semi-annual reports in fiscal year 2006 identifying baseline staffing levels, staffing goals, number of new hires on board, number of new hires in the pipeline, and the use of funds provided for these offices.

Information services.—The conference agreement provides $36,112,000 for information services, as proposed by the Senate, and modifies Senate language directing that no funds be transferred to another agency in support of the e-gov initiative without prior notification of the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations.

On-airport mobile refuelers.—The conferees recommend that the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) work with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to establish reasonable methods of compliance for the EPA's Spill Prevention Control and Countermeasure (SPCC) requirements as they relate to on-airport mobile refuelers.

On-airport mobile refueling vehicles already incorporate significant spill prevention protections. The design of refuelers is regulated by DOT and incorporates numerous safety systems, including emergency cut-off switches, interlock systems, and over-fill prevention devices for minimizing the potential for spills. In addition, the FAA extensively regulates the operations of mobile refuelers and other ground vehicles at airports to ensure safe operations. Moreover, mobile refueler operations at airports are subject to EPA regulations governing stormwater discharges, and airports have response plans in place to address potential spills. The conferees urge DOT and EPA to work together to ensure that the regulations do not impose unreasonable cost burdens on the operators of the refueling vehicles.

Non-precision GPS approaches.—The conference agreement includes up to $5,000,000 for development of additional approaches and flight procedures at non-part 139 certified airports.

Air charter safety management system.—The conference agreement provides $1,000,000 for the government and industry cooperative program to improve safety for America's Part 135 on-demand air taxi industry. This program provides proactive tools for industry participants to prevent accidents and to improve and measure safety management by Part 135 on-demand air carriers.

Department of Defense schools.—FAA organizations have traditionally staffed their overseas facilities with employees who have return rights to the U.S. mainland, making their dependents qualified to attend DOD schools. In 2004, FAA reviewed the eligibility of FAA employees in Puerto Rico and determined that many were ineligible to attend these schools. The majority of employees in Puerto Rico are local hires or employees that have stayed so long that they have forfeited their return rights.

The FAA worked with DOD and its employees to allow the dependents of ineligible employees to enroll for one more year under a "good cause" continuation for the 2004-2005 school year. After FAA's determination in June 2004, another "good cause" extension was requested from DOD for the 2005-2006 school year. The conferees understand that the second extension was granted to provide adequate time to plan for the 2007 school year. FAA should continue to provide DOD school access for the dependents of eligible employees, consistent with its policies. Further, the conferees direct that the FAA provide a report to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations by March 15, 2006 detailing the justification for its determination, assistance it provided to employees determined as ineligible, and the tuition expenses that are provided for all FAA dependents living outside of the U.S.

The conference agreement includes $2,540,000,000 instead of $3,053,000,000 as proposed by the House and $2,448,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. Of the total amount available, $429,210,500 is available until September 30, 2006, and $2,110,789,500 is available until September 30, 2008. The conference agreement includes language proposed by both the House and Senate directing FAA to transmit a detailed five-year capital investment plan to Congress with its fiscal year 2007 budget submission.

Advanced technology development and prototyping.—The conference agreement includes $68,210,000 for advanced technology development and prototyping instead of $41,460,000 as proposed by the House and $75,960,000 as proposed by the Senate. The following table compares the conference agreement to the House and Senate bills by budget activity:

Airport pavement research.—Of the funds provided, $4,000,000 is for the airfield improvement program authorized under section 905 of Public Law 106–181.

Safe Flight 21.—The conference agreement includes $42,950,000 for Safe Flight 21, of which $10,000,000 is to augment ADS–B funding. The conferees direct the FAA to submit a spend plan to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations within 30 days of enactment.

En route automation.—The conference agreement provides $333,550,000 for en route automation. FAA is given the discretion to allocate the reduction of $8,000,000 among projects within this program.

Airport surface detection equipment—Model X (ASDE–X).—The conference agreement provides $30,200,000 for ASDE—X, instead of $27,200,000 proposed by both the House and Senate. The conferees note that the ASDE–X deployment schedule has slipped by two years. Although the FAA recently announced deployment at 15 major airports, the conferees remain concerned about runway incursions and provide an additional $3,000,000 to expedite installation and deployment of ASDE–X equipment.

Airport traffic control tower TRACON facilities.—The conferees provide $44,233,830, instead of $51,469,000 as proposed by the House and Senate. The reduction is due to the prohibition of ARAC consolidation into the Oklahoma City TRACON.

Houston Area Air Traffic System (HAATS).—The conference agreement provides $10,200,000 for the HAATS.

DOD/FAA facilities transfer.—The conference agreement includes $2,000,000 to continue the FAA contribution for operation of the airport radar approach control at Lawton/Fort Sill Regional Airport in Oklahoma.

Integrated control and monitoring system (ICMS).—The conference agreement includes $4,000,000 for ICMS. Although the system has been operating successfully at six airports, the FAA is conducting an operational safety assessment of ICMS. The conferees concur with the FAA's decision to spend no more than $500,000 on this assessment, and the FAA used a portion of the fiscal year 2005 appropriation for this purpose. The conferees expect FAA to obligate the funding within three months of enactment of this Act.

Terminal automation modernization replacement (TAMR).—The conference agreement provides $20,000,000 for modernization of display systems replacement at two terminal radar approach control facilities and their associated air traffic control towers. The funding level is consistent with the budget request; however, the conference agreement provides funds under TAMR instead of the terminal automation program. The conferees note that on November 9, 2005, FAA requested interested companies with automation systems in the NAS for descriptions of their systems. The notice includes four critical sites: Chicago, Illinois; Denver, Colorado; St. Louis, Missouri; and Minneapolis—St. Paul, Minnesota, with an expected award date of January 2007. The sites were identified by the FAA as critical to upgrade. The conferees are concerned that the competition for the replacement of these four aging systems, which is only being offered to a limited number of vendors, is expected to take up to 15 months. The conferees encourage FAA to expedite consideration of proposals and make an award or awards, as the case may be, as soon as possible. In order to best address the emergency needs of each site in the most timely and efficient manner, the FAA is encouraged to independently evaluate bids based on the unique circumstances and situations at each location. Furthermore, the conferees note that if the FAA determines that air traffic control equipment at other facilities poses a critical safety risk, the conferees would consider and promptly respond to a request to reprogram funds to accommodate additional facilities if safety critical arise.

Terminal automation program.—The conference agreement provides $24,300,000 for the terminal automation program instead of $64,300,000 as proposed by the House and $39,300,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement transferred $20,000,000 provided by both the House and Senate to TAMR to reflect that FAA will complete the display modernization. The funding level includes a total of $22,000,000 to continue to sustain software at the busiest facilities in the NAS.

Terminal air traffic control facilities replacement.—The conference agreement provides $121,800,000 for this program. Funds shall be distributed as follows:

Spokane Tower.—The conferees include $3,000,000 for the demolition or relocation of seven buildings that are in the line-of-sight of the new air traffic control tower currently under construction. The conferees also understand that the need to build additional duct banks and other costs will require additional resources in fiscal year 2006 in order for the tower to be commissioned on August 27, 2007. The conferees direct the FAA to utilize unobligated balances within the tower program to fully cover these additional costs.

Wide area augmentation system (WAAS).—The conferees provide $93,000,000 for WAAS, instead of $110,000,000 as proposed in the House and $98,500,000 as proposed by the Senate. Of the funds provided, no less than $5,000,000 is for approaches at airports without an existing ILS. The conferees note that an additional $10,000,000 was provided for WAAS in a reprogramming letter dated September 20, 2005.

Chicago O'Hare.—The conferees remain concerned that congestion and delays at major hubs impact the national airways system. Improving overall efficiency through investment in technology and procedures will increase capacity while long-term solutions to airport congestion continue to be developed. The conferees support and encourage the FAA to make the following improvements to operations at O'Hare International Airport: (1) expeditiously install a multilateration system and accelerate deployment of the ASDE–X radar system to improve ground handling of aircraft and (2) redesign the descent corridor airspace and implement new RNAV arrivals and idle descents.

Detroit Metro Airport, Michigan.—Detroit Metro Airport was identified as a candidate airport where FAA should consider installation of the precision runway monitor (PRM) system to improve airport capacity in inclement weather conditions. Since then, FAA has begun to limit PRM deployment in favor of multilateration technology. Since the need for capacity improvements at Detroit Metro remains valid and FAA is moving away from PRM deployments, the conferees provide $6,000,000 to develop and implement multilateration technology at this airport.

Approach lighting system improvement program.—The conference agreement provides $9,000,000 for the approach lighting system improvement program. Of the amount provided, $3,000,000 is to continue the program of providing lighting systems at rural airfields throughout Alaska, and $1,000,000 is for a medium-intensity approach lighting system replacement (MALSR) for Lee Gilmer Airport in Gainesville, Georgia. The conferees do not include House language directing $5,000,000 to procure MALSR equipment, as a significant number of procured systems have not been installed. Further, the conference agreement includes language proposed by the Senate regarding issuing new MALSR specifications.

Instrument landing system establishment.—The conference agreement provides $19,850,000 for the instrument landing system establishment. Funds shall be distributed as follows:

Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood, Florida	Install previously procured approach lighting system (runway 31)	$1,800,000
Long Beach, California	Install previously procured approach lighting system (runway 25R)	2,000,000
Hartsfield-Jackson International, Georgia	Acquire and install replacement LPDME	400,000
Keokuk Municipal, Iowa	Install previously acquired glide scope	550,000

Leesburg Executive Airport, Virginia	Installation of previously acquired ILS	2,000,000
Ozark Regional Airport, Arkansas	Final phase of ILS installation	577,000

In addition, the conference agreement includes $4,400,000 for the cost sharing initiative and $600,000 for the FAA to conduct site surveys to determine costs and feasibility for installing instrument landing systems at the following airports: Reno/Tahoe International, Nevada; University Park, Pennsylvania; Aiken Municipal, South Carolina; Wendover, Utah; Menomonie Municipal—Score Field, Wisconsin; and Taylor County, Wisconsin.

Frequency and spectrum engineering.—The conference agreement includes $8,600,000 for frequency and spectrum engineering, of which $2,500,000 is for the national airspace interference detection location and mitigation project.

Center for advanced systems development (CAASD).—The conference agreement provides $77,800,000 for CAASD. The conferees encourage the use of funds to support of simulations and technical analysis to ensure implementation of constant descent arrivals using aircraft based spacing and merging.

Transponder landing system.—The conference agreement does not provide funds for this program.

RESEARCH, ENGINEERING AND DEVELOPMENT

The conference agreement provides $138,000,000 for research, engineering, and development instead of $130,000,000 as proposed by the House and $134,500,000 as proposed by the Senate. The following table compares the conference agreement to the House and Senate bills by budget activity:

GRANTS-IN-AID FOR AIRPORTS

The conference agreement includes a liquidating cash appropriation of $3,399,000,000 instead of $3,600,000,000 as proposed by the House, and $3,390,000,000 as proposed by the Senate.

Obligation limitation.—The conferees agree to an obligation limitation of $3,550,000,000 for the "Grants-in-aid for airports" program, instead of $3,600,000,000 as proposed by the House and $3,500,000,000 as proposed by the Senate.

Administration.—The conference agreement includes a limitation on administrative expenses of $71,096,000 as proposed by the Senate.

Small community air service development program.—The bill includes $10,000,000 under the obligation limitation to continue the small community air service development program instead of $20,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. The House had no similar funding.

Airport cooperative research program.—The bill includes $10,000,000 under the obligation limitation for the airport cooperative research program, as proposed by the House. The Senate provided funds under the facilities and equipment appropriation.

High priority projects.— Of the funds covered by the obligation limitation in this bill, the conferees direct FAA to provide not less than the following funding levels, out of available resources, for the following projects. The conferees agree that state apportionment funds may be construed as discretionary funds for the purposes of implementing this provision. To the maximum extent possible, the administrator should work to ensure that airport sponsors for these projects first use available entitlement funds to finance the projects. However, the FAA should not require sponsors to apply carryover entitlements to discretionary projects funded in the coming year, but only those entitlements applicable to the fiscal year 2006 obligation limitation. The conferees further direct that the specific funding allocated below shall not diminish or prejudice the application of a specific airport or geographic region to receive other AIP discretionary grants or multiyear letters of intent.

(RESCISSION OF CONTRACT AUTHORIZATION)

The conference agreement includes a rescission of contract authority of $1,032,000,000 instead of $469,000,000 proposed by the House and $1,174,000,000 as proposed by the Senate.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS—FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION

Section 101 retains a provision authorizing airports to transfer instrument landing systems and other equipment purchased with federal airport grants to the FAA, subject to certain conditions, as proposed by the House and Senate.

Section 102 allows 375 technical staff-years at the Center for Advanced Aviation Systems Development as proposed by the House and Senate.

Section 103 prohibits funds for adopting guidelines or regulations requiring airport sponsors to provide FAA "without cost" building maintenance, or space as proposed by the House and Senate.

Section 104 retains a Senate provision that permits reimbursement for fees collected and credited under 49 USC 45303. The House bill contained no similar provision.

Section 105 retains a provision proposed in the Senate bill that allows reimbursement of funds for providing technical assistance to foreign aviation authorities to be credited to the Operations account. The House bill contained no similar provision.

Section 106 retains a provision proposed by the House prohibiting funds to change weight restrictions or prior permission rules at Teterboro Airport in New Jersey. The Senate bill contained no similar provision.

Section 107 retains a provision proposed by the House prohibiting funds for engineering work related to an additional runway at Louis Armstrong New Orleans International Airport in Louisiana. The Senate bill contained no similar provision.

Section 108 includes a provision as proposed by the House and modifies a Senate provision concerning the continuation and mandatory expansion of the war risk insurance program. The conference agreement extends the existing terms and conditions of the program for one year, until December 31, 2006. The conferees note that, under the provisions of section 106 of Public Law 108–176, the Secretary continues to have the authority to extend war risk insurance to aircraft manufacturers at his discretion. The Senate provision extending the virtual primary airport subsidies is addressed under section 109.

Section 109 modifies a Senate provision regarding extending virtual primary airport subsidies for fiscal year 2006. It is the conferees intent that this will be the last extension for such subsidies.

FEDERAL HIGHWAY ADMINISTRATION

LIMITATION ON ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

The conference agreement limits administrative expenses of the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) to $364,638,000, as proposed by the Senate instead of $359,529,000 as proposed by the House. This amount assumes funding for six additional full-time equivalent staff years (FTES) to help oversee FHWA major projects, for an overall agency total of 2,430 FTES. The conferees recommend the following adjustment to the budget request by program and activity:

Administrative funding in support of oversight and stewardship activities	$4,000,000

The conferees direct FHWA to submit with the fiscal year 2007 budget justification a report describing the cost, schedule, funding, and technical status of all major projects and an explanation of significant risks to costs, schedules, funding or technical issues.

FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAYS

(HIGHWAY TRUST FUND)

The conference agreement limits obligations for the federal-aid highways program to $36,032,343,903 instead of $36,287,100,000 as proposed by the House and $40,194,259,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement includes bill language, as proposed by the House, which allows the Secretary to charge and collect fees from the applicant for a direct loan, guaranteed loan, or line of credit to cover the cost of the financial and legal analyses performed on behalf of the Department as authorized under section 605(b) of title 23, United States Code. The fees so collected are not subject to any obligation limitation or the limitation on administrative expenses set for the infrastructure finance program under section 608 of title 23, United States Code.

The conferees recognize the importance of permitting States to use transportation enhancement funds for historic preservation. The conferees direct the FHWA to continue approving the use of transportation enhancement funds for the preservation or restoration of historic courthouses when there is a linkage to transportation, consistent with past practices.

LIMITATION ON TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH

The conference agreement includes a general limitation on transportation research of $429,800,000 instead of $485,000,000 as proposed by the House and $408,491,420 as proposed by the Senate. Within this level, the conference agreement includes funding for the following activities:

Surface transportation research, development, deployment program	$196,400,000
Training and education program	26,700,000
Bureau of Transportation Statistics	27,000,000
University transportation research	69,700,000

BUREAU OF TRANSPORTATION STATISTICS

Under the obligation limitation of the FHWA and within the sublimitation for transportation research, the conference agreement provides $27,000,000 for the Bureau of Transportation Statistics (BTS). Since the passage of the Norman Y. Mineta Research and Special Programs Improvement Act, Public Law 108–426, on November 30, 2004, BTS is a part of the Research and Innovative Technology Administration (RITA) within the Department. Accordingly, additional information regarding BTS is included in the RITA section of this report.

(LIQUIDATION OF CONTRACT AUTHORIZATION)

(HIGHWAY TRUST FUND)

The conference agreement provides a liquidating cash appropriation of $36,032,343,903 to pay the outstanding obligations of the various highway programs at levels provided in this Act and prior appropriations Acts, instead of $36,000,000,000 as proposed by the House and $40,194,259,000 as proposed by the Senate.

(RESCISSION)

(HIGHWAY TRUST FUND)

The conference agreement includes a rescission of $1,999,999,000 of the unobligated balances of funds apportioned to the States under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, excluding safety programs and funds set aside within the State for population areas. The conferees direct the FHWA to administer the rescission by allowing each State maximum flexibility in making adjustments among the apportioned highway programs.

APPALACHIAN DEVELOPMENT HIGHWAY SYSTEM

The conference agreement provides $20,000,000 for the Appalachian Development Highway System to be allocated for West Virginia Corridor H.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS—FEDERAL HIGHWAY ADMINISTRATION

Section 110 includes a provision similar to language proposed by the Senate that modifies the distribution of Federal-aid highway obligation limitation. The House did not include a similar provision.

Section 111 retains the provision, as proposed by both the House and Senate, that allows funds received by the Bureau of Transportation Statistics from the sale of data products to be credited to the Federal-aid Highways account.

Section 112 includes a new provision that establishes an administrative takedown and sets aside funding for activities of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. The remaining amounts shall be distributed for the following purposes:

Transportation Assistance for Hurricane Impacted Communities in Louisiana.—The conference agreement provides $1,500,000 to be made available as a grant to the Louisiana Department of Transportation and Development to establish a program under which the Louisiana Department of Transportation and Development shall provide grants to parish and municipal governments in the State of Louisiana that experience a significant spike in population of at least 10 percent because of an unexpected influx of hurricane evacuees, as determined by the Louisiana Department of Transportation and Development, to quickly implement smart and innovative plans to alleviate traffic congestion and to address increased transportation demands in the affected communities.

Illinois Trails. The conference agreement provides $12,000,000 to the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) for various transportation enhancement projects throughout the State. The conferees expect IDOT to provide funding to the following projects: Springfield Interurban Trail, Urbana to Danville Trail, Galena River Trail, Camp Sacajawea Trail, and the Genoa Route 66 Prairie Trail.

Section 113 includes a new provision that makes certain projects and activities eligible to receive fiscal year 2006 grants.

Section 114 retains the provision, as proposed by the Senate, that allows Nevada and Arizona to reimburse debt service payment on the Bypass Bridge at Hoover Dam project with future apportionments, in accordance with title 23, United States Code. The House did not include a similar provision.

Section 115 includes a provision similar to language proposed by the Senate that exempts over-the-road bus and public transit vehicles from axle weight limitations.

Section 116 retains the provision, as proposed by the Senate, that provides access for solid waste vehicles to a "transit only" ramp in Washington State following the completion of necessary safety improvements to the ramp. The House did not include a similar provision.

Section 117 includes a new provision that designates the name of a Michigan highway.

Section 118 includes a new provision that modifies the designation of an intelligent transportation systems project in Public Law 108–7.

The conference agreement deletes a provision proposed by the Senate that would have prohibited funding from being used for development or dissemination of any programmatic agreement making the interstate eligible under the National Register of Historic Places.

FEDERAL MOTOR CARRIER SAFETY ADMINISTRATION

MOTOR CARRIER SAFETY OPERATIONS AND PROGRAMS

(HIGHWAY TRUST FUND)

The conference agreement includes a liquidation of contract authorization and a limitation on obligations of $213,000,000 for the operating expenses of and motor carrier safety research by the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA), instead of $215,000,000 as proposed by the House and $211,400,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement provides funding in the following manner:

	Conference level
Operating expenses	$144,475,000
Research and technology	10,084,000
Information management	42,092,000
Regulatory development	10,414,000
Outreach and education	4,000,000
PRISM operations	935,000
Commercial motor vehicle operators grants	1,000,000

Outreach and education.—The conference agreement provide a total of $4,000,000 for outreach and education. Of this amount, the conferees direct that no more than $100,000 shall be for the "safety is good business" program, no less than $1,000,000 shall be used to increase safety belt usage among commercial motor vehicle drivers, no less then $500,000 shall be for the share the road safely program, and no less than $1,000,000 shall be for household goods outreach. The conferees also provide within the funding for outreach and education $150,000 to continue the motorcoach transportation service selection program and $390,000 for the telephone hotline.

The conference agreement also prohibits any funds relating to outreach and education from being transferred to another agency.

The conference agreement retains language proposed by the Senate directing FMCSA to provide at least two updates to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations during fiscal year 2006 on the transition of the share the road safely program from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) to FMCSA, as well as the status of the two planned enforcement media waves. The conferees also direct NHTSA to return to FMCSA the one FTE that had been detailed from FMCSA to help oversee the share the road safely program.

Research and Technology.—The conference agreement includes $10,084,000 for research and technology and stipulates that the funds shall be available until September 30, 2008.

Within the funds provided for operating expenses, the conference agreement includes funding for the following activities:

Salaries and benefits	$91,746,000
Travel	14,087,000
Transportation	242,000
Communications, rent, and utilities	515,000
GSA Rent	10,887,000

Other services	17,551,000
Supplies	1,357,000
Equipment	3,687,000
Working capital fund	3,873,000

New entrant program.—The conference agreement provides a total of $2,000,000 for the new entrant program for oversight and other Federal responsibilities. This funding level is sufficient to support the existing onboard staffing for fiscal year 2006. An additional $29,000,000 is provided for state grants under the motor carrier safety assistance program.

Commercial vehicle analysis reporting system (CVARS).—Under the recently enacted reauthorization of motor carrier safety programs, no funding is provided within this limitation for CVARS. However, the conferees note that funding is available within motor carrier safety grants for the FMCSA to make grants to, or enter into contracts with, states, local government, or other persons for CVARS.

MOTOR CARRIER SAFETY GRANTS

(HIGHWAY TRUST FUND)

The conference agreement provides a liquidating cash appropriation and a limitation on obligations of $282,000,000 for motor carrier safety grants, instead of $286,000,000 as proposed by the House and $278,620,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement provides funding for motor carrier safety grants as follows:

	Amount
Motor carrier safety assistance program	$188,000,000
Border enforcement grants	32,000,000
Performance and registration information system management grant program	5,000,000
Commercial driver's license (CDL) program improvement grants	25,000,000
Commercial vehicle information systems and networks deployment	25,000,000
CDL information system modernization	5,000,000
Safety data improvement grants	2,000,000

The conference agreement directs that $29,000,000 of the funds provided for the motor carrier safety assistance program shall be distributed as grants to States and local governments for new entrant motor carrier audits.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS—FEDERAL MOTOR CARRIER SAFETY ADMINISTRATION

Section 120 retains the provision as proposed by the House and the Senate that subjects funds appropriated in this Act to the terms and conditions of section 350 of Public Law 107–87, including that the Secretary submit a report on Mexico-domiciled motor carriers.

The conference agreement deletes a provision proposed by the Senate that prohibited using funds in this Act to implement or enforce any provision of the Final Rule issued on April 16, 2003, as it applies to operators of utility service vehicles and motion picture and television production drivers working at a site within a 100 air mile radius of the reporting location.

NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION

As noted in both the House and Senate reports, the lack of detail and specificity in NHTSA's fiscal year 2006 budget justification has put at risk the House and Senate Appropriations Committees' ability to glean the information necessary to make informed decisions about the Nation's highway traffic safety programs. To ensure that the Committees have the information necessary to invest scarce Federal resources wisely, the conferees direct NHTSA to provide detailed information regarding requested increases and reductions to each program, project or activity outlined in the budget request. In particular, for each program, project or activity, the conferees direct NHTSA in its fiscal year 2007 budget justification to show the fiscal year 2006 enacted level, the requested level and to provide a narrative explaining the rationale for any increases or reductions to the current fiscal year enacted level.

(LIQUIDATION OF CONTRACT AUTHORIZATION)

(HIGHWAY TRUST FUND)

The limited amounts for obligation include $122,457,000 to be transferred from the Federal Highway Administration for operations and research, and $110,000,000 for operations and research.

Driver/Vehicle Performance/Simulator.—The conference agreement retains a provision in the Senate report directing that not less than $3,000,000 be provided for the National Advanced Driving Simulator.

Driver Distraction.—The conferees direct NHTSA to undertake an effort to consolidate current knowledge on driver distraction for use by policy makers that would assist state and local governments to formulate effective policies, regulations and laws. Such an effort should also identify areas in which scientific evidence is weak or lacking, thus helping to focus the federal research effort in the most productive directions.

FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION

SAFETY AND OPERATIONS

The conference agreement provides $145,949,000 for Safety and Operations as proposed by the House instead of $146,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees approve three new positions for FRA: two hazardous materials tank car facility inspectors and one R&D program manager.

RAILROAD RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

The conference agreement provides $55,075,000 for Railroad Research and Development, instead of no funding as proposed by the House and $41,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. Within the amount provided, the conferees have provided $1,500,000 for the Foster Miller Advanced Freight Locomotive; $500,000 for DMU compliance and demonstration, NJ; $210,000 for the WVU constructed facility center; $1,500,000 for the Marshall University-University of Nebraska consortium for safety and research programs in rail equipment, human factors, and track and rail safety related issues; and $10,000,000 for NDGPS.

Within the total, the conference agreement provides $6,500,000 for positive train control programs, including $3,000,000 for the North American Joint PTC program and $3,500,000 for a public-private partnership with a freight railroad to fund a project to assist the development of technology to deploy safety overlay technology designed to prevent train movement authority violations, over-speed violations, and train collision accidents caused by non-compliance of authorities as well as provide additional protections to roadway workers and to protect against open switches in non-signal territories.

The conference agreement includes $7,190,000 for rail corridor planning, to be distributed as follows: $500,000 for the Southeast HSR Corridor, NC; $500,000 for the Gulf Coast High Speed Corridor, near Carriere, MS; $2,500,000 to address critical corridor planning and highway-rail crossing safety needs within the Gulf Coast High Speed Rail Corridor; $1,540,000 for the Southeast High Speed Rail corridor between North Carolina and Virginia; $500,000 for grade crossing hazard elimination in Jemison, AL; $750,000 for highway-rail crossing improvements to the Pacific Northwest Corridor in Vancouver, Washington; $500,000 for the Public Education and Enforcement Research program for highway-rail grade crossing safety in Illinois; and $400,000 for corridor improvements to the Midwest Regional Rail Initiative in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

ALASKA RAILROAD REHABILITATION

The conference agreement provides $10,000,000 for the rehabilitation expenses of the Alaska Railroad instead of no funding as proposed by the House and $20,000,000 as proposed by the Senate.

NATIONAL RAILROAD PASSENGER CORPORATION (AMTRAK)

The conference agreement provides a total of $1,315,000,000 for operations, capital improvements and debt service to the National Railroad Passenger Corporation (Amtrak). The conferees agree to provide these funds in a new account structure that provides better clarity as to the nature and extent of Amtrak's operations. The conferees further agree that reform is an essential element to bring escalating Amtrak costs under control in both the short and long term. As such, the conference agreement includes a number of reforms aimed at bringing about operational efficiency.

OPERATING SUBSIDY GRANTS TO THE NATIONAL RAILROAD PASSENGER CORPORATION

The conference agreement provides $495,000,000 to the Secretary of Transportation to make quarterly operating subsidy grants to Amtrak, upon submittal of grant requests. Amtrak and the Secretary are reminded that the quarterly grants need not be of equal size, and that Amtrak should submit grant requests that align to seasonal operating needs.

Earlier in the year, the Appropriations Committees received testimony from the Department of Transportation Inspector General (IG) indicating that Amtrak would require an appropriation between $1,400,000,000 and $1,500,000,000 in order to maintain all existing services through fiscal year 2006. More recently, however, the conferees received a communication from the IG indicating that Amtrak carried over roughly $120,000,000 in available funds into fiscal year 2006—some $90,000,000 more than was anticipated at the time of his initial testimony. The IG also noted that Amtrak failed to avail itself of multiple cost-saving opportunities, particularly in the areas of food and beverage and first class services. These findings prompted the IG to conclude that "Amtrak can function at a lower level of Federal funding—$1,275,000,000 in FY 2006—without cutting routes." In total, the conference agreement provides $1,315,000,000 for Amtrak—$40,000,000 more than the level cited by the Inspector General.

The conference agreement includes bill language mandating that Amtrak achieve operational efficiencies, and directing the DOT Inspector General to submit quarterly reports to Congress tracking Amtrak's progress in this area. The conferees direct the Inspector General to develop an operating subsidy baseline by January 3, 2006 against which Amtrak's progress will be measured. The conference agreement includes bill language that prohibits federal subsidies for food and beverage and sleeper car service if the IG cannot certify by the July 1, 2006 quarterly report that Amtrak has achieved operational savings. The conference agreement also includes a provision prohibiting Amtrak from discounting tickets at more than 50 percent off the normal, peak fare after March 1, 2006, consistent with Amtrak's recently announced plan for the Smart Pass program.

The conferees are aware of a recent Government Accountability Office report that highlights serious weaknesses in Amtrak's procurement practices. The conferees expect that these concerns will be remedied, and direct Amtrak, as part of its monthly reporting requirements, to identify and justify all sole source contract awards.

The conference agreement also provides $5,000,000 for development of a managerial cost accounting system, as proposed by the Senate. Finally, the conference agreement continues reporting and grant-making provisions contained in prior appropriations Acts, including the withholding of $60,000,000 for directed service orders should it be needed.

Subject to the terms and conditions set forth in this Act, the conferees encourage Amtrak to continue offering discounted tickets for veterans and, if financially feasible, to increase the veterans' discounts offered during off-peak periods when space remains available on trains. If discounts are offered, the conferees expect these discounts to be offered equally to members of all veterans service organizations.

CAPITAL AND DEBT SERVICE GRANTS TO THE NATIONAL RAILROAD PASSENGER CORPORATION

The conference agreement includes $780,000,000 for capital and debt service payment grants to Amtrak. The conferees agree to language that provides not more than $280,000,000 for debt service payments. If Amtrak is able to refinance its debt and reduce the size of its payments, the conference agreement permits the savings to be used for the capital program. The conferees include language carried in previous appropriations Acts requiring the Secretary to approve capital expenditures in advance.

The conference agreement also includes a provision directing the Secretary to determine the capital and maintenance cost to Amtrak associated with the use of Amtrak-owned infrastructure on the Northeast Corridor by the commuter railroads that operate over that corridor. The provision requires the Secretary to determine and assess appropriate fees on the commuter railroads based on that use. The revenues from these fees will be merged with the capital appropriation and be used for the appropriate capital investments along the Northeast Corridor. In establishing the level of such fees, the Secretary will account fully for the contributions that commuter railroads currently make toward these costs. The conferees expect the Secretary to establish these fees expeditiously and through an open and transparent process that seeks, to the maximum extent possible, to yield a consensus on the part of all stakeholders as to the appropriate distribution of costs between said stakeholders. The conferees expect the Inspector General to include an assessment of the Department's efforts in assessing and collecting these fees as part of his quarterly reports on Amtrak's operating efficiencies beginning with the report due on July 1, 2006.

EFFICIENCY INCENTIVE GRANTS

The conference agreement includes $40,000,000 for a new Efficiency Incentive Grant program. These funds are to be used at the discretion of the Secretary and may be used at any time during the fiscal year to make additional operating assistance available to Amtrak if the Secretary determines such assistance is necessary to maintain the operation of existing Amtrak routes. Funds may also be disbursed by the Secretary at any time during the fiscal year for operating assistance if such assistance is necessary for Amtrak to stay out of bankruptcy and the Secretary and IG have certified that an emergency situation exists. The conferees expect the Secretary to hold any funds not disbursed for operating assistance in reserve until September 1, 2006, and if such funds are not needed for additional operating assistance, the Secretary should then make capital grants to Amtrak for investments that will have a direct and measurable short-term impact on operating efficiencies.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS—FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION

Section 130 retains a provision included by the House that permits FRA to purchase promotional items for Operation Lifesaver. The Senate did not include a similar provision.

Section 131 retains a provision included by the Senate that clarifies the purpose of fiscal year 2005 funding in the State of Maine. The House did not include a similar provision.

Section 132 retains a provision proposed by the Senate that clarifies the purpose of fiscal year 2005 funding in the State of Illinois. The House did not include a similar provision.

Section 133 retains a provision proposed by the Senate that permits fiscal year 2004 funding to be used for site planning and improvements to Union Passenger Terminal in New Orleans. The House did not include a similar provision.

Section 134 modifies a provision proposed by the Senate that permits fiscal year 2005 funding to be used for improvements in Spokane, WA. The House did not include a similar provision.

Section 135 includes a new provision regarding a temperature-controlled express demonstration. The conferees direct Amtrak to report to both the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations on the status of this demonstration not later than April 14, 2006 and monthly thereafter.

FEDERAL TRANSIT ADMINISTRATION

The House and Senate Committees on Appropriations both reported out of committee H.R. 3058, which provided appropriations for the Federal Transit Administration (FTA), prior to the August 10, 2005 enactment of Public Law 109-59, the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, Efficient Transportation Equity Act: A Legacy for Users or "SAFETEA-LU." Both the House and the Senate structured the appropriations for FTA under the authorities contained in Public Law 105-178, the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century or "TEA 21" and split funded the accounts between the General Fund and the Mass Transit Account of the Highway Trust Fund. Besides various changes to the transit programs, SAFETEA-LU changed the funding mechanism for FTA such that accounts are funded completely from either the General Fund or the Mass Transit Account. The conference agreement follows the structure of SAFETEA-LU.

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement provides a total of $80,000,000 from the General Fund for the administrative expenses of the Federal Transit Administration. Of the amount provided, the conferees direct the funds for the following offices:

Administrator	$925,000
Administration	7,325,000
Chief Counsel	4,058,200
Communications and Congressional Affairs	1,359,300
Program Management (includes public safety)	7,985,900
Budget and Policy	8,732,500
Research, Demonstration, and Innovation	4,763,900
Civil Rights	3,153,100
Planning	4,127,300
Regional Offices	20,754,000
Central Account	16,815,000

The conference agreement retains provisions proposed by both the House and the Senate allowing for the transfer of up to five percent of funds between offices, directing FTA to submit for approval any proposal to transfer funds from the Central Account, prohibiting funds for a permanent office of transit security, directing FTA to reimburse up to $2,000,000 to the Office of the Inspector General, and directing the submission of the annual new starts report. As proposed by the House, funds for the National Transit Database are included under the formula program.

The conferees direct FTA to notify the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations prior to funding e-gov initiatives based in the Office of the Secretary. Activities in support of the Secretary's initiative should be reflected in either the OST account or in the FTA accounts.

The conferees direct the FTA Administrator to comply with the Department's July 18, 2005 chief financial officer (CFO) policy requiring each operating agency chief financial officer to manage directly all financial and budget activities for both program and administrative funds. The conferees agree that the FTA CFO is to oversee the formulation and execution of all authorized and appropriated funds to the agency. The conferees direct the Administrator to report to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations by January 30, 2006, detailing how FTA has aligned the agency's management and oversight of the financial and budget activities for both program and administrative funds consistent with the Department's CFO policy.

Further, the conferees direct the Inspector General to conduct an audit of FTA's administrative expenses for fiscal year 2005 to validate that funds were spent consistent with the provisions of the appropriations Act and the directives that were included in the committee reports. The Inspector General should report the results of the audit to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations by December 31, 2005.

FTA is directed to submit its fiscal year 2007 congressional budget justification for administrative funds itemized by office with material detailing salaries and expenses, staffing increases, and programmatic initiatives of each office. The initiatives for each should be clearly stated, and include a justification for each new position or full-time equivalent, should FTA request additional FTEs next year. In addition, the congressional budget justifications must identify the administrative costs for each new fixed guideway project included in the fiscal year 2007 request.

The conferees reiterate the Senate directive to continue reporting monthly on the new starts program, including milestone schedules for projects within two years of reaching their full funding grant agreement.

FORMULA AND BUS GRANTS

(LIQUIDATION OF CONTRACT AUTHORITY)

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement limits obligations from the Mass Transit Account for the formula and bus grant program to $6,979,931,000. Of the amount available for the fixed guideway modernization program, $47,766,000 is to be transferred to the Capital Investment Grants account for activities under that program. The conferees expect FTA to distribute funds as directed by SAFETEA–LU.

The conferees provide $8,000,000 to the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) for Section 5309 Bus and Bus Facilities grants. The conferees expect IDOT to provide at least $4,000,000 for Downstate Illinois replacement buses in Bloomington, Champaign-Urbana, Danville, Decatur, Peoria, Pekin, Quincy, River Valley, Rockford, Rock Island, Springfield, Madison County, Rides MTD, South Central MTD, and Macomb, including $375,000 for the Springfield MTD night service project. Further, the conferees expect IDOT to provide appropriate funds for bus facilities in Bloomington, Galesburg, Macomb, Peoria, and Rock Island, including $500,000 for the Champaign Day Care Center/Park-n-Ride and $500,000 for the Macomb maintenance facility.

The conferees direct FTA to refrain from reallocating funds provided in fiscal year 2003 and prior year appropriations Acts for the Department of Transportation as follows:

GA—Macon Intermodal
NY—Middletown/Tompkins Consolidated Area Transit Center
NY—Tompkins County/Tompkins Consolidated Area Transit Center

SAFETEA–LU setasides of bus and bus facility funds.—The conferees note that the recently enacted surface transportation authorization bill, SAFETEA–LU, (Public Law 109–59) sets aside more than $442,000,000 of the formula funds made available in this Act for specific bus and bus related facility projects. These projects include eight high priority ferry boat system projects and 645 separate high priority bus projects. Included among those projects is annual funding of $5,000,000 for a Statewide grant for bus and bus related facilities in the State of West Virginia.

The conferees are aware that hybrid buses offer reduced fuel consumption while utilizing existing infrastructure, a significant benefit particularly at a time when fuel conservation is paramount. Also, reduced maintenance for hybrid buses equates to significant life cycle cost benefits. Accordingly, the conferees believe that FTA should develop a program for encouraging and incentivizing a far greater number of transit systems to adopt this technology. The FTA is directed to develop such an initiative, which is to be submitted with the fiscal year 2007 budget submission.

RESEARCH AND UNIVERSITY RESEARCH CENTERS

The conference agreement provides $75,200,000 from the General Fund for research activities. Of the amounts provided, $4,300,000 is for the National Transit Institute, $9,000,000 is for transit cooperative research programs, $7,000,000 is for the university centers program. The conferees provided additional funds over and above the guaranteed level in order to preserve the core research program, which was inadvertently reduced under SAFETEA–LU.

The conferees note that the recently enacted surface transportation authorization bill, SAFETEA–LU, (Public Law 109–59) sets aside research funds made available in this Act for specific research and university projects. Of the remaining funds provided for the national planning and research program, the conference agreement directs funds for the following:

The conference agreement includes $21,000,000 for the disposal of obsolete vessels of the National Defense Reserve Fleet as proposed by the House and Senate.

MARITIME GUARANTEED LOAN (TITLE XI) PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement includes $4,126,000 for administrative expenses of the maritime guaranteed loan program (Title XI), instead of $3,526,000 as proposed by the House and $4,726,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement modifies a Senate proposed reporting requirement regarding companies in "Credit Watch". In order to protect proprietary and sensitive business information that may cause direct financial and/or competitive harm, the companies shall not be specifically identified in the report. The conferees direct MARAD to provide the report within 90 days of enactment of this Act.

The conference agreement includes a new reporting requirement, due with the fiscal year 2007 budget submittal, that directs MARAD to detail funds provided or personnel detailed to the Office of the Secretary's credit council since its inception, by year.

SHIP CONSTRUCTION

(RESCISSION)

The conference agreement includes a rescission of unobligated balances totaling $2,071,280 from the dormant ship construction account as proposed by the House and Senate.

NATIONAL DEFENSE TANK VESSEL CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

The conference agreement does not include funds for the National Defense Tank Vessel Construction Program authorized under Public Law 108–136, as proposed by the House. The Senate proposed $25,000,000.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS—MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

Section 150 retains a provision proposed by the House and Senate that authorizes MARAD to furnish utilities and services and make necessary repairs in connection with any lease, contract, or occupancy involving Government property under control of MARAD, and allow payments received to be credited to the Treasury, as proposed by both the House and Senate.

Section 151 retains a provision proposed by the House and Senate that prohibits obligations incurred during the current year from construction funds in excess of appropriations contained in this or prior year appropriations Acts as proposed by both the House and Senate.

PIPELINE AND HAZARDOUS MATERIALS SAFETY ADMINISTRATION

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

The conference agreement provides $16,877,000 for necessary administrative expenses of the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA), as proposed by the Senate instead of $17,027,000 as proposed by the House. Of this amount, $645,000 is to be derived from the Pipeline Safety Fund.

The conferees reduce the budget request by $150,000 to account for the transfer of an attorney to the office of general counsel for the office of emergency transportation litigation caseload.

HAZARDOUS MATERIALS SAFETY

The conference agreement provides $26,138,000 to continue the agency's hazardous materials safety functions, as proposed by the Senate instead of $26,183,000 as proposed by the House.

Spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste shipments.—The conferees deny funding for four new positions for activities related to assuring the safety of shipments of spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste to Skull Valley, Utah, as was requested in the budget. The conferees note the fact that the Bureau of Land Management still has yet to approve the transportation route to the site, which raises significant doubts about the ability for the site to be opened during fiscal year 2006 and the need for the requested positions.

Hazardous materials regulations compliance.—The conferees approve the three new positions to help ensure compliance with current hazmat regulations and the associated half-year funding.

PIPELINE SAFETY

(OIL SPILL LIABILITY TRUST FUND)

The conference agreement provides $73,010,000 for the office of pipeline safety (OPS), instead of $72,860,000 as proposed by the House and $73,165,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees approve seven of the additional positions requested for OPS, instead of five as proposed by the House and eight as proposed by the Senate.

Oil Spill Liability Trust Fund.—The conferees strongly agree with language contained in both the House and Senate reports expressing concern over the significant increases in the request of funds from the oil spill liability trust fund and the lack of justification for these increases in the budget documentation. The conferees once again direct the agency to include an itemization of how funds from the oil spill liability trust fund are being allocated within the OPS in the fiscal year 2007 budget justification.

EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS GRANTS

(EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS FUND)

The conference agreement provides a total of $14,500,000 for Emergency Preparedness Grants, as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

RESEARCH AND INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGY ADMINISTRATION

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

The conference agreement provides $5,774,000 to continue research and development activities in fiscal year 2006, instead of $4,326,000 as proposed by both the House and the Senate, and stipulates that $1,121,000 of the funds provided shall be available until September 30, 2008. The agreement supports a staffing level of 28 full-time equivalent staff years (FTE).

The conferees reduce funding by $500,000 below the budget by denying the requested increase in hydrogen research.

BUREAU OF TRANSPORTATION STATISTICS

Under the appropriation of the Federal Highway Administration, the conference agreement provides $27,000,000 for the Bureau of Transportation Statistics (BTS).

As has been the practice in previous years, the conferees limit BTS staff to 122 FTE in fiscal year 2006 in order to curtail the significant growth in staffing that occurred previously within this agency.

The language relating to the collection of the motor carrier financial and operating statistics survey is addressed in the office of the secretary section of this Statement of the Managers, as proposed by the House, instead of under BTS as proposed by the Senate.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

The conference agreement includes $62,499,000 for the Office of Inspector General as proposed by the House and Senate.

SURFACE TRANSPORTATION BOARD

The conference agreement includes language that allows the Board to offset $1,250,000 of this appropriation from fees collected during the fiscal year, as proposed by both the House and the Senate.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

(INCLUDING TRANSFERS OF FUNDS)

Section 160 retains the provision as proposed by both the House and Senate that allows the Department of Transportation (DOT) to use funds for aircraft, motor vehicles, liability insurance, uniforms, or allowances, as authorized by law.

Section 166 retains the provision as proposed by the House and Senate that authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to allow issuers of any preferred stock sold to the Department to redeem or repurchase such stock upon the payment to the Department of an amount determined by the Secretary.

Section 167 retains the provision as proposed by the House and Senate that prohibits funds from being used to make a grant unless the Secretary of Transportation notifies the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations no less than three days in advance of any discretionary grant award, letter of intent, or full funding grant agreement totaling $1,000,000 or more.

Section 168 retains the provision that allows funds received from rebates, refunds, and similar sources to be credited to appropriations of the DOT, as proposed by the House and Senate.

Section 169 retains the provision as proposed by the House and Senate that allows amounts from improper payments to a third party contractor that are lawfully recovered by the DOT to be available to cover expenses incurred in the recovery of such payments.

Section 170 retains the provision that allows the Secretary of Transportation to transfer unexpended sums from "Office of the Secretary, Salaries and Expenses" to "Minority Business Outreach", as proposed by the House and Senate.

Section 171 retains the provision as proposed by the House and Senate that prohibits the Office of the Secretary of Transportation from approving assessments or reimbursable agreements pertaining to funds appropriated to the modal administrations in this Act, unless such assessments or agreements have completed the normal reprogramming process for Congressional notification.

Section 172 retains the provision as proposed by the House that prohibits the use of funds to implement an essential air service local cost share participation pilot program. The Senate included a similar provision in title VII.

Section 173 includes a provision similar to what was proposed by the Senate that amends Section 14711(c) of title 49 to allow DOT to be substituted for a State in civil actions to enforce certain consumer protection provisions. The House did not include a similar provision.

Section 182 includes a new provision that modifies a provision relating to the delivery of budget justifications.

Section 183 includes a new provision that modifies a provision relating to processing of reprogrammings.

Section 184 includes a new provision that modifies designations relating to certain highway projects in Vermont.

Section 185 modifies House language to provide up to a total of $17,000,000 to reimburse fixed based general aviation operators and providers of general aviation ground support services at five facilities that incurred financial losses when the Federal government closed the facilities due to the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. Each of the five facilities was closed to general aviation operations on September 11, 2001. Three airports in Maryland were reopened to such operations on March 2, 2002; the South Capitol Street Heliport was permanently closed to general aviation; and Ronald Reagan National Airport was reopened to general aviation operations on October 18, 2005.

It is the conferees intent that reimbursement cover the unilateral closures of these facilities after September 11, 2001. It is not the conferees intent to reimburse for closures resulting from a business operation or facility action or inaction. The conferees note without prejudice that DOT's September 2005 report estimated losses incurred through January 23, 2004 at $10,443,936. The Senate did not include a similar provision.

The language specifies that of the amount provided, up to $5,000,000 will be distributed, if necessary, to the fixed based operators and providers of general aviation ground support services at the three affected Maryland airports. Further, DOT is directed to verify direct and incremental financial losses through an independent audit no later than July 14, 2006 before any funds are provided. Section 187 includes a provision similar to what was proposed by the Senate that provides $1,000,000 from the amounts made available in Section 112 of this Act to conduct a study and issue a report relating to catastrophic hurricane evacuation plans. The House did not include a similar provision.

TITLE III—DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

The conferees reiterate that the Department must limit the reprogramming of funds between the programs, projects, and activities within each account to not more than $500,000 without prior approval of the Committees on Appropriations. Unless otherwise identified in this Statement of Managers or Committee reports, the most detailed allocation of funds presented in the budget justifications is approved, with any deviation from such approved allocation subject to the normal reprogramming requirements. Further, it is the intent of the conferees that all carryover funds in the various accounts, including recaptures and de-obligations, are subject to the normal reprogramming requirements outlined above. Further, no changes may be made to any program, project, or activity if it is construed to be policy or a change in policy, without prior approval of the Committees on Appropriations. Finally, the conferees expect to be notified regarding reorganizations of offices, programs or activities prior to the planned implementation of such reorganizations, as well as be notified, on a monthly basis, of all ongoing litigation, including any negotiations or discussions, planned or ongoing, regarding a consent decree between the Department and any other entity, including the estimated costs of such decrees.

PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The joint statement of the managers herein reflects the agreement of the conferees on tenant-based rental assistance. The conference agreement appropriates $15,573,655,725 for all tenant-based Section 8 (voucher) activities under the Tenant-Based Rental Assistance Account. The conferees continue the 2005 allocation method as proposed by the House. The Senate had proposed to revise the allocation methodology.

The conferees direct HUD not to use recaptures from any source or any project-based carryover to augment total 2006 funding for this account. In addition, the conferees direct HUD to provide all public housing agencies (PHAs) with a fixed, annual budget within which each agency must manage its voucher programs for fiscal year 2006. The conferees expect that Moving To Work (MTW) agencies will be funded based on their agreements and are subject to the same adjustments made to all other PHA annual budgets based on funding availability. HUD may make any necessary adjustments for the costs associated with the first-time renewals of tenant protection and HOPE VI vouchers in 2005. The conferees further direct the Department to commit the entire amount of funds provided for voucher renewals to the public housing authorities at the time annual budgets of the public housing authorities are established.

The conferees direct HUD to provide funds to PHAs based on the amounts PHAs would have received in fiscal year 2005 before any pro rata reductions, and adjusted for the 2005 AAF and the 2006 AAF for each PHA, plus the estimated number of first time renewals of vouchers that will enter the Tenant Based Rental Assistance Account from other forms of assistance. The conferees direct HUD, to the extent necessary, to pro rate each public housing agency's budget to stay within the amount appropriated.

The conference agreement includes up to $45,000,000 in funds to adjust the baseline amount for PHAs that for anomalous reasons, or unforeseen circumstances, were significantly under leased at the time the baseline was set. Examples include the timing of the PHAs fiscal year, portability or other unforeseen circumstances, including the assignment of a significant number of vouchers, which results in a sharp rise in costs. The Secretary has full discretion to determine the appropriate amount of adjustment. HUD is directed to report to the Committees on Appropriations on requests made by PHAs for adjustments to allocations and the final decisions made by the Department.

The conferees reiterate House report language that requires HUD to track and report on the extent to which subsidy changes are due to changes in rent costs and changes in tenant incomes.

Tenant Protection.—The conference agreement includes $180,000,000 for rental subsidies for tenant protection activities instead of $165,700,000 as proposed by the House and $192,000,000 as proposed by the Senate, to replace project-based Section 8 assistance with section 8 vouchers, for conversion of section 202 and section 23 projects to section 8 assistance, and for the family reunification program and for the witness protection program.

Administrative Fees.—The conference agreement includes $1,250,000,000 for public housing agencies' administrative costs and other expenses, instead of $1,225,000,000 as proposed by the House and $1,295,408,000 as proposed by the Senate. Language is included making up to $10,000,000, as proposed by the Senate, available to the Secretary to allocate to public housing agencies that need additional funds to administer their programs. The House had provided $25,000,000. The conferees direct the Department to specify the activities eligible for this funding in the notice to be issued within sixty days of enactment of this Act. The Senate did not include similar language. The conferees did not adopt language included in the House bill that allowed the transfer of up to $200,000,000 in tenant-based funds to the project based account.

Family Self Sufficiency Coordinators.—The conference agreement includes $48,000,000 for public housing agencies family self-sufficiency coordinator staff as proposed by the Senate instead of $45,000,000 as proposed by the House.

Working Capital Fund.—The conference agreement includes $5,900,000 for transfer to the Working Capital Fund as proposed by the House and Senate.

The conference agreement includes language proposed by the Senate that limits funds for litigation and settlements to $12,000,000. The House had more narrow language.

HOUSING CERTIFICATE FUND

(RESCISSION)

The conference agreement includes a rescission of $2,050,000,000 from unobligated balances and recaptures from prior-year appropriations provided in the tenant-based rental assistance and the project-based rental assistance accounts or any other account within this title. This rescission is to be effected no later than September 30, 2006. The House proposed to rescind $2,500,000,000 and the Senate proposed to rescind $1,500,000,000.

The conferees direct that the Department rescind funds provided to Section 8 programs in prior years to the maximum extent possible. The conference agreement does not include language proposed by the Senate to require that HUD and OMB salaries be reduced 10 percent if sufficient Section 8 funds are not available. Instead, language is included that directs HUD to notify the Committees on Appropriations 30 days in advance if unobligated balances in any other accounts will be required to implement the rescission.

PROJECT-BASED RENTAL ASSISTANCE

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement appropriates $5,088,300,000 for project-based rental assistance activities as proposed by the House, instead of $5,072,100,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement provides funds as follows:

Activity	Conference agreement
Project-Based Contract Renewals	$4,939,700,000
Contract Administrators	147,200,000
Total, Project-Based Rental Assistance	5,088,300,000

Language is included, similar to language proposed by the House and the Senate, designating $4,939,700,000 for renewals and amendment of section 8 project-based contracts, section 8 moderate rehabilitation contracts (including associated PHA administrative expenses), Emergency Low-Income Housing Preservation Reform Act (ELIHPRA) and Low-Income Housing Preservation Reform Act (LIHPRA) contracts, and section 441 single room occupancy contracts (including associated PHA administrative expenses).

Language is included, as proposed by the Senate, designating $147,200,000 for performance-based contract administrators. The conference agreement also includes language proposed by the House that would allow these funds for the inspection and administration of units funded through elderly and disabled, section 236, rent supplement and rental assistance programs and the section 202 loan programs.

The conference agreement assumes that project-based section 8 contract amendment funding requirements for fiscal year 2006 can also be met through the use of recaptures available in the Housing Certificate Fund, as proposed in the budget request. Language is included elsewhere in this title making funds available for such purpose.

The conference agreement does not include language proposed by the House that allowed up to $200,000,000 to be transferred from the tenant-based account to the project-based account.

The conferees direct that the Department conduct a study and prepare a report that describes the progress, if any, in improving the living conditions of the tenants of the Evergreen I and Evergreen II housing complexes in Joliet, Illinois, by the owners of such complexes. An interim report is required within six months of enactment of this Act. A final report is required within 12 months of enactment of this Act, which shall detail findings and recommendations, if any.

PUBLIC HOUSING CAPITAL FUND

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement provides $2,463,600,000 for the Public Housing Capital Fund, instead of $2,600,000,000 as proposed by the House and $2,327,200,000 as proposed by the Senate. Within the total funding the conference agreement includes:

—up to $8,820,000 to support the costs of existing administrative and judicial receiverships in effect as of the date of enactment of this Act, as proposed by the House and Senate;

—$11,000,000 for information technology systems instead of $10,000,000 as proposed by the House and $13,200,000 as proposed by the Senate; and —up to $17,000,000 for emergency capital needs resulting from unforeseen emergencies or natural disasters in fiscal year 2006 as proposed by both the House and Senate. Additional language is included that was not in either the House or Senate proposal to add the word "unpreventable" to the definition of "emergency".

The conference agreement includes $38,000,000 for the Resident Opportunity Self-Sufficiency (ROSS) program, instead of $24,000,000 as proposed by the House and $45,000,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement includes $7,500,000 for Neighborhood Networks grants similar to language proposed by the Senate, but does not include $1,000,000 for technical assistance grants. The House did not include separate funding for this activity. The conferees direct the Department to report to the Committees on Appropriations no later than July 15, 2006 on the effectiveness of this program in assisting low-income households in developing skills related to computer technology.

The conference agreement does not designate up to $20,000,000 for demolition, relocation and site remediation for obsolete and distressed public housing units as proposed by the Senate. The House did not include funds for this activity.

PUBLIC HOUSING OPERATING FUND

The conference agreement appropriates $3,600,000,000 for the Public Housing Operating Fund as proposed by the House instead of $3,557,300,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement deletes language proposed by the House requiring HUD to implement the negotiated rule as described in the "Post 4th Session Rule" since HUD has postponed the effective date of the rule and has instead issued a letter that establishes broad participation by PHAs in developing the technical guidance to implement the rule. The conferees direct HUD to provide quarterly updates to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations on the status of the implementing rule and directs that the Department include broad participation from impacted agencies.

The conference agreement directs that up to $10,000,000 be used for a program to provide bonus funding for PHAs that assist families in moving away from dependency on housing assistance programs, as proposed by the House. The Senate did not include a similar provision. The conferees expect the Department to allocate these funds through a Notice of Funding Availability that provides clear eligibility criteria for this program.

The conference agreement includes language that restricts funding to operations in fiscal year 2006 and includes language proposed by the Senate that would make this annual requirement permanent law.

The conferees note that HUD has yet to issue its guidance to implement section 151 of subtitle D of the Energy Policy Act of 2005, which extends the payback period for public housing authorities entering into energy performance contracts to 20 years. HUD is directed to issue the guidance implementing this section, within 45 days of enactment of this Act.

REVITALIZATION OF SEVERELY DISTRESSED PUBLIC HOUSING (HOPE VI)

The conference agreement appropriates $100,000,000 for the Revitalization of Severely Distressed Public Housing program (HOPE VI), instead of $150,000,000 as proposed by the Senate and $60,000,000 as proposed by the House. The conference agreement allows up to $2,000,000 may be used for technical assistance. Language is included making funds available for obligation until September 30, 2007.

The conferees believe it is time to consider alternative approaches to the HOPE VI program that provide flexible authority for PHAs to address obsolete housing as well as new tools for PHAs to develop mixed income housing.

The provision should not be construed to prevent a consortium of charter schools, or a non-profit organization managing a charter school or an incubator for multiple charter schools, from occupying surplus public school space. The conferees are encouraged that the Mayor and the Council of the District of Columbia are moving expeditiously to make surplus facilities available to public charter schools, consistent with current law, to serve the 20,000 public charter school students in the District, thereeby retaining public funds for the benefit of public education.

The conferees require that, in the event that a couple divorces prior to withdrawing funds from their marriage development account, each may withdraw what they have individually contributed but neither will be entitled to the Federal-private matching funds in the account. However, if a spouse is convicted of domestic abuse, the other partner shall be entitled to his or her share of the Federal/private match. The conferees further direct the Capital Area Asset Building Corporation to contract with an appropriate research firm to evaluate the implementation and determine the success of marriage development accounts.

District of Columbia Funds

The conference agreement provides authority for the District of Columbia to spend $8,700,158,000 from the General Fund of the District of Columbia. SENATE—Thursday, November 17, 2005

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

O God, our Father, we come to You not because we are strong but because we are weak; not because we have merits of our own but because we need mercy and help. We come relying on Your strength to do in and through us what we cannot do in our own power.

Give us the grace to accept Your guidance, to obey Your word, and never to leave Your path. Keep our faith true to the end.

Strengthen our Senators for the challenges of today. Keep them from looking so longingly at doors closed that they cannot see other doors opening before them.

Help each of us to be so pure in heart that we may see You. We pray in Your righteous name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will be a period for the transaction of morning business for up to 30 minutes, with the first half of the time under the control of the minority leader or his designee and the second half under the control of the majority leader or his designee.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Today, we will start with a 30-minute period for morning business. After morning business, we will resume consideration of the tax reconciliation bill. This morning when we return to that bill, there will be 10 hours remaining under the statutory time limitation. If all time is used, the debate will not run out until 8 tonight, at the earliest. I hope that we will not need all of that time.

I encourage the chairman and ranking member to yield back time if it is not necessary so that instead of finishing at 8, within that statutory limit, it would be earlier. If there are to be a series of votes, we could start those votes at a much earlier time. If all of that time is used until 8 and we have votes, it is going to be a very long night. So, again, I encourage the chairman and ranking member——

Mr. REID. Will the distinguished majority leader yield?

Mr. FRIST. I would be glad to.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. REID. I have spoken to our manager of the bill, Senator BAUCUS. He would agree to have the time that is used for the votes to be counted against the time. That has not been entered yet. I do not think Senator GRASSLEY would have any objection to that. Maybe we should enter into that agreement at this time.

Mr. FRIST. I think that would be ideal. I still think we might be able to yield some time back in addition to that.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that all time required for voting be part of the 10 hours that remain in terms of the statutory limit.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, in addition to that, I know everybody is concerned about travel plans and when we are going to leave. I have been very clear throughout that we have business to do. This is the last legislative effort before we leave for Christmas, but it is also important that we recognize we still have four conference reports that are open that we are waiting to bring and take to the floor. So I encourage our colleagues to try to close those reports as soon as possible. Again, there are four that are outstanding.

In addition, I made it very clear that we are going to address the PATRIOT Act legislation before we leave. There are good discussions underway. I know those discussions were continuing late into last night. I encourage all of our colleagues to understand the importance of that legislation. We want to get it right and make sure that it is in good shape to bring to the floor, but we do need to address that before we leave.

Terrorism reinsurance, TRIA, is another issue that is coming along well. It is very important legislation, and there has been a lot of work, but we need to actually bring that to the floor as soon as possible. We have a number of nominations that are being considered, and we will have to make certain decisions on those over the next 24 hours.

Lastly, I am running through the list in my own mind of things we have to do before we leave, a continuing resolution—I was talking to the Democratic leader about the continuing resolution which we have to do to keep the Government open—will be coming from the House sometime today. Because the President has to sign that by tomorrow night, we need to act expeditiously on that continuing resolution because we actually have to physically send that to the President, who is overseas at this point.

So we have a lot of work to do. We will stay here tomorrow and into Saturday and, if we have to, go into the early part of next week, which we should not have to do but we will in order to finish the Nation's business. The time that we come back in December, if we come back in December—and I think that the Democratic leader and I have been very open that we have to plan on coming back for a short period of time, not knowing what we are going to be able to finish today, tomorrow, Saturday, and Monday, but in all likelihood we will have to come back for a couple of days in December, but that is not a time that we will be doing new legislation. I do not want anybody to think that if we do not do it now, we are going to be doing it in December because December will be to come in for as brief a period as possible to put the final touches on bills we cannot finish. So we have to finish the work right now.

I am going to make a brief statement on another issue but will turn to the Democratic issue on the schedule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Just a question. If it is determined that we come back, it is my understanding it would not be until the 12th of December, at the earliest; is that the Senator's feelings at this time?

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, again, because it is so unclear to people, what we have said is it will not be before December 12. It will not necessarily be on the 12th either but during that week. I think all of our Members because there are a lot of travel plans that have been made and people are going back to their States and overseas, we are going to have to keep that week flexible, but it would be the intention to come back as late in that week as possible, in large part because we are waiting for the House to catch up—that is the way I think of it in my own mind—to catch up with legislation. I think that we need to keep flexible. My intention is not to bring people back for an entire week.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Again, on scheduling, the Democratic leader and I talk about it every day, so we will keep people posted, again recognizing the importance of that time to be spent with constituents, family, and overseas.

GETTING THE JOB DONE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, there is a lot going on in Washington. The environment seems to be very partisan. When we look at the newspapers, we see the comments that have been made back and forth, but I have to take a couple of minutes and restate what I have mentioned and implied over the last several days; that in spite of all of that, in spite of the vitriolic comments that are being made, the Senate, this institution, is doing its work. It is governing in a way in which I think we can all be proud. If we look over the last 48 hours, one will see how our overall agenda of renewal and reform is being accomplished. We have had several legislative advances that do make America safer and more prosperous. As I mentioned, we will be continuing our work through today, tomorrow, and possibly Saturday, delivering these meaningful solutions to the real challenges and real problems that everyday people are having across this great country. It is important for people to be reminded of that.

I think of four things that have been started in the last 48 hours: The Defense authorization bill, a very important bill that we spent a good amount of time on with a lot of amendments, but ultimately it underscored our absolute commitment to our troops overseas and to the goals that have been set out by this administration. So I am very proud that we did pass that bill. It gives our soldiers the resources, the training, the technology and the support they deserve and that they absolutely need to win the global war on terror. I refer to it occasionally—I actually put it on my Web site on the front page, the Zawahiri and Zarqawi letter which outlines what the intentions are of al-Qaida in this war on terror. The appropriate responsiveness of this body in this Department of Defense authorization bill speaks very importantly to the response that we need to give to these challenges. From cutting-edge technologies to the personnel protection systems, the bill keeps our military strong so that we absolutely will win this war against terror.

We made the clear-cut statement in this bill that America is not going to cut and run, as some would have us do; that we are going to support and continue to train the Iraqi forces until they are strong enough to fight on their own. Also, we expressed our absolute support for this President and his policies through this bill.

The second issue, along with defending our national security, we are strengthening America's retirement security. Ten days ago, people said there is no way this pensions bill is going to get through the Senate. Yet yesterday we passed it, and it spoke very loudly to the fact that the defined pensions benefit system is a ticking timebomb, that over 44 million Americans who are legally covered by the American Government's guarantee are in jeopardy of losing their hard-earned retirement benefits. This bill makes it clear that promises made by employers are promises to be kept to their employees. So we passed that bill yesterday, again a major step forward.

The third area, the vital function of Government. Yesterday, we passed the Commerce-Justice-Science appropriations bill. Along with funding these Federal agencies, the CJS bill includes significant Katrina-related responses. As we all know, more than 350,000 families have been made homeless by the Katrina disaster. A number of us have participated over the course of this past week in a Habitat for Humanity bill project at the Capitol. It reminded me how important it is to marry the nonprofit sector, with the nongovernmental organizations, with what we on this floor have done in response to Katrina and the natural disasters that have struck both this country but indeed around the world. That CJS appropriations bill, in part, reflects the public response in that it provides Federal housing assistance for up to $600 per family per month for up to 6 months to help get those families back on their feet.

This body continues and will continue with its commitment to assist this renewal and recovery from one of, if not the greatest, natural disasters this country has ever seen.

Looking a little more globally, another bill that was passed last night that reflects America's compassion for neighbors around the world was a bill that means a lot to me personally. It is a bipartisan bill in this body called the Water for the Poor Act. This bill addresses the issue that 1.2 billion people in this world do not have access to what we have sitting on our desk as we are here speaking—clean water. Mr. President, 1.2 billion people do not have access to water they can look at and say it does not have bacteria or viruses in it that will make me ill.

The lack of clean water kills more kids under the age of 6 than any disease in the world today, although most people don't pay a lot of attention to it, so this body passed a bill last night that addresses that, the Water for the Poor Act. We had bipartisan legislation on the floor of the Senate sponsored by myself and the Democratic leader upon which this bill is based. It establishes for the first time as a part of our foreign policy the development of water interests as we consider foreign development aid, this whole provision of safe, clean, renewable water for poor countries. It recognizes that unsafe water in developing countries kills a child every 15 seconds. Every 15 seconds a child dies because of lack of access to that clean water. It contributes to poverty, it contributes to unstable governments, and thus the importance of having clean water be a part of our foreign policy, foreign development assistance to these countries.

In combination with the $200 million recently enacted for safe water in developing countries, this is a critical first step in beginning to solve what is a seemingly insurmountable problem but is a solvable problem. It looks at compassion, it looks at protection, it looks at accountability, all of which must be injected in our foreign policy when it comes to foreign aid.

One last issue. In terms of progress made over the last 40 hours, the Banking Committee reported Tuesday the nomination of Ben Bernanke to succeed Alan Greenspan as the next chairman of the Federal Reserve. I am pleased the committee has acted on Mr. Bernanke's nomination and that he has pledged to maintain the Federal Reserve's statutory independence while also maintaining stable, progrowth monetary policies.

Chairman Greenspan's 18 years of service will not officially end until the end of January. Therefore, the full Senate will confirm Mr. Bernanke as one of its first actions beginning the second session of the 109th Congress.

I have run through those five—I said four but five—legislative successes that do demonstrate this body continues to move along, responding to the needs and appropriate desires of the American people. At the beginning of the year we set big goals and every day on this floor we are working hard to meet them, and again we are being successful meeting each one of these benchmarks.

Yes, we have had Katrina, we have had Rita, we have had the natural disasters—the tsunami in Pakistan, we have consistently supported our troops overseas, and in addition we are addressing the issues that, domestically, are on the minds of the American people. I look forward to completing our work this week. It is one of the reasons I outlined a few minutes ago the things we have to do before we leave for our Thanksgiving recess. When we do return to our States, there will be a lot we can point back to, responding to the needs of the American people, and we will be absolutely comfortable in looking them in the eye and saying, yes, we are delivering meaningful solutions to your, the American people's, everyday challenges. Together we are moving America forward.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WARNER. Will the Chair advise the Senate with regard to the allocation of time at this point?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is advised there is 30 minutes on each side. The first half of the half hour is under the control of the minority leader or his designee.

I am corrected. It is 30 minutes, with the first 15 minutes under the control of the minority leader.

Mr. WARNER. Would it be appropriate, then, for the Senator from Virginia to seek time at this point for about 8 minutes?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is under the control of the minority for the first 15 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

EPA ANALYSIS OF CLEAN AIR LEGISLATION

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I will take some time this morning to talk about why we need new clean air legislation. It has been some 15 years since Congress passed the last revisions to the Clean Air Act. No one disputes the fact that we have made significant environmental progress since that time, but our work is not over. Powerplants continue to blow pollution that causes smog and other air problems in our cities and our communities. Unless we require powerplants everywhere to reduce the amount of pollution they emit, we will continue to be faced with poor air quality and its dangerous side effects.

The idea of reducing pollution from powerplants is not new. We have been discussing it for years. In fact, when President Bush first ran for the White House, he promised, in 2000, to make new clean air legislation one of his top environmental priorities. Since I came to the Senate in 2001, we have seen a number of proposals on how to proceed. Senator JEFFORDS offered his Clean Power Act. The President offered his Clear Skies Act. I, along with Senators CHAFEE, GREGG, and ALEXANDER, offered a proposal that we call the Clean Air Planning Act.

I have always believed that our proposal, the third proposal, is the right one. While I agree with the principles laid out in the bill by Senator JEFFORDS, I fear it will be too costly and its goals technologically unachievable. By contrast, the President's plan is too weak and would do nothing to reduce our emissions of carbon dioxide, which we believe contributes to global warming.

What we crafted in response to these two proposals was a middle-ground approach, one that achieved the objectives of the Jeffords bill without relying on the command and control philosophies of the past. It is an approach that reduces pollution further and faster than the President has visualized, while giving utilities the flexibilities they need and the incentives they need to get the job done right.

Since we first introduced that bill some 3 years ago, I have tried to get the EPA to conduct an objective scientific analysis of it and how it compares with other proposals. We were repeatedly denied. Earlier this year, the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee tried to push through the President's Clear Skies bill. I again asked for an analysis of our proposal and the other proposals, and we were denied. The administration told me I had all the information I needed and there was no reason to further debate it. I told them without that information we could not negotiate. On March 8, Clear Skies was voted on in our committee and it failed on a 9-to-9 vote.

Soon after the failure to pass out Clear Skies, President Bush nominated Stephen Johnson to be the new head of EPA. Stephen Johnson had impeccable credentials stemming from his long, distinguished career within the agency. In essence, Mr. JOHNSON represented the best person for the job. But when he came before our committee to have his nomination approved, I voted against him. I think I was the only one. Then I placed a hold on his nomination, something I have never done in my 5 years in the Senate. I don't have a problem with Stephen Johnson; I had a problem with the way the administration was politicizing EPA and keeping the agency from doing its job in providing the information that I and others were requesting.

I believe we need this information in order to enable us to craft the best possible clean air bill. I didn't think it was too much to ask that we have a detailed, up-to-date modeling on how our bills would affect the economy, the health of our public, and our environment. My hold was eventually overridden, I think by two votes. But to my surprise, my pleasant surprise, once Stephen Johnson became administrator, he offered to model the economic, the health, and the environmental impact of the various clean air proposals.

I say right now on the floor that I very much appreciate Stephen Johnson's willingness to grant my request. It says a lot about what kind of man he is, and that he is willing to break through the logjam in trying to meet our years-long request.

Last month, on October 27, Stephen Johnson and some of his senior leadership from EPA delivered the analysis they have done. It is my hope their analysis from EPA will take the debate that has been going on for a number of years to the next level.

After reviewing the details of the analysis, it clearly shows, perhaps ironically, that we can do better than the President's Clear Skies plan. In fact, it shows we can get much better environmental and health benefits than Clear Skies at only a slightly higher cost.

On the issue of climate change, the analysis shows we can regulate carbon dioxide cheaply and without worrying that we will hurt coal production or drive up natural gas prices. Let me explain, using a few charts from the EPA analysis.

The first chart, "Projected Emissions From Electric Generating Units"—there are four of them. The first we will look at is sulfur dioxide emissions from electric generators. We have three proposals we can actually see. This yellow-golden line is a proposal called the Clean Power Act offered by Senator JEFFORDS. This line here is actually several lines that overlap, but it is Clear Skies and current law, the President's proposal. The green line here is the Clean Air Planning Act that Senators CHAFEE, ALEXANDER, GREGG, and I had offered. This is 2005. This is where we are right now.

If the legislation were adopted, you see a spike in sulfur dioxide emission from the Jeffords proposal. Then it drops down lower than the others.

What you see here with sulfur dioxide emissions—the President's proposal is the same as current law.

What you see here for the bipartisan proposal the other three Republicans and I offered is something that gets us deeper cuts in sulfur dioxide emissions, far deeper than the proposal of the administration, and far deeper than that of current law, and eventually somewhere in between where the Jeffords bill is and where the President's proposal is.

Coming over here, looking at emissions of mercury from electric generators, we find the greatest cuts, the deepest cuts, come in 2010. They come from the Jeffords proposal, not surprisingly. The administration's proposals are right here—not much different from current law. The proposal that the three Republican Senators—CHAFEE, ALEXANDER, GREGG—and myself offered is somewhere in between. Actually our cuts are a little deeper than in the Jeffords proposal between now and 2010, and his mercury cuts are a bit further than ours in the subsequent years.

Right here, the third box here, let's look at nitrogen oxide emissions. Again, the deepest cuts are from the Jeffords proposal. The President's Clear Skies proposal—they are all sort of lumped together, and our bipartisan proposal does a little bit better with nitrogen oxide emissions. I think it is kind of interesting, for the nitrogen oxide emissions we are not that far apart. There is a considerable difference between us and the administration on sulfur dioxide and mercury, but we are pretty close together on nitrogen oxide.

Here are CO_2 emissions. The yellow line, the Jeffords proposals: some reductions between now and 2010, pretty level in the outyears. My proposal doesn't go as far, but it holds the CO_2 emissions pretty level until the end of the next decade. Under the President's proposal, under Clear Skies and current law, CO_2 levels continue to rise and emissions continue to rise.

The next chart we are going to look at actually lets us see what the price is of reducing CO_2 emissions. This for me was maybe the biggest surprise of all.

In order to reduce emissions of CO_2 by a ton starting in 2010, under the Jeffords proposal it is $16 a ton—pretty expensive. By 2020, to get a ton of CO_2 reduction out of the Jeffords Clean Power Act—$27 a ton. But look at this. The proposal that Senators CHAFEE, ALEXANDER, GREGG, and I offered, our proposal—one ton of CO_2 reduction in 2010 costs $1. It is $1 per ton in 2015. It is $2 per ton in 2020.

Given that low cost, my question to my colleagues and the administration is, What are we waiting for? Let's get started.

We have a third proposal, a third chart here. The third chart actually looks at what we could get for our money, for our efforts on reducing areas of nonattainment for particulates, the microscopic stuff that gets in our lungs and causes all kinds of breathing disorders. Now we are looking at nondesignated areas that exist. There are about 40 of them around the country that are nonattainment for small particulate matter. Under the Carper proposal and under the Jeffords proposal, we reduce that almost by three-fourths, down to about 10 in each of those. The administration goes down about half. We continue to show considerably fewer nonattainment areas for particulate matter by 2020 under the Jeffords proposal, which is the lowest, and our proposal, which is next to the lowest.

The second chart shows nonattainment areas for ozone. There are a lot of nonattainment areas right now—about 126. If you come up to 2010, there is a dramatic reduction. We go down to about 20. Frankly, the achievements are across the board. Each of the proposals is about the same with respect to reducing ozone.

This chart lets us look at annual monetary health benefits of reducing fine particles and ozone. We find in 2010 that my proposal has quantifiable—according to the EPA—health benefits of about anywhere from $110 billion per year to almost $130 billion. That is almost twice what we get under the Clear Skies proposal and under current law; not quite as much as is achieved under the Jeffords proposal. We find in each of the outyears—2015 and 2020—we also have considerably better health benefits that we can demonstrate, in the view of the EPA, between 2010 and 2020.

Let me wrap it up by saying that we can do better for our environment, we can do better for our health, and, frankly, I think we can do at least as well for our economy by taking this middle-ground approach that Senators ALEXANDER, GREGG, CHAFEE, and I have outlined.

In terms of health consequences alone, under our proposal, 10,000 fewer people will suffer from chronic bronchitis in 2010. Think about that—10,000 fewer people throughout this country in 1 year will suffer from chronic bronchitis. In 2010, we will see some 14,000 fewer hospital admissions and emergency room visits. In 2010, there will be about 160,000 people who will no longer have asthma attacks in this country. And in 2010, companies will have over 1 million fewer lost workdays. These benefits are real. They will have a dramatic impact on the quality of people's lives, and they will have a dramatic impact on worker productivity as well.

Since 2001, both Republicans and Democrats have been arguing over multipollutant legislation. Now with an apple-to-apple comparison of various proposals from EPA, I think we can have a process with not just meaningful legislation but that which will get us off the dime and get us to work on improving the quality of our health and doing it in a way that doesn't break the bank for consumers or the utility companies.

Over the coming months, I will continue to work with my colleagues, the administration, the utility industry, and environmental groups to develop legislation that has strong bipartisan support.

Early next year, we will reintroduce a new and I think improved Clean Air Planning Act, and soon after that I hope to sit down with my friend, Senator VOINOVICH, and others to develop a bipartisan compromise we can take through the committee and bring to the floor, hopefully, for action.

There are five principles we should stick to if we want to get a clean air bill.

Climate change must be addressed. As we have seen from EPA, it can be addressed for $1 a ton in reduction of CO_2.

We should start to improve the environment of people's health as quickly as possible. We can do that.

We should provide industry with the regulatory certainty they need and which they have been asking for—and some flexibility, too.

We should protect our economy.

We should pass stronger protections than those which we already have on the books.

I want to get legislation done. I came here to get things done, and I know my colleagues did, as well. I believe that together we can develop a proposal that will help us achieve just that. Again, we can do better. We shouldn't let politics get in the way of doing the right thing.

I yield my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MURKOWSKI). The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, parliamentary inquiry: What is the time allocation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 15 minutes under the control of the majority in morning business.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Presiding Officer.

I shall take 7 minutes, and my distinguished colleague from Alaska will follow.

IMPROVISED EXPLOSIVE DEVICES

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, the Committee on Armed Services has been working very conscientiously, as we should—and, indeed, all Senators should—on the question of the IEDs in Iraq and in Afghanistan.

Yesterday, our committee invited over from the War College 10 young officers, each of them having commanded a battalion of U.S. Army, U.S. Marines, and, in some instances, some Navy as the Navy is taking a very significant role in the ground operations in Iraq.

I have had the privilege of being associated with men and women of the U.S. military for many years, but I never saw 10 finer individuals. I sat in awe of how they, in a very confident and calm and professional manner, recounted their experiences over the last 18 months—different periods of time, ranging from 6 to 12 months—when they had command of the most magnificent troops, the most magnificent, dedicated military we have had in the contemporary history of America.

We owe those troops a high debt of gratitude. No matter what our political affiliation is, no matter what our philosophical approach is, we owe them and their families a tremendous debt of gratitude. I think that was expressed by this body when 98 to 0 we passed the annual Armed Forces authorization bill. There was not one single dissenting voice. I went back and searched the RECORD. Indeed, during the Vietnam period when I was in the Pentagon, there was always a cadre that would vote against it. But I think it was a recognition in this Chamber—and I salute each Member of the Senate who voted for that bill and expressed on behalf of the men and women of the Armed Forces our gratitude.

But much more remains to be done. In the judgment of this Senator—I am just speaking for myself—I believe the next 4 to 6 months is absolutely the most critical period of this conflict in Iraq. How and why we got into that conflict is debated. It has been taking place, but I urge colleagues to look forward to the future to see how we can best support our forces as each one of the volunteers fulfills the orders of the Commander in Chief and carries out the mission.

During the course of the deliberation of our bill, the distinguished Senator from Connecticut, a member of the Armed Services Committee, Mr. LIEBERMAN, gave an eloquent speech regarding that classic statement at the conclusion of World War II by Arthur Vandenberg: "Politics should be checked at the water's edge."

I say to my colleagues with great respect for all, now is the time. The next 60, 90, 120, 180 days is most critical. I urge us to put aside our political differences, put aside our philosophical differences, and look forward and seize the opportunity to support the Iraqis in their forthcoming elections on the 15th of December and the formation of that government in the ensuing 30 days thereafter.

We should be very strong in our efforts to impress upon this new government the urgency of time and the need to show a greater measure of strength and determination than ever before by the various transitional governments that have preceded this government. Now is the time for the Iraqi people and their new government to show determination, quadruple their efforts in forming their new ministries, standing them up so they can assume the full burden of that measure of democracy and freedom that they elect to have among themselves, and to rapidly try to bring this insurgency to a conclusion.

The ground situation as it develops in the ensuing months dictates any thoughts of how and when our forces can be deemed to have completed their mission and begin the return home.

Just days ago, this Chamber rejected an attempt again to set a timetable. We set no timetable. We are there in this critical period of the next 6 months to support the Iraqi people, to support this new government, but in return they must give us a full measure of support and equal effort to achieve these goals.

If I may return to the subject of the IEDs which was a principal part of our discussion yesterday, I will be consulting with Members, but I believe the Department of Defense has to redouble its efforts to deal with this difficult situation of the IEDs. Each of these officers recounted the number of casualties they experienced in their units. This great Nation shows the magnificent compassion for the families of not only those who lost their lives but lost their limbs, and we are deeply indebted to them. We owe them no less than our full measure of support here at home.

Let us check politics at the water's edge.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

PRE-WAR INTELLIGENCE

Mr. STEVENS. Madam President, I am deeply disturbed by what I believe is an attempt to write a revisionist history of our involvement in Iraq and our pre-war intelligence.

Since 1981, I have served as the Chairman or Ranking Member of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee. As one who has watched over the Defense Department's Appropriations, I was impressed with President Clinton's position on Iraq. The President and his top advisers—Vice President Gore, Secretary of State Albright, National Security Adviser Sandy Berger, and others—consistently made the case we should take seriously the threat Iraq and its weapons, program posed.

I have come to the floor twice in the past to submit President Clinton's February 1998 Pentagon speech into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Before giving his speech, President Clinton was briefed by the generals who command all of our forces. Their briefing convinced President Clinton that he might have to take military action against Saddam Hussein, and he told the generals to be ready.

Those of us in Congress never doubted President Clinton's sincerity or truthfulness regarding this issue. In 1998, he said:

> If Saddam rejects peace and we have to use force, our purpose is clear. We want to seriously diminish the threat posed by Iraq's weapons of mass destruction program.

Vice President Al Gore echoed this concern. He said:

> Saddam's ability to produce and deliver weapons of mass destruction poses a grave threat . . . to the security of the world.

Secretary of State Madeline Albright told us:

> Iraq is a long way from here, but what happens there matters a great deal here. For the risks that the leaders of a rogue state will use nuclear, chemical, or biological weapons against us or our allies is the greatest security threat we face.

And National Security Adviser Sandy Berger warned:

> He (Saddam Hussein) will use those weapons of mass destruction again, as he has 10 times since 1983.

Many Members of the Senate agreed the threat was real and imminent. In 2002, Senator KENNEDY said:

> We have known for many years that Saddam Hussein is seeking and developing weapons of mass destruction.

Senator ROCKEFELLER warned:

> Saddam's existing biological and chemical weapons capabilities pose real threats to America, today, tomorrow.

And Senator KERRY said:

> These weapons pose an unacceptable threat.

In October 2002, the Senate overwhelmingly supported giving President Bush the authority to use force in Iraq. We authorized the use of force in a vote of 77 to 23. The facts before us indicated Saddam Hussein posed a grave threat.

Let me be clear: At the time, the facts were undisputed and we were all provided the same information. These were the facts as we understood them. Saddam Hussein had used weapons of mass destruction against the Iranians, his own people and possibly some of our men and women in uniform during the first gulf war.

In 1998, the weapons inspectors were forced out of Iraq. When the inspectors left, the regime was capable of resuming bacterial warfare agent production within weeks. Iraq had not accounted for hundreds of tons of chemical precursors and tens of thousands of unfilled munitions canisters. Iraq had not accounted for at least 15,000 artillery rockets previously used for delivery of nerve agents or 500 artillery shells filled with mustard gas.

Saddam Hussein had been ordered by the U.N. to disarm 16 times, and 16 times he refused to comply. He engaged in a series of deceitful tactics designed to prevent U.N. inspectors from completing their inspections.

Our intelligence agencies gathered further evidence of his activities. This information was classified to protect our sources and methods. I received those intelligence briefings. I believe I received the same information as President Clinton. These intelligence reports were deeply disturbing, and phase I of the Intelligence Committee's investigations found this information was not coerced or influenced in any way. It was our intelligence agency's best assessment of what was going on in Iraq at the time. Had the President received those briefings and failed to act, he would have been negligent in his duty to keep Americans safe. Those in the Senate who voted for the resolution believed this, which is why we authorized the use of force.

I am now disturbed by the way some are twisting this history to suit their own political agendas. Why is anyone calling the people of this administration liars when the speaker shared their position? In many cases, those who accuse the administration of deception previously had made the case even more strongly than President Bush.

The Senate Intelligence Committee spent 2 years putting together a bipartisan report on our prewar intelligence. Their report found there were no attempts to influence analysts or no evidence that administration officials attempted to coerce, influence, or pressure an analyst to change his or her judgment—not once.

Every member of the Intelligence Committee, Republican and Democrat, approved that report. The Silverman-Robb report and six other major studies found there is no basis for the claim that the administration lied to get us to go to war.

The search for weapons of mass destruction will not be completed on our timetable. Look at this picture: The Iraqis buried entire planes in the desert. We have two photographs of planes being unearthed, full planes buried beneath the sand. When we pulled them out, they were still operable.

Our troops found 30 of these planes buried in the sands of the Al-Taqqadum airfield west of Baghdad—30 planes. That is one-tenth of their entire combat Air Force. If Saddam Hussein's troops had buried one-tenth of their combat aircraft in the desert, who is to say there were no weapons of mass destruction similarly buried? Just because they were not found does not mean they were never there. The Nation of Iraq is the size of California. The materials needed to make weapons of mass destruction could fit in a container the size of a family bathtub. Weapons of mass destruction are no bigger than a family bathtub.

We now stand at a critical moment in history. I believe we must reflect on events leading to the war, but this process is only useful if it is honest and accurate. Those who are trying to rewrite history, revisionist history of these events are simply advancing their own political agendas. They are not advancing the important work due now in the region—and do so on a bipartisan basis.

I agree with the Senator from Virginia, Mr. WARNER, the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services. A flexible timetable for troop withdrawal could jeopardize our men and women in uniform and their mission. The only way we can lose in Iraq is if we defeat ourselves, if we refuse to stay the course. The path to progress is slow and steady. It has milestones, but it does not have timelines. We must remain behind our troops.

Over 200 years ago, our Founding Fathers began the great American experiment. They set out to create a government defined by its commitment to liberty and freedom. Iraq is one of this century's proving grounds for those ideals. Our men and women in uniform, all volunteers, are helping the people of Iraq and Afghanistan build their emerging democracies. Their sacrifices ensure, in the words of Abraham Lincoln, "that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from this Earth."

Distorting our prewar intelligence will not help them complete their mission. We must support the important work they are doing in Iraq, not send mixed messages. The men and women in uniform were asked to go to Iraq to help Iraq become a democracy dedicated to freedom. They are doing that. I will continue to support those and stay the course and support Iraq's efforts to stand up their own forces so they can defend that freedom.

I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

TAX RELIEF ACT OF 2005

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 2020.

The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2020) to provide for reconciliation pursuant to section 202(b) of the concurrent resolution on the budget for the fiscal year 2006.

Pending:

Dorgan amendment No. 2587, to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to impose a temporary windfall profit tax on crude oil and to rebate the tax collected back to the American consumer.

Durbin amendment No. 2596, to express the sense of the Senate concerning the provision of health care for children before providing tax cuts for the wealthy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, this morning we intend to continue two major amendments from this side of the aisle. The amendment of Senator CONRAD from North Dakota proposes a fiscally responsible substitute; the amendment of the Senator from Washington, Ms. CANTWELL, is regarding energy price gouging. These are both very important amendments and an important debate. I ask consent the pending amendments be temporarily laid aside so Senator CONRAD may offer an amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2602

(Purpose: To amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax benefits for areas affected by Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma and to extend certain expiring provisions, and for other purposes)

Mr. CONRAD. Madam President, first I thank the ranking member on the Senate Committee on Finance, Senator BAUCUS, for his leadership and for the extraordinary amount of work he does to make the work of the Committee on Finance as responsible as it can be.

There are many provisions in the underlying bill that has come out of the Committee on Finance that I support. I think they are broadly supported extensions of expiring tax provisions that ought to be extended.

I salute the chairman of the Committee on Finance, Senator GRASSLEY, for the good job he has done in putting together this package. While I agree with many of the specific provisions, I have one profound area of disagreement. That profound area of disagreement is that this package is not paid for. The result, if we pass this package, will be to deepen the deficit, to add to the debt, when we already have record deficits and we already have runaway debt.

My colleagues are going to have to answer the question, Why shouldn't we pay for these tax provisions? Why shouldn't we cover the cost? Why shouldn't we prevent the deficit from being expanded? Why shouldn't we prevent the debt from being deepened?

That is the question posed by my amendment. It takes many of the provisions in the Committee on Finance bill, the expiring tax provisions, and extends them for 1 year. It pays for them fully.

It is very important to remember the history. How did we get in the position we are in today? My colleagues will remember this very famous chart that the administration and the Congressional Budget Office presented back in 2001. This part of the chart I call the fan chart showed the range of possible outcomes if we didn't change any budget policies. This range of possible outcomes from a best case scenario; to a median scenario, the midpoint between the range of possible outcomes is the prediction line adopted; to the worst case scenario. These were the projections given to us if we just did nothing.

My colleagues on the other side said: No, this is too conservative, this range of possible outcomes. They said: Don't you understand, if we have tax cuts we will get more revenue so we will be above the midpoint of the range. We might be even above the best case scenario. The problem with that theory is that it did not work out in reality.

Here is what happened in reality: This red line is far below the worst case scenario outlined by the Congressional Budget Office in 2001. I have caught the chairman's attention. He will remember the chart very well from 2001, what the Congressional Budget Office said was the range of possible outcomes. The Congressional Budget Office adopted this midrange of the estimates as their projection.

Many of my colleagues on the other side told me, when I said we shouldn't be betting on a 10-year forecast: Kent, you are way too conservative. Don't you understand if we cut taxes we will get more revenue. We will be above the midpoint of the range of possible outcomes.

Now we can go back and we can check what has actually happened. That is this red line. It is below the worst case possible outcome. Far below it.

So this notion that the tax cuts were going to generate more revenue and were going to prevent massive deficits proved to be wrong. It is very simple. This is not theory. This is not ideology. This is reality. This is what really happened.

We can look at it in a different way. This chart looks back to 1980, the relationship between spending and revenue of the United States expressed as a share of gross domestic product. Why do we do it that way? Why do we do it as a share of gross domestic product? Because every economist says that is the appropriate way to compare spending over time and revenue over time because it takes out the effects of inflation and growth, so we are comparing apples to apples.

Here is what the line shows: Spending in the 1980s was between 21 and 23.5 percent of gross domestic production. During the 1990s, interestingly enough, during the Democrat administration, the spending came down as a share of gross domestic production each and every year, the 8 years of the Clinton administration. So at the end of that time we were below 19 percent of gross domestic production on spending. Since that time, spending has gone up to approaching 20 percent of gross domestic production now.

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle want to blame Democrats for spending. But Democrats have not been in charge during this period. During this period, Republicans have controlled the White House, the Senate, the House. They are responsible for every dime of this increase.

Let's look at the revenue side. When President Bush came in, revenue—as he correctly stated—was at a very high level historically, about 20.6 percent of gross domestic production. It was substantially above where it was in the 1980s and 1990s.

But look what has happened since. Revenue has collapsed. Last year it was the lowest it has been as a share of gross domestic production since 1959. Some of my friends on the other side want to concentrate on this uptick. And it is true, revenue has increased over the last year. But it is still way below where it has been historically and way below where it was in 2001. The result is the increased spending, the reduced revenue—by the way, about half the reduction in revenue is from tax cuts—the combination of increased spending and reduced revenue has opened up a chasm. That is why we have massive deficits and why we are going to have massive deficits going forward—and, I might add, at the worst possible time.

Why is it the worst possible time? Because the baby boomers are going to start to retire in 2008. Right here the baby boomers are going to start to retire. That is going to change everything in a dramatic way.

The President assured us when we embarked on this course that there would not be deficits. Then, the next year, he told us the deficits would be small and short term. Then, the next year, he told us they would be small by historical standards. Now he says he is going to cut them in half over the next 5 years.

Let's compare rhetoric to reality. Here is what has happened. In 2001, the first year he was in office, inheriting surpluses from the Clinton administration, we had a $128 billion surplus. The next year, we were back in deficit. The next year, 2003, we had the biggest deficit ever, only to be exceeded, in 2004, by an even larger deficit. And this year, again, we have the third largest deficit in our history but somewhat of an improvement.

Let me say to my colleagues, this modest improvement is largely illusory because it focuses just on the deficit. I say to my colleagues, what we ought to be thinking about, what is really far more important to the fiscal future of the country, is not the growth of deficits but the growth of the debt. Why do I say that? Because if you look at what happened to the increase in the debt last year, you see that it increased far more than the deficit figure that is quoted in the news media.

Why is that? Well, the biggest reason is because under the President's plan, $173 billion of Social Security money was taken to pay for other things. That all gets added to the debt. It all has to be paid back. But it is not included in the deficit calculation. Very frankly, these deficit calculations are increasingly irrelevant to understanding the true fiscal condition of the country.

Now, last year, instead of the debt increasing by what was the advertised deficit of $319 billion, the debt of the country actually increased by $551 billion. I find that this is largely not understood. When I do presentations, most people think, in kind of a commonsense way, that the debt must increase by the amount of the deficit. But that is not the case. The fundamental reason it is not the case is because under the President's plan money is being taken from every trust fund in sight to cover the spending, and it all gets added to the debt, but it is not included in the deficit calculation. So last year, the debt of the country increased by $551 billion.

This is so important to understand historically. I see the news media, very frequently, say: Well, as a share of GDP the deficit is not as big as the deficits were in the 1980s. That is true. But it is totally misleading. Why? Because back in the 1980s, there was virtually no Social Security surplus to be used to pay for other things. In fact, until 1984, there was no Social Security surplus—none. Then, in the 1980s, the Social Security surpluses were very modest. But look what has happened over time. The Social Security surpluses have exploded, masking the true size of what is being added to the debt of the country—masking the true size of the deficits is probably a better way to say it.

Last year, the amount of Social Security funds that were taken to pay for other things reached $173 billion, and not a dime of it got counted in the deficit calculation. It all got added to the debt. It is all going to have to be paid back, but you don't read about it anywhere in the news media. They don't talk about how much the debt increased.

This is a shell game of enormous proportion that is going on here. I say to my colleagues, if any private sector entity tried to do what we are doing here, they would be headed for a Federal facility. But it would not be the Congress of the United States, it would not be the White House, they would be headed to Federal prison because any private sector entity that tried to take the retirement funds of its employees and use them to pay for current expenses, they would be guilty of Federal violations of law. They would be guilty of fraud. You cannot take the retirement funds of your employees and use it to pay current expenses. That is exactly what we are doing here, every year.

Under the President's plan, over the next 10 years, at the very time he says Social Security is short of money for the long term, his budget plan and the budget plans that passed here in the Congress of the United States, are going to take $2.5 trillion from Social Security and use it to pay the operating expenses of the Federal Government.

Is anybody paying attention? Is anybody paying attention to what is going on here? Over the next 10 years, $2.5 trillion of Social Security money is going to be taken to pay for other things. We are headed for a train wreck. The President says: Don't worry. We are going to cut the deficit in half over the next 5 years.

Our problem is not a 5-year problem. In fact, that is the sweet spot of the budget cycle. That is the sweet spot because that is before the baby boomers have retired. In addition, the only way the President gets to his claim of reducing the deficit, over 5 years, in half is he just leaves out things. He left out war costs past September 30 of this year. That is $300 billion, according to the Congressional Budget Office. He left out the cost of fixing the alternative minimum tax. That costs $700 billion to fix. There is not a dime of it in his budget.

When you add back the things he left out, here is the picture we see emerging, and this is just the deficit calculation. The debt calculation, as I have described previously, is far worse. We are going into a circumstance in which the next 5 years—these are the good times: it is before baby boomers retire—we are headed for an extraordinarily serious set of circumstances if the budget plan of the President is maintained. Why? Because many of the proposals he has explode in cost right beyond the 5-year budget window. For example, the cost of his tax cuts absolutely explode right beyond the 5-year budget window. So does the cost of dealing with the alternative minimum tax. It explodes beyond the 5-year budget window.

We have had a lot of talk on the floor of the Senate about this being a deficit reduction package. No, it is not. This is not a deficit reduction package, this reconciliation package. This reconciliation package has three parts: spending changes that save $35 billion over 5 years, these additional tax cuts that cost $60 billion over 5 years—so you put the two together, that adds to the deficit; it does not reduce the deficit—and the third chapter is the chapter they do not want you to read in this book because the third chapter is to increase the debt of the country by $781 billion. It is all in one fell swoop.

As we look ahead to the 5-year budget that has been adopted by our colleagues—not with my support; I voted against it—but this is what is going to happen to the debt of the country over the next 5 years under this plan. By the way, these are not my numbers. These are their numbers. These are the numbers in their budget documents about what happens to the debt—not the deficits, the debt.

It is something the news media—it is interesting, the news galleries are absolutely empty. Oh, no, there is one lone soul there—one lone soul. The news media does not want to report on this. Why don't they want to report on it? Because it is a little bit complicated. You actually have to read. You actually have to do a little studying. It is not like covering the latest scandal. They love to cover scandal because that is easy to write about. Budget stories and what is happening to the fiscal condition of the country, that is much more difficult because you actually have to get your numbers right.

No one is paying attention. I have not seen a single national story on the growth of the debt. They are writing about the deficits because that is what they have written about for 20 years. They don't get the whole thing has changed dramatically since the 1980s because of how the policy of our Government has changed to raiding the Social Security trust funds for every dollar that is in them for the next 10 years.

But do you know what? It does not matter they do not write the story. It does not matter because the reality is coming in on us, and it is coming in on us much sooner than people understand because what really affects the strength of America, the fiscal strength of America, is the debt that is being built up, and the budget that has passed both Houses of Congress is going to increase the debt. It started at $7.9 trillion this year. It is going to go up to $8.6 trillion, then to $9.2 trillion, then to $9.9 trillion, then to $10.6 trillion, then to $11.3 trillion over the 5 years of this budget.

Again, these are not my numbers. These are not my numbers. These are the numbers in their own budget documents about their prediction about what will happen to the debt with the budget that has been adopted.

The debt is exploding before the baby boomers retire. What are the implications? Well, here is one of them. Foreign holdings of our debt have doubled in the last 5 years. It took 42 Presidents, pictured here, 224 years to run up $1 trillion of external debt. This President has exceeded them all. He was able to double foreign holdings of our debt in just 5 years. It took 42 Presidents 224 years to run up $1 trillion of external debt. This President has added more than $1 trillion of external debt in 5 years.

To whom do we owe the debt? Well, here is the latest scorecard. We owe Japan $687 billion. We owe China $252 billion. We owe the United Kingdom $182 billion. And my favorite, the Caribbean banking centers, we owe over $100 billion. We owe South Korea over $60 billion. I submit to my colleagues, that does not make America stronger. That makes America weaker.

So now we turn to the legislation before us. One would expect that the Congress would be about reducing the deficit, reducing the debt, in light of what has happened. In light of the fact that the debt during this Presidency has gone up $3 trillion already, in light of the fact that under the 5-year budget before us, the debt is going to go up another $3 trillion over the next 5 years, you would think we would be here trying to reduce the explosion of debt. Surprise, surprise. No. This reconciliation process, a fast-track process that was devised to circumvent the rules of the Senate, was put in place to reduce deficits. That is the whole purpose of reconciliation. But it has been hijacked, and now it is being used not to reduce deficits but to expand them.

I tell you, I go home some nights and I pinch myself thinking I am caught up in some surreal comedy. This has to be a comedy: The debt is exploding before the baby boomers retire, and in the Congress, the reconciliation process that was adopted to reduce deficits has been hijacked and is being used to increase deficits.

What is wrong with this picture? I submit what is wrong with this picture is, it is utterly and completely disconnected from reality. Now we have before us a bill that is going to cut taxes over the next 5 years by $60 billion. It is going to make the deficit worse by $60 billion.

This is what Chairman Greenspan has said about the notion of cutting taxes by borrowing. Federal Reserve Chairman Greenspan opposes deficit-financed tax cuts. He said:

> [W]e should not be cutting taxes by borrowing.

He is right. That is what we are doing. We are borrowing every dime of this, borrowing it from Japan, China, Caribbean banking centers.

Here is the effect of the reconciliation package, $35 billion of spending savings over 5 years, completely and totally wiped out by $60 billion of tax cuts not paid for. The net result is to increase the deficit, to increase the debt by $25 billion, but that is right in line with the fiscal policies that have been adopted by this President and by this Republican majority, because this is their record.

This is where they took over. The debt limit had not been increased for 5 years in this country. In 2002, in one year, they increased it by $450 billion. In 2003, they increased it by $984 billion. In 2004, they increased it by $800 billion. Now, with this reconciliation proposal, they want to increase the debt by $781 billion. Add it all up, and this President will have increased the debt in these 5 years by $3 trillion. Over the next 5 years, according to their own estimates, they are going to increase the debt another $3 trillion. That is real money.

The Chairman of the Federal Reserve has said this:

> All I'm saying is that my general view is I like to see the tax burden as low as possible.

Don't we all. I would like nothing better than to have my tax burden reduced.

> And in that context, I would like to see tax cuts continued. But, as I indicated earlier, that has got to be, in my judgment, in the context of a PAYGO resolution.

What is pay-go? Pay-go says you can have more tax cuts, but you have to pay for them. You can have more spending, but you have to pay for it. Because if you don't, you add to the debt and deficit burden.

That brings me to the amendment that I send to the desk at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

> The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. CONRAD] proposes an amendment numbered 2602.

Mr. CONRAD. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. CONRAD. Madam President, what does this amendment do? It provides for the extension of the expiring tax provisions that expire this year to be effective next year. It extends all of them. It does not extend provisions that expire next year for 2007 or 2008 or 2009. It is completely paid for over the 10 years. It provides for hurricane disaster relief identical to what Chairman GRASSLEY has included in his provision. It provides for alternative minimum tax relief, but in an even better way than what is in the chairman's mark. Because while the chairman's mark says it is a hold-harmless provision, in fact, 600.000 more American taxpayers will pay the alternative minimum tax than paid it this year. We will go from 3 million people paying the alternative minimum tax to 3.6 million.

Remember, the alternative minimum tax, the old millionaire's tax, has now become a middle-class tax trap. My amendment is a real hold harmless on alternative minimum tax. There will be no increase in the number of Americans paying the alternative minimum tax—none. Instead of a 600,000 increase of American taxpayers paying the AMT, we will only have the same number paying next year as this year.

In addition, we extend the R&D tax credit, the State sales tax deduction, the college tuition deduction, the welfare-to-work and work opportunity tax credits, the teacher classroom expenses deduction, the leasehold improvement and restaurant depreciation, and all other traditional tax extenders that expire this year to be effective next year. We pay for those provisions. Instead of putting it on the charge card, instead of running up the debt, adding to the deficit, shoving it off on our kids, we pay for it.

How do we do it? First, we use the same offsets that are in the chairman's package with the exception of the charitable revenue raisers because we don't have the charitable package here. They include the provisions that he has to close the tax gap by shutting down abusive tax shelters. I applaud the chairman for having those in his mark. He is exactly right to have them there. We adopt those same provisions.

In addition, we end the loophole for oil companies that lets them avoid taxes on their foreign operations. That is $10 billion. We end the tax benefit for leasing foreign subway and sewer systems. That saves $5 billion.

I want to explain this one to my colleagues. Here is what is going on. This is one of the biggest scams ever cooked up by accounting firms. Most accounting firms don't engage in this kind of activity, but there are a few who do. Here is what they are doing. They are buying foreign subway and sewer systems in U.S. shell operations, depreciating their assets for U.S. tax purposes, and leasing the subway and the sewer systems back to the foreign cities. I know this sounds unbelievable, but that is what is going on. This is a scam.

Some of my colleagues say: Senator, you are increasing taxes in order to pay for this tax cut package. I suppose you could say that. But is this a tax break anybody thinks should be in place? Do you think we should allow companies to buy foreign subway and sewer systems, depreciate them on their books, reduce their U.S. taxes, and then lease them back to those European cities? Does anybody believe that is not abuse?

We also require tax withholding on Government payments to contractors such as Halliburton. Why shouldn't they have withholding, just as working Americans have withholding on their tax obligations? That saves $7 billion.

We renew the Superfund tax so that polluting companies pay for cleaning up toxic waste sites. That tax is 9.7 cents a barrel. Oil right now is going for close to $60 a barrel. It seems entirely reasonable to me that we ask those who have contributed to these sites that need to be cleaned up to pay for it. 9.7 cents a barrel.

We close other tax loopholes as well. That is how we pay for this package. Why would we not pay for this package? Why should we not prevent the deficit and debt from being increased?

Some of my colleagues argued in the Finance Committee: Senator, you are raising taxes to pay for the tax cut. Here is what the chairman said:

> We've found $180 billion over the last few years in things that are examples of loophole closings and abusive tax shelters. And that's what they are, people . . . that are avoiding taxes—

I would amend that to companies as well.

> —now that ought to pay taxes without changing the rate of taxation.

The chairman had it exactly right. We now know the tax gap in this country, the difference between what is owed and what is actually being paid, is $350 billion a year. Let's close down these scams. Let's close down these loopholes. Let's close down these abuses and use a portion of it to pay for extending these very worthy tax provisions that are in this package. That is what my amendment is about.

For those who say they care about fiscal responsibility, for those who say they are concerned about the explosion of deficits and debt, here is a chance to prove it. Here is a chance to vote for this amendment that will extend the tax provisions that are expiring, those that are expiring this year for next year's taxes, and to pay for it by closing abusive tax shelters.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I thought Senator KYL wanted some time. What I would like to do, if it is OK with the other side, is give Senator KYL some time off of our time and then right after him, Senator THOMAS, because Senator THOMAS has been waiting for a long time to speak. I ask unanimous consent to make that the speaking order. These folks are talking about maybe 20 minutes apiece or less.

Mr. CONRAD. Reserving the right to object—and it is not my intention to object—I would like to inquire as to the parliamentary situation. How much time is left on my amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used 7 minutes on his amendment, which leaves him 53 minutes. The first 28 minutes was charged to the bill so that the amendment was not pending at that time.

Mr. CONRAD. So I have 53 minutes remaining on my side, and they have an hour left on their side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. CONRAD. I inquire of the Senator from California, why does she seek recognition and how much time does she require?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I have two amendments. I will not require more than 15 minutes.

Mr. CONRAD. Is the Senator seeking time off the bill or she would have her own amendment time? I would not object to the request of the chairman to have speaking time. We would then intend to lay my amendment aside.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes, we would be willing to do that. We are looking at some votes around noon. Yours would be one of those. We don't have unanimous consent on that.

Mr. CONRAD. I will defer to the manager of the bill.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENSIGN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, we are moving along on the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota. I got clearance from the chairman of the committee to ask unanimous consent that there be 40 minutes of debate remaining on the Conrad amendment equally divided, 20 minutes in favor of those who are speaking against the amendment and then 20 minutes to be controlled by the Senator from North Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAUCUS. And also that there would be no second-degree amendments and the vote would then occur immediately following the 40 minutes in relation to the Conrad amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Who yields time?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield 10 minutes to Senator KYL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. KYL. I thank the Chair. I thank the chairman.

This is a choice between the product of the Finance Committee and the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota. I strongly urge my colleagues to support the product of the committee and to defeat the Conrad amendment.

Let's first focus on this issue of deficit. The deficit reduction that has occurred as a result of the President's tax policies supported by the Republican Members of Congress has been nothing short of incredible.

This is a choice between a continuation of a policy which provides economic growth for our country and more money for our families, more investment for our businesses, and therefore more jobs for Americans. Look at some of these statistics in terms of the gross domestic product growth in our country. Whether you embraced the lower rates at the time, I think everybody has to acknowledge that the rates we put into effect in 2003 have had a dramatic effect.

Consider: The economy grew at a 3.8-percent annual rate in the third quarter. That is the 10th straight quarter the GDP grew at a rate above 3 percent. We remain the fastest growing industrialized country in the world. That is the longest such period of growth in our history since World War II.

Business investment: In the nine quarters before the 2003 tax rates were put into effect, business investment fell. We passed the tax provisions to cut taxes on capital gains, for example, and we reversed that. In fact, business investment has now increased at an annual rate of 6.9 percent. That means jobs to our economy and more wealth for American families.

In terms of deficit reduction, specifically, we are not undertaxed. Congress is spending too much. That is what is creating the deficit. Nevertheless, as a share of our GDP, the 2005 deficit was 2.6 percent, down from a 3.6-percent share in 2004. In fact, before Hurricane Katrina we were well on the way toward achieving the President's objective of cutting the deficit in half in the next 2 years. In fiscal year 2005, taxpayers sent Washington $274 billion more in revenue than the year before, and $100 billion more than we predicted back in January.

How could we be so far off? This economy is so strong, it is growing so rapidly that even at the lower tax rates we are producing more revenue to the Federal Treasury. This is not a path from which we should deviate. We should continue this path and not adopt the principle of the substitute amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota. What his amendment presumes is something very strange in economics, and that is that somehow we have reached a magic Minerva, an equilibrium where the Federal Government is taking a tax in the right amount from American citizens never to be changed one iota, notwithstanding the fact we will continue to spend more and more and more, and we will have to have the taxes to pay for that spending or go deeper in debt.

The pay-go amendment that is the centerpiece of the amendment proposed as a practical matter does not affect the most significant aspects of our continued spending, namely the mandatory increases in our mandatory spending, our so-called entitlements—Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, that which represents about two-thirds of the spending. As a result, the big-ticket items are not restrained in any way. All that is restrained is the ability to promote the continuation of our current tax rates. If we don't continue these tax rates, if we don't take action, for example, this year to extend the capital gains and dividends tax rates for another 2 years, we are going to find in a couple years the American taxpayers are going to be faced with a huge tax increase, and that is because without further action those tax rates will go up by 25 percent in 2 years. That is not right.

Now, some of our colleagues say, well, these tax rates only help the wealthy in our country. Well, is that so? From a column that was authored by Larry Kudlow, a noted economist: The investor class in America "continues to grow by leaps and bounds . . . The number of families owning stocks has risen to 56.9 million from 54.1 million, meaning nearly 60 percent of U.S. households are invested in equities today." We "have become a society of equity investors."

Zogby polling shows that nearly all Americans—93 percent—earning $75,000 a year or more own stocks. They can't all be rich. And how about those earning up to $75,000 a year? In this group, more than half, or 56 percent, own shares. Of those earning below $50,000 a year—a group that in the aggregate pays very little taxes overall—30 percent own stocks.

So the continuation of the 15-percent rate on dividends is a matter that affects a very large swath of Americans. As a matter of fact, 23 percent of all filers spread evenly across income categories reported dividend income in 2003 and of that group, 30 percent, 30.6 percent had an adjusted gross income under $30,000. Rich people? I don't think so.

How about capital gains? Seventeen percent of all filers spread equally across income categories reported capital gains in 2003, and of that group 30.1 percent had adjusted gross income of under $30,000. The rich? I don't think so.

How about some of the other provisions in the bill from the committee? The savers credit, only 4 percent of filers benefited from that in 2004.

The above-the-line-deduction for college tuition costs, only 2.7 percent of filers claimed that deduction in 2003.

AMT, only 6 percent of filers are affected by that.

Now, why are all of these things in the committee mark? Because they still represent important policy and we continue to support all of those things.

With AMT, the number of filers is going to double so we have to do something about that. But the bottom line is when you are comparing that to capital gains and dividends, far more Americans are affected by capital gains and dividends and they are not just the wealthy. I read the statistics for $30,000 and under.

The other flaw in the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota is that the whole question of what "tax cuts cost" is upside down. The Senator from North Dakota raises that question with respect to revenues to the Federal Government. How much does it cost the Federal Government to have a tax cut? Think about it. That is a strange way to put it. How much does it cost the Federal Government to cut your taxes?

I will put that question the other way around. How much does it cost you when we have a tax increase? Because that is exactly what will happen in 2 years if we don't extend the current tax rates. We should be asking what it costs American families, American taxpayers, and the American economy, American businesses. What is it going to cost them if we take more of their hard-earned money and bring it back to Washington for us in our wisdom to figure out how to spend? That is the question we should be asking.

What is the productive part of our economy? Does the Government create jobs?

Other than these very hard-working clerks here and the other jobs in the Federal Government, we don't create jobs. The private sector creates jobs. It costs money to pay employees. That is why employers try to make money, so they can hire more people, more people will have jobs, their families will be better off. We all understand how the private market works. It requires capital, it requires profits, it requires the Government to get out of the way and not take so much of its money, frankly, and that is why the real question should be with regard to this so-called pay-go, not how much it is going to cost the Federal Government, but how much a tax increase which will result from the policies that are being proposed on the other side of the aisle, how much that tax increase is going to cost hard-working Americans. That is the real question we should be asking.

We need to support the proposal that is before us on the floor today, a proposal which in large measure makes American taxpayers better off and increases the revenues to the Treasury of the Government because the tax policies we have had in place since 2003 are working, both to help stimulate investment in the private sector and create more jobs, and because they are low enough that they create economic activity that can be taxed, providing more revenue to the Federal Treasury. We should reject the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota because it doesn't pursue that same policy goal.

The only caveat to this, of course, is that the capital gains and dividends tax rates I have been talking about are not included in the proposal on the floor or in the proposal of the Senator from North Dakota. But I can assure my colleagues it will be part of the conference report. There is no way we are going to consider a conference report that doesn't continue these current tax policies. To not do so, as I said, would be to begin the biggest tax increase in the history of this country, and we are not going to do that at a time when we need to keep the economy robustly growing as it has been.

I say to my colleagues, the tax proposals of President Bush have been working. Our economy is producing a tremendous number of new jobs, revenue growth for the private sector as well as for the Government sector. Why would we want to turn from that?

With respect to paying for it, let's remember who bears the cost.

There is no free lunch at the end of the day. The taxpayers are going to bear the cost. As a result, the real question we should be asking is not how much these policies cost the Government, but how much they cost the taxpayers.

I urge the Senate to vote against the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota and support the chairman's mark.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, how much time did the Senator from Arizona consume?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Ten minutes.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I wish to take a few minutes to respond.

The Senator from Arizona started with a statement that is truly breathtaking. The Senator from Arizona said that deficit reduction created by the Bush administration policies was, I think he used the word "extraordinary." Yeah, it is extraordinary all right. Here is what has happened to the debt under these policies.

When the President came in, there had been no increase in the debt limit of the United States for 5 years. After 1 year of the President's policies, the debt limit was increased $450 billion. The next year, they increased the debt $984 billion. The next year, they increased the debt $800 billion. In this reconciliation package, they are going to increase the debt limit $781 billion. The Senator from Arizona is on the floor saying they have done something to reduce the deficit? Come on. These are the biggest deficits, the biggest increase in the debt in the history of America, and it doesn't end with what they have already done.

Here is what they are going to do. These are not my calculations. These are the numbers that are in their own budget document. They are going to increase the debt another $600 billion next year, another $600 billion the next year, another $700 billion the next year, another $700 million the next year, and another $700 billion the next year. They already increased the debt $3 trillion, and under this budget plan, over the next 5 years they are going to increase it another $3 trillion, and he is out here talking about deficit reduction? Come on. There is no deficit reduction here.

Mr. KYL. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONRAD. No, I won't yield. The Senator had his chance. I am going to respond, and then I will be happy to engage in debate.

Mr. KYL. Since the Senator referred to me by name, I would like the opportunity to ask a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota has the floor.

Mr. CONRAD. I did not refer to the Senator by name. I referred to "the Senator from Arizona." The Senator from Arizona came out here and said there has been extraordinary deficit reduction. There is no deficit reduction. There is record explosion of debt, that is what is going on.

The Senator said that deficit, as a share of GDP, is not so bad. That is only because he leaves out something. And the something he leaves out is all the money that is being taken from Social Security and used to pay for other items because back in the eighties there was no Social Security surplus, or virtually none. Last year, the Social Security funds that were being used to try to mask the true size of what is going on was $173 billion. You add that back in, and the increase in debt of this country was 4.5 percent of GDP.

In the European Union, you can't be a member if you run deficits above 3.0 percent of GDP. But the addition to debt in this country last year was 4.6 percent of GDP when you add back all the money that is being taken from trust funds and used to pay for other items.

Here is what he doesn't want to talk about. Here is the explosion of Social Security money being taken to pay for other things. Look back in the eighties, there was virtually no Social Security surplus. In fact, in 1983, there was none. Then there was a couple hundred million dollars a year. Now it is approaching $200 billion a year, and they want to forget about it, they don't want to count it?

I tell you what is going on here is so utterly disconnected from reality. This chart shows the spending line since the eighties and the revenue line. In the nineties, we brought spending down each and every year as a share of GDP. Now we have had a big tick upwards. The Senator from Arizona said he wonders how we reached some nirvana of balance between spending and revenue. There is no balance, that is the point. That is what is wrong. We see the spending line and the revenue line. Look at the gap.

Our friends on the other side want to complain about the spending. Guess what. They are responsible for every dime of it. This happened on their watch. They control the House, they control the Senate, they control the White House. They are responsible for every dime of the increase in spending.

Here is what has happened to the revenue. It has collapsed. The result is an enormous gap, and he says he wonders how we reached some nirvana of balance between spending and revenue. There is no balance. That is the point.

Then our colleague talked about how wonderful the economic performance has been. No, it hasn't. Here is the record on job creation, comparing the average of the last nine recessions since World War II. Here is what happened over the period of time—this is in number of months on the bottom. This is a jobless recovery. This red line is the average of what has happened after the last nine recessions. By this stage, 55 months after the trough, typically 7 million jobs have been created in the private sector, more than have been created in this recovery.

So we are running 7 million private sector jobs behind the average of the last nine recoveries since World War II. This is great economic performance? It is the worst employment performance we have had of any of the nine recessions since World War II.

It is not just job growth, it is also GDP growth. GDP growth lags behind the typical recovery by 27 percent over the same period of time.

The Senator talked about business investment. Let's look at business investment. Let's look at the last nine recessions. At this stage, we are running 53 percent less business investment than in the nine previous recoveries from recessions. And he touts this economic record? Mr. President, this is not a record of which to be proud.

The Senator also talked about the dividend tax cut, and he talked about capital gains. They are not in the underlying amendment of the chairman of the committee. They are not in the Finance Committee's mark. So he is comparing apples to something else.

My amendment says we have to go back to the disciplines we have used in the past to restore fiscal discipline. What are they? Pay-go is one of the major budget disciplines, and it simply says: If you are going to have more tax cuts, fine, you have to pay for them. If you have more spending, fine, you have to pay for it. That is one of the key things we must do to get this Nation back on track.

This notion that we keep borrowing the money, keep spending the money, keep more and more tax cuts, don't worry if anything adds up is leading us deeper and deeper into debt. When are we going to stop this?

Mr. President, how much time do I have left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 11½ minutes left.

Mr. CONRAD. I ask if the Chair will notify me when I have used 1 more minute.

Mr. President, let me say to my colleagues, I am beginning to wonder what are we thinking around here? What are we thinking of, Republicans and Democrats? When are we going to turn the corner? When are we going to say enough is enough? When are we going to say adding $3 trillion of debt in the last 5 years and headed for the next 5 years adding another $3 trillion, in effect, doubling the debt of our country in 10 years—that is what we are doing. The result is foreign holdings of our debt have doubled in 5 years. Mr. President, I say to my colleagues, this is not sustainable.

On the Republican side, they say we should just cut the spending. OK, do it, cut it. If you don't want to tax anymore, cut the spending to match the taxes you are willing to levy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used an additional minute.

Mr. CONRAD. I ask for another 30 seconds.

My Republican friends said they are fiscally responsible. When are they going to demonstrate it? If you are only willing to tax at 17 percent of GDP, then cut the spending 17 percent of GDP. If they think, well, because of the war and because of the need for homeland security, we need to spend more than 17 percent of GDP, which is what they are doing in their budgets—they are not spending 17 percent of GDP, they are spending 19 percent of GDP, in fact they are going to 20 percent of GDP, then tax at 20 percent of GDP so you pay your bills. Do one of the two. But don't just keep putting it on the charge card.

I say to my Democratic colleagues the same thing. We cannot be for more spending than we are for levying the taxes to raise it. What is going on in this town is absolutely and totally irresponsible, and it is going to put us in a very weakened position as a country. We have increased foreign holdings of our debt 100 percent in 5 years. It took 224 years to run up a trillion dollars of external debt. This President has doubled it in 5 years. That does not strengthen America.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield whatever time he might consume of my remaining time to the Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I thank the chairman. I appreciate the opportunity to deal with this issue that is before us. By the way, I am not speaking on the Conrad amendment, but I am, as a matter of fact, speaking on the Dorgan amendment in general time. I have to say to my friend from North Dakota that I certainly agree with the idea that we have gone out of control in terms of our spending. I don't agree with the idea that we have to raise taxes to offset it. What we ought to be looking at is reducing the size of Government.

Quite frankly, I would like to see some activity on that side of the aisle, as well as this side, to take a look at some of the programs we have and see if they still need to continue to exist. With regard to the idea that the growth of the Federal Government is out of control, we have gotten into a feeling that every time there is a need in the country for anything the Federal Government ought to do it and establish a new program.

I happen to have a bill called the sunset bill which I think we ought to take a look at. We ought to take a look at programs that have been in existence for 10 years and see if they are as important now as they were when they were created. If not, let's change them.

In any event, I want to talk in opposition to the Dorgan amendment, which is the windfall profits tax amendment, which has to do with the bill before us. What we are talking about in this tax bill is the economy. We are talking about growth. Notwithstanding what has been said, we have had growth, 3.5 percent growth in GDP in the last quarter. That is above average in the last 10 years. We do have growth. That is what it is all about.

We also ought to recognize when we are able to leave people with more money in their hands to spend, that is a good thing. If you can reduce taxes so people have money to invest, that is a good thing. That is what creates the economy and economic growth. That is what it is all about, the economy.

The other overriding issue before us, although I don't think it is a specific issue here, is one of the main factors of the economy, and that is energy. Without energy, we don't have an economy. So we are talking a lot recently, and should be, about energy—where we are going to get energy, where it is going to come from, how we are going to invest in new sources of energy. That has been one of the key issues for the last year. We finally got an energy policy. Unfortunately, what we are talking about now, particularly in this windfall profits amendment, is something totally adverse to the philosophy that we have developed to create new energy sources.

The windfall profits tax amendment which has been offered is not only bad policy but it sends the wrong message to American companies and to entrepreneurs.

Supporters of this tax have tried to demonize the whole concept of making a profit. Companies are in business to make a profit. They make profits and create jobs, which is what we are talking about all the time. If they did not make a profit they would not be in business, and we would not have jobs.

The Senator was talking about the number of jobs. Why does one think there are jobs? Because there are profitable companies. That is what we need to be talking about. Supporters of this windfall tax, however, want people to believe that the oil industry somehow managed to reap undeserved profits, resulting in one of the highest profit margins in America.

Well, they have profits. Who would not have profits when there has been that kind of increase in the energy business? It is not the case that they are unusually high profit margins. The profits for the oil companies measured against other factors of the economy, frankly, are quite modest. I have a chart that shows a number of the industries which are much higher. These are the earnings of major industries in the second quarter, net income on sales in 2005. It shows cents per dollar of sales in the various businesses, banks, pharmaceuticals, software, semiconductors, diversified financials, household and personal products, consumer services, insurance, telecommunications, food, beverage and tobacco, real estate, health care, material, all U.S. industries, 7.9, and then next, oil and gas, 7.6 percent.

The third quarter moves them above this to about 8 percent, but look at these businesses that are much above that. They keep talking about how they have had these unusually high and perhaps even illegal profits.

Those who want to argue about this chart because it shows second quarter profits, and they are higher in the third quarter, it has changed somewhat, but whatever it is it will be about 8.1 percent for the oil industry.

I wonder if supporters of this windfall profits tax would suggest that it be on all of these other businesses that are higher in their earnings than the oil and gas industry. I understand one of the sponsors of the amendment comes from a State where there are lots of insurance companies, and despite a profit of over 10 percent, I do not see him rushing to the floor to put a windfall tax on insurance.

We have had this news media focus on the energy industry and so it has become this kind of thing, but I think we have to keep in mind the future. I certainly hope as we go about our business we think not only about today but about 10 years from now: What are we going to do with energy? There has been nothing of more concern to us than energy.

The facts speak for themselves. The Congress tried to take this approach in the early 1980s and it did not work. I understand they are saying this is not like the other windfall, but indeed it is. It takes profits they say are excessive, which are not comparatively, to distribute them back out to the public.

Is that what the business system is about? Is that what the private sector is about? I do not believe so.

The efforts that were made to do that in the past did not work. The nonpartisan Congressional Research Service has documented this policy as a failure in the past, and I can only conclude that it would be a failure again in the future. The whole concept defies common sense.

Who is qualified to deem the profits as determined by the market are too high? The market will adjust for that if that is the case. I certainly do not believe any Member of Congress has those qualifications.

I understand the politics of wanting to distribute money to everyone. That is a great thing to be able to put on one's resume. But it does not conceptually, from a policy standpoint, make sense. We live in a market economy, and it is the model that works. Of course, we need to continue to change our system. But we have the best system in the world, and we need to make sure we continue it, unlike Members who have tried all of these manipulations and the nonmarket approach, which has not worked.

The market economy means if one engages in a risk associated with investment they should reap the benefits from that. Not unlike other industries, the oil and gas industry requires significant investment and risk. I live in the State of Wyoming which is one of the highest producers of energy, and I can say there is a great deal of investment that has to go into the production of the energy that goes to New England and New York where they do not have any production of their own. That is the way it should be. Nevertheless, one cannot sit off some other place and say we want energy but we do not want to have any investment in it. One cannot sit out on the west coast where there is no production, no refineries, and say, well, we want energy but we do not want any investment in transportation to get it there or in the development of it.

That is what we hear a great deal on the Senate floor. I think not only has that been the case in the past, and it is the case today, quite frankly, it is going to be more the case as time goes on. We are going to have to look for new ways to develop energy. In Wyoming, we are going to have to go to oil shale, for example, which is expensive to develop. We are going to have to go to deep wells. We are going to have to go to secondary recovery. We are going to have to go to alternative fuels. We are going to have to go to converting coal to other things. Those are expensive kinds of investments, and that is what it is all about.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority's time on the amendment has expired.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, as we get to that amendment on windfall profits, I hope we will take this into account.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Could I inquire as to the time on my amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8½ minutes.

Mr. CONRAD. And the majority?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority time is expired.

Mr. CONRAD. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, I go back to the point that my colleague from Wyoming made about this relationship between spending and revenue. Here is the problem we have. Here is where we are in spending as a percentage of gross domestic product. We are at about 20 percent, a little over. Here is where we are in revenue. We are just over 17 percent. It is this gap between spending and revenue that is creating these massive deficits, and this is before the baby boomers retire. The question is, How do we close this gap?

We could do it one of three ways: We could cut the spending down to the amount of revenue that we are willing to levy. That would mean a 36-percent cut in every part of Federal spending if we were to hold harmless from the cuts Social Security, defense, and interest on the debt. We would have to cut everything else—homeland security, aid to veterans, education, parks, FBI. All the rest would have to be cut 36 percent to cut the spending down to the revenue we currently have.

A second possibility would be to raise revenue up to the spending line. That would mean a very significant revenue increase if we were to do it just with revenues. A third possibility is some combination of spending cuts and revenue increases.

One of the assumptions being made is that to increase revenue, taxes have to be increased. The fact is, the revenue service tells us the tax gap, the difference between what is owed and what is being paid, is now $350 billion a year.

Before we talk about a tax increase on anyone, before we have any suggestion of a tax increase, we ought to go after that tax gap and we ought to do it aggressively. That is part of the amendment that I have offered. Frankly, it is a part of the chairman's mark because the chairman closes $30 billion of loopholes in his proposal.

I agree with those, but I say to the Senator from Iowa he does not go far enough at closing loopholes. In my proposal, we go further. For example, we end the tax benefit for leasing foreign subway and sewer systems.

Why would we not do that? Why do we allow companies to go and buy the sewer and subway systems of foreign cities and depreciate them on their U.S. taxes, cutting their taxes in our country, and then lease back the subway and sewer systems to foreign cities? What a scam. Why are we allowing that? Somebody calls that a tax increase? Is that really a tax increase to say to companies that they cannot go buy the sewer system in a foreign country's city and depreciate it on their U.S. taxes? That is what is going on.

We also would require tax withholding on Government payments to contractors like Halliburton. Just like all the rest of us who have withholding on our taxes, why do they not have withholding on theirs? It would save us a lot of money; renewing the Superfund tax, 9.7 cents a barrel on $60-per-barrel oil to clean up these toxic sites.

One can call those tax increases; I call them closing loopholes. I call them closing scams. We ought to do it and use the money to pay for extending these tax reductions that are included in my amendment; the extending of tax reductions that are reasonable, that are in this package.

I hope my colleagues will think for a minute about what we are doing. Debt is growing out of control. Why are we taking steps to add to the deficit, to add to the debt? Why not pay for something around here?

Let us start paying our bills. That is what pay-go is all about. It says, if my colleagues want more tax cuts, they have to pay for them. If they want more spending, they have to pay for it. That is an American value, paying one's bills. We are not doing that. We are stacking debt on top of debt. We have added $3 trillion to the debt over the 5 years of this Presidency. Under this budget plan, we are getting ready to add another $3 trillion of debt before the baby boomers retire. We can do better than that. America deserves better than that. It certainly does not deserve us stacking debt on top of debt.

I yield the floor and reserve my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that immediately after the coming vote on the Conrad amendment, the next speakers and amendments be in order as follows: First, Senator DOMENICI be recognized to speak for 20 minutes; Senator FEINSTEIN will be recognized to offer two amendments on which there will be a total of 30 minutes equally divided on the two amendments; following that time, that Senator CANTWELL be recognized for the purpose of offering her amendment with respect to energy price gouging, and there be 60 minutes equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the substitute amendment.

Let me first explain that this substitute does not contain everything we had hoped to offer. Some of the items that we cannot consider today, though, are extremely important to American families.

They include the Lincoln-Snowe child tax credit fix. The Lincoln-Snowe provisions would ensure that the working poor can continue to receive this valuable credit. Regrettably, the threshold climbs each year. And the minimum wage remains stagnant.

So these families receive a smaller refundable child tax credit each passing year.

Another package we had hoped to include were a few incentives for military families. These include a provision to ensure that families with someone serving in combat can continue to receive the earned income tax credit. With the heavy strain that the Iraq war continues to put on military families, Congress can surely do more for these families.

The substitute today does not address a few items for the Gulf States I had hoped to include.

As I have said many times in the past few months, we must address the immediate needs of the hundreds of thousands of people affected by the hurricanes that ravaged the Gulf States. We cannot forget that the recovery in the gulf region is not over. It has hardly begun.

People have lost everything and need help to rebuild their lives. That help has not arrived. We have more work to do in this Congress to make sure displaced families have access to health care, unemployment benefits while they search for work, childcare so they can get to work, and foster care services for needy kids.

It is irresponsible to leave these people behind and move on to cutting taxes before we have completed our job of providing real relief to those that have been hurt by the storms.

But for procedural reasons, we are offering a different substitute. I believe that this substitute is a better approach than the bill before the Senate today.

I want to highlight some principles that we pursued in this substitute. And what we are not doing here is as important as what we are.

Other than the disaster recovery incentives, we do not add to the deficit. That is an important distinction between our substitute and the bill before the Senate.

I know that the majority leadership hopes that spending reconciliation cuts will occur at some point. But even if Congress does enact those highly controversial cuts, the bill before us today would still add to the deficit.

This is exactly what Alan Greenspan warned us against last week: deficit-financed tax cuts.

How can we face constituents who will see their food stamps or child support services cut? How can we tell them that we had to make those cuts to pay for tax cuts?

How could we tell them that Congress cut their benefits for tax cuts that will not even take effect until several years down the road?

Another thing that we do not do in this substitute is any extension of tax cuts that don't expire this year. The last 3 years have been the 3 highest deficits in the Nation's history. At some point, we need to do some belt-tightening.

In all fairness, I support many of these tax cuts. I have cosponsored and voted for many of them. But we simply need to prioritize this year. We need to do what is urgent first.

The bill before us today does not include the capital gains and dividends tax cuts. But we know that it may well appear at some point during this reconciliation process, especially now that the House tax-writers have chosen capital gains and dividends tax cuts to the exclusion of AMT relief.

Some cite the $20 billion figure for the 2-year extension of capital gains and dividends cuts.

But we are really talking about a $50 billion cost over 10 years. And that is the way that we usually score tax bills.

There are some good items in the bill before us today, but I think in order to be a great bill, we must achieve fiscal responsibility. Our substitute not only meets all the budget numbers, it does better. The 2006 loss is below $11 billion, the 5-year loss is $20 billion, and the 10-year figure actually cuts Federal deficit by $6 billion.

It comes down to timing, priorities, and fiscal responsibility. I urge my colleagues to support this substitute.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, are we now ready to dispose of the Conrad amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. CONRAD. I will be happy to use my time at this point if that will help the managers.

Mr. President, the question before us is, What is our vision for the future? If this chart shows your vision of the fiscal future of the country, vote against my amendment. If you think the answer to our fiscal future is just to add more and more to the debt, then vote against me. If you believe it is time to get our fiscal house in order, at least to begin steps to get our fiscal house in order, vote with me. If you believe the underlying budget makes sense, here is what the underlying budget does. For the next 5 years it adds to the debt, going from just under $8 trillion to over $11 trillion. It is going to add over $3 trillion to the debt over the next 5 years.

If you think that is a mistake, then support the alternative that I am offering, which says: Yes, we will provide the hurricane disaster relief; yes, we will provide extensions of the expiring provisions on alternative minimum tax—in fact, we will protect 600,000 more taxpayers than the chairman's mark. And we will provide the R&D tax credit, the State sales tax deduction, the college tuition deduction, the Welfare-to-Work and Work Opportunity Tax Credits, the teacher classroom expenses deduction, the leasehold improvement and restaurant depreciation, and all other traditional tax extenders—but we will pay for them.

How do we pay for them? We take the offsets that are in the chairman's mark that are loophole closers that shut down abusive tax shelters, and we add additional tax shelters and loophole closers—ending a loophole for oil companies that lets them avoid taxes on foreign operations, ending the tax benefit for the leasing of foreign subway and sewer systems—again, I say to my colleagues, why would we ever permit that?—require tax withholding on Government payments to contractors like Halliburton, and renewing the Superfund tax so that polluting companies pay for cleaning up toxic waste.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired. All time has expired.

Mr. CONRAD. I ask my colleagues to support my amendment to pay for the tax breaks we want to extend. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I raise a point of order the amendment is not germane to the underlying legislation.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act, I move to waive the applicable sections of that act for purposes of the pending amendment.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this question, the yeas are 44. The nays are 55. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected and the point of order is sustained. The amendment falls.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from New Mexico is recognized for 20 minutes.

The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I don't believe I will use 20 minutes.

I am here this morning to ask a few questions and make a few observations about the pending windfall profit tax amendment. I will first explain what I think the amendment is all about.

This imposes a windfall profit tax on all oil sold for more than $40 a barrel. The tax would be 50 percent. Every year whatever tax is collected would be divided up among all individual taxpayers as a credit. The only way for a company to avoid the tax would be for it to spend all of its receipts above $40 a barrel on investments qualified by the Government. In other words, we know best. We know where they should invest; qualified investment for things such as pipelines, new drilling, refineries, as long as the drilling is in areas that are not already proven oil and gas property.

I don't know what the intention is with reference to oil. Is it to produce more oil or not? If it is, it seems to me an investment of oil of any type that comes out of the ground would be something we should want, but by no means am I suggesting I want to add this list because I believe the whole idea is wrongheaded.

I ask a few questions about what I have observed and what I noted is pretty close to right. If Saudi Arabian oil is being sold at $55 a barrel in Saudi Arabia, am I correct that any entity that sells that oil in the United States would have to pay a tax of $12.50 per barrel, even if they sold that in the United States for the same price they bought it, to wit, $55 a barrel? Is that what we have in mind? That is, if Saudi Arabian oil sells at $55 a barrel, one of our American companies has to buy oil to create gasoline for us—if, in fact, they buy it at $55—that exceeds the $40. So what if they sell it for $55? My arithmetic says that is zero. There is no profit. There is no markup.

Under this amendment, they would still have to pay a tax of $12.50 a barrel, selling it at cost. How could that do anything to encourage production or investment? It would encourage the opposite. As a matter of fact, it would seem to me it would discourage selling oil bought in that manner in the United States—something we would not want. The market value in the world is $55, and they will lose money selling it in the United States. Pretty soon we would have a shortage in the United States. Who would want to sell it here?

In fact, if we look at it, to avoid taking a loss on the sale of that Saudi oil in the United States, any importer of that oil, according to my arithmetic, would have to sell it at $70 just to cover the cost of the tax. It seems to me, in that case, even though the cost of oil is $55 in Saudi Arabia, Senator DORGAN's amendment would deem $30 of that sale price to be a windfall profit. So the seller would owe $15 to the Treasury and would be left with just the $55 necessary to meet the cost.

That is absolutely counterproductive, the wrong thing to do and an unintended, but direct, consequence of this way to raise money and seemingly to send some kind of message to the oil companies about their profits.

Another question in the scenario that I gave, isn't it true this amendment would actually raise the cost of oil from $55 a barrel to $70 a barrel, on pure economics? This amendment would tell the oil companies to sell oil higher than is happening today in order to break even because of the imposition of the tax. That would be very bad. Would it help the country? Who would it help? It hurts us. It hurts our consumers instead of helping the problem attempted to be addressed; namely, get the cost of oil down. It would cause the opposite.

It seems to me, in a general way, the amendment imposes a tax on oil that would drive up the price of oil. It is not a tax on the companies. It is a tax on oil. Does the Senator have any sort of analysis? I don't have one. I wish I did. I wonder what the Congressional Budget Office or the Joint Tax Committee or the Energy Information Agency would show this amendment would do in terms of the cost to our consumers? Such an analysis, which we do not have time to do, would show that American consumers would not have a decrease in the cost of gasoline. Rather, it would go up. I wish we could have that study. I believe, and I think I have a bit of credibility, the imposition of this windfall profit tax would cause the price to our consumers to go up, not down.

It also means that oil companies have an option of selling their oil in the United States and paying a sizable tax in the United States. They will probably sell it overseas to avoid paying the tax. If they have an option to sell it here and paying a tax or selling it overseas, they will take the option of selling it overseas. Why not? It is pure logic. You lose money selling it in the United States.

Is the amendment accompanied by analysis that shows how much less oil would be available in the United States if this amendment is passed? I truly believe it will make less oil available. If less oil is available, the price goes up, not down, for those items that come from crude oil.

Does the proponent of the amendment have any kind of analysis as to what would happen to the prices if companies stop selling some portion of the current imports to the United States? That is a very interesting question. I believe what would happen is the opposite of what is intended. If this is intended to penalize the companies, rather than being a tax on oil, I assure you that if it is a tax on oil, the price will go up, not down. It seems there is no argument about that. If the price goes up because of the tax, does the gasoline coming from the crude oil go down so our consumers get a break? Of course not. The price goes up. So we do not get a break; we get the opposite. We get an increase. And under the guise of a good bill to help American consumers, we get one that clearly will scalp them. They will pay more, rather than less, and we will have some money to claim to our taxpayers that we are giving them back because we are hurting big oil, which seems to be the intention of this amendment.

I also note this amendment allows the oil sellers to avoid a part of the tax if they invest it in new oil wells drilled in areas of the country that are not proven up as gas properties. That is very interesting. They cannot invest it in oilfields that are proven up that require money to drill. They cannot do that. It has to be new oilfields. I ask if the proponent of the amendment would submit a list of unproven areas in the United States where the drilling of oil is supported. Where are the fields for new production that are supported? Frankly, every field you try you cannot get it done because of some objection or another. In fact, I ask the sponsor, more particularly, would he submit to the Senate a list of unproven areas where he, the distinguished Senator, supports drilling new fields? It would be all right if he gave a list that are supported not necessarily by the Senator but by any authentic group.

In its totality, let me summarize: This is not a tax on the oil companies. This is a tax on oil. It will not produce more oil to tax oil. It will not produce lower costs to the consumer by taxing oil. It is very logical if you say: Here is a product for sale for $150. That is the established price. But now the municipality says: Let's have a 15-percent sales tax or a 50-percent tax on the profits or whatever we determine. That makes the price of the product go up, not down. The same will happen with oil. Tax the product, the price goes up. Tax the company on profits, unless they do something, the price goes up, not down.

It would be impossible for the energy companies to invest the money in a timely manner in the manner prescribed. I cannot imagine $3 billion or $4 billion being invested in 1 year in the items recommended by the Congress that knows best where companies should spend it. It seems to me they would have to pay the windfall. They could not do the investing.

There is much more to say. There is no question this will cost the consumers more, not less. Gasoline will go up, not down. The supplies will be less, not more. All of which we do not want. All of which I would think the sponsor of the amendment would not want. It is an absolute certainty that is what will happen.

I yield back the remainder of my time, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from California is recognized to offer two amendments with 30 minutes of debate on each amendment, equally divided.

Mr. REID. If I could direct a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader.

Mr. REID. It is my understanding that Senator FEINSTEIN and Senator WYDEN have 30 minutes equally divided.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. No, it is 30 minutes in opposition.

Mr. REID. You have 15?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. We have 15 minutes; I have two amendments.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent, following the 15 minutes of the two Senators, WYDEN and FEINSTEIN, I be recognized to use some of my leadership time.

AMENDMENT NO. 2609

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, this amendment would strike a tax incentive from the books for the oil and gas companies that allows them to expense their exploration and development costs.

This tax credit is unnecessary, not because I say that it is, but because the oil companies have said they do not need it. The President of the United States has said the oil companies do not need it, and the Joint Committee on Taxation estimates this tax credit costs the Federal Treasury $2.4 billion over 5 years.

I wish to make clear that this amendment only repeals the credit for the major integrated oil companies—ExxonMobil, Shell, BP, Chevron, and ConocoPhillips. This tax credit allows major oil companies, such as the ones I have just mentioned, to deduct 70 percent of their drilling costs up front, then the next 30 percent over the course of 5 years. Costs that can be deducted include workers' wages, fuel costs, drilling equipment, materials, and supplies, et cetera.

Now, why should the oil and gas industry get special treatment? And why should they get tax breaks from the Federal Government when they are making record profits? In the third quarter of 2005 alone, the five biggest companies earned a staggering combined total of more than $30 billion.

ExxonMobil's profits skyrocketed another 75 percent in the third quarter to almost $10 billion. Over the first 9 months of 2005, ExxonMobil made a profit of $25.42 billion.

BP made 34 percent more, or $6.46 billion, in the third quarter of 2005. So far this year, BP has made $18.66 billion.

Shell's profits soared 68 percent to $9 billion in the third quarter of 2005, while making $20.94 billion over the first 9 months of the year.

Chevron's third-quarter profits were 12 percent higher, or $3.6 billion. So far this year, Chevron made $10 billion.

ConocoPhillips saw an 89 percent increase or $3.8 billion in the third quarter, while making a profit of $9.85 billion over the first 9 months of the year.

At the same time this is happening, the Federal budget deficit is the third largest in history, totaling $319 billion, and the national debt has surpassed the $8 trillion mark.

In April of this year, President Bush stated:

> With oil at more than $50 a barrel, by the way, energy companies do not need taxpayers'-funded incentives to explore for oil and gas.

At the joint Senate hearing last week, at which the CEOs of ExxonMobil, Chevron, ConocoPhillips, BP, and Shell testified, Senator WYDEN asked them if, given the fact that oil prices are above $55 per barrel, they needed these Federal tax incentives. They all responded "No." In fact, Lee Raymond of ExxonMobil stated this: "No and I don't think our company has asked for any incentives for exploration."

Now, I see Senator WYDEN is in the Chamber, and since I have quoted him, I would like to ask him if I have accurately reported what happened at this Senate joint hearing with the oil executives.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, the Senator from California has accurately reported it.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Let me ask this question. Did the Senator get the idea from all of the big oil companies that none of them wanted these tax incentives?

Mr. WYDEN. What is so staggering is, when these big oil companies are charging record prices, making record profits, they are being given record tax subsidies that they show up and tell the American people they do not want.

So I intend to speak on this after the distinguished Senator from California is done. But she has an excellent amendment. I say to the Senator, you have characterized their testimony correctly.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Senator from Oregon.

In essence, Mr. President, this is the biggest handout to the biggest corporations in America—as a matter of fact, in the world. We should not be giving them a tax break so they can do their job—to drill for oil—when they certainly do not need it.

Again, let me be clear: this is a tax credit for the major oil companies only. It should not surprise anyone to learn that these same oil companies' effective tax rates were well below 35 percent. In 2001, their tax rate was 17.3 percent; in 2002, 5.6 percent; in 2003, 13.3 percent. This averages out to 13.3 percent over the 3-year period.

By contrast, 14 industries have higher effective tax rates. The health care industry is 22.3 percent; the financial industry, 19.7 percent; pharmaceuticals pay 21.6 percent; the chemical industry, 20.8 percent; the computer industry, 16 percent; tobacco and food industries, 23.8 percent—and on and on and on, and yet the oil companies pay very little.

So not only are these energy tax incentives taking money out of the Treasury, they are also allowing oil companies to lower their effective tax rate so that less money actually flows from them into the Treasury. That is unacceptable. They say they do not need it. The President says they do not need it. And this would essentially correct that situation.

When this tax bill was considered, the Finance Committee recognized this fact and repealed the amortization of geological and geophysical expenditures for the major integrated oil companies. It also changed the way oil companies with gross receipts over $1 billion can account for their oil inventories. The amendment I offer today takes one more step in taking away unnecessary tax breaks for the oil and gas industry.

So, Mr. President, I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this amendment. I thank the cosponsors.

AMENDMENT NO. 2610

Now, Mr. President, I would like to speak for a moment on the second amendment, which I call the millionaire's amendment, which is offered to my colleagues by Senator KERRY and me.

I have never had a millionaire come to me and say: I need a tax break. I have had them come to me and say: Frankly, the $100,000 I get a year is de minimis to me. It doesn't make a difference to me.

So I wonder, when we are cutting Medicaid, when we are cutting virtually every domestic program we can cut, why millionaires get $100,000 in tax breaks a year. It does not make sense. They do not ask for them. They do not need them. It does not really make a difference to them.

Our amendment directly targets the budget deficit. It says if the budget is not in balance, tax rates for income, capital gains, and dividends will return to previous levels, and deduction limits, for taxpayers earning more than $1 million. So those taxes would be reinstated only for people earning more than $1 million. According to the Joint Committee on Taxation and the Tax Policy Center, this amendment could increase revenues by more than $100 billion over 5 years.

When I came to the Senate in 1992, the debt was $4 trillion. In the 1990s, we put it down, and by 1998, we achieved the first budget surplus in 29 years. By 2001, the 10-year projected surplus was $5.6 trillion. Now, it has been said on this floor over and over again that projected surplus has been turned into a major projected long-term deficit. The Federal budget deficit will reach $515 billion this year when all trust funds are included. This means over half a trillion dollars will be added to our Nation's debt—a national debt that has already exceeded the $8 trillion mark. Yet millionaires get a $100,000 tax break a year, which they have told me they don't need, it doesn't make a difference. At the same time, this debt and deficit will fuel a rise in interest rates. There have already been a dozen hikes. It will eventually slow down the economy, and it will certainly limit job creation.

In order to cover the costs of our debt, this Senate cut $10 billion in health care spending for the poorest Americans. To make matters worse, the temporary relief for physicians in the spending bill is borne on the backs of Medicare beneficiaries in the form of higher Part B premiums. The spending cuts will directly increase, by $2.90, the amount Medicare beneficiaries pay each month in premiums in 2007. That is a 33-percent increase in monthly premiums. While it is vital that Congress prevent future cuts in Medicare reimbursement to physicians, the spending cuts amounted to a $1.4 billion tax on seniors. This is simply unacceptable.

I do not think it is a bad idea to say that millionaires might be willing to help people on Medicare. They might be willing to provide some support for Medicaid so that the poorest Americans could receive health care.

So here is the bottom line: Realistically, there are very few millionaires in my State. There are about 28,000—28,000 out of 37 million people. The number of people on Medicare and Medicaid affected by these cuts is in the millions. That is the difference. So if you restore this tax for millionaires, it essentially covers the cuts on Medicare and Medicaid.

Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eleven and a half minutes.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I understand that Senator WYDEN would like to use some of this time. I would be happy to allot him—how much time does the Senator require?

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I think 7 minutes would be fine.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask Senator FEINSTEIN, would it be OK if I use my leader time now?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. This doesn't take away from their time, Mr. President.

Thank you very much. I appreciate the courtesy. It is so nice of you to let me do this. I know everyone is waiting to offer their amendments. This is leader time. It comes off of the bill.

IRAQ

Mr. President, last night, on the heels of two very bloody days in Iraq where 11 American soldiers have been killed, the President and the Vice President shamelessly decided to play politics. It was another deplorable political ploy from an administration that is growing more and more and more desperate and disconnected. The American people and our brave soldiers deserve better.

It seems the President and Vice President have decided to treat the war as if it is a political campaign. Instead of giving our troops a plan for success or answering the serious questions of the American people, they have decided to reignite the Rove-Cheney attack machine.

We are at war. We need a Commander in Chief, not a Campaigner in Chief. We need leadership from the White House, not more White House-washing of the very serious issues confronting us in Iraq.

This week, Senate Democrats and Republicans, right here in this Senate, voted overwhelmingly to send the President this message: It is time to change course in Iraq.

Instead of heeding that call, the White House continues to dodge and to duck the questions of Americans and to smear their opponents. That is not leadership, and our troops and the American people deserve better.

Here is what Senator CHUCK HAGEL said. Now, who is CHUCK HAGEL? CHUCK HAGEL is a decorated Vietnam war veteran, a man who, in Vietnam, saved the life of his own brother. Of course, he is also a senior Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Here is what he had to say about the administration's tactics. These are not my words. They are the words of the Senator from Nebraska:

> Suggesting that to challenge or criticize policy is undermining or hurting our troops is not democracy, nor what this country has stood for, for over 200 years . . . To question your government is not unpatriotic—to not question your government is unpatriotic. America owes its men and women in uniform a policy worthy of their sacrifices.

He is right. The deceiving, dividing, and distorting must end. Of course, this is the same move we have seen from Karl Rove and DICK CHENEY time and time again. Whenever their poll numbers sink, they go back on the attack. This time, though, the stakes are too high to let them get away with it. There is more than poll numbers or votes at stake. The lives of our brave soldiers in Iraq depend on this President coming clean and coming forward with a plan for Iraq.

President Bush, Vice President CHENEY, and Karl Rove must stop the orchestrated attack campaign they launched on Veterans Day. It is a weak, spineless display of politics at a time of war. It is easy to attack. The hard part is leading, coming clean with the American people, and giving our troops a strategy for success.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. Parliamentary inquiry: My understanding is that if I take about 7 minutes or so to discuss the Feinstein-Wyden, and others, amendment with respect to energy, that would still leave the Senator from California about 5 minutes to conclude for our side?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I am happy to yield the balance of my time to the Senator from Oregon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California has 3 minutes remaining.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I yield my 3 minutes to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I asked for some time. Do I have time, then, following the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. WYDEN. I ask unanimous consent that Senator FEINSTEIN and I have 10 additional minutes. Senator THOMAS would be afforded the same amount, so that the total amount for this provision would only be expanded at a maximum amount of 20 minutes. I would take 5 minutes from our side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask my good friend to cut that down significantly. We are oversubscribed in time. It is a zero-sum game. Extra time you take means less time for other Senators later on. I urge you to modify your request to a much lower number, please.

Mr. WYDEN. The Senator from Montana is gracious. Does the Senator from California need any additional time?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I am yielding my remaining 3 minutes to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, if I could have 3 additional minutes so I could speak for a total of up to 6 minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. Let's make it 5 and 5.

Mr. WYDEN. That would be fine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Oregon is recognized for 5 minutes.

AMENDMENT NO. 2609

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, with the CEOs of the major oil companies admitting that they do not need tax breaks, Democrats and Republicans in the Senate are signaling that it is a new day as far as energy taxes. For the first time in 20 years, the Senate is on the brink of cutting back on a portion of the billions of dollars in tax breaks the major oil companies receive annually.

The long march toward reforming the energy provisions in our Tax Code began a couple of days ago, when the Senate Finance Committee accepted my amendment that would limit a brand-new tax break in the 2005 Energy bill that would allow the oil companies to get faster write-offs for their exploration costs. That amendment was, in my view, a beginning at rolling back unnecessary tax breaks. Today, a bipartisan group, under the leadership of Senator FEINSTEIN and Senator SUNUNU, are building on that.

It is preposterous for the Senate to keep voting out tax breaks for the major oil companies when these executives go on national television and say they aren't needed. At a time when the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program doesn't have enough funds, at a time when Americans are hurting all across the country, I don't know how it is possible for a Member of the Senate to stand up and say: We are going to continue to dispense tax favors that the oil industry says are not needed.

What I did in the Finance Committee, what Senator FEINSTEIN is building on today, is to say we are going to do a better job in the future of targeting scarce resources. In this case we are going to limit the tax breaks to the small and independent producers. Even with that, the fact is that over the past 2 years, oil companies have already increased their drilling operations, as the price of oil has skyrocketed from $45 per barrel to over $70. The number of rigs in operation and the amount of drilling have both increased by a third since 2003.

Special treatment of oil and gas costs in the Tax Code is exactly the kind of special interest tax break we ought to be working, on a bipartisan basis, to eliminate. By eliminating this and other special-interest tax breaks, it will be possible to simplify the Code, help to lower tax rates, and, most specifically, let the energy markets work, let capital flow to its highest and best use.

This is a pretty big day in the Senate. Literally for 20 years, the Senate has been pouring it on in terms of one tax break after another for the major oil companies. If you look at the statutes, the statutes are not confining these tax breaks to the small independent producer. My legislation in the Senate Finance Committee did just that. I heard the pleas of a number of colleagues on the Finance Committee who said: Be careful about the small independent producers. I did that. We passed it in the Finance Committee.

Senator FEINSTEIN and Senator SUNUNU have picked up on that theme. This is not going to take anything away from the small independent producers, but it is a big first step at reforming the Tax Code and keeping taxpayers' hard-earned money, when major oil executives say they don't need those dollars for tax breaks.

I hope the Senate will support the Feinstein-Sununu amendment, and take the next step in this effort to reform the Tax Code.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, here we are again, faced with another opportunity to make it more difficult for us to meet our needs in energy. Interestingly enough, people on the west coast who need the energy more than anyone seem to be pushing for this.

There is a misunderstanding here as to what has been done. But these tax opportunities are particularly the cost of conducting oil and gas exploration and production, particularly offshore, the difficult ones, the high-cost offshore drilling, the kinds of things we are going to have to get into to continue to have it. We have about expanded all the regular drilling we can. Here is an opportunity to do something unusual. By the way, I think there has been a little misunderstanding on the question that was asked. The question that was asked, as I understand it, was on geology, G&G, which was in the bill. They said they didn't need that. This is not G&G. This is another issue.

Mr. WYDEN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS. No, I am not going to yield. Thank you.

This is a little different issue than we talked about before. If you would ask these people, do they need it to do these kinds of drilling on the intangibles, that is not geology, which is the one they were talking about, the G&G issue that was in there.

Here again, we went through this in another amendment. We continue to do the same thing. We have spent all this time trying to get an energy bill out there to try to encourage new ways to look at energy, trying to look at new opportunities for energy, all of which are very important. Quite frankly, living in a State where we do a lot of this, the people who are willing and able to put the investment in these kinds of new approaches are not the independents. They are the larger companies. They are the integrated companies that are able to do this.

This continuing idea that somehow these people are too rich—I had my chart out here a little while ago, talking about the return on revenue and profits. They were down below the middle of all the other industries. If we want to talk about taking away windfall profits and giving it back to everyone, you are starting with the wrong industry. We ought to be talking about the 10 or 12 industries that have a higher return on their sales than do the people in this business of producing the fuel and the energy we need to keep our economy going.

If we want to look at having jobs, if we want to look at a growing economy, it is very clear. The more we see of it, the more we see of having to get offshore oil, the more we see of having to do, which we should, conservation and other things, the more important it is for us to have an opportunity to begin to continue to move into new sources of energy, the ones that are more difficult.

This amendment is just another one to inhibit that, based on the idea that the oil companies are getting too much of a profit. Again, take a look at the facts. They are not, compared to others. The return has been a reasonable one, and I believe we ought to not adopt this kind of an amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Washington is recognized to offer an amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2612

Ms. CANTWELL. I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Washington [Ms. CANTWELL], for herself, Mr. BAYH, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. SCHUMER, Mrs. BOXER, and Mr. CARPER, proposes an amendment numbered 2612.

Ms. CANTWELL. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To improve the Federal Trade Commission's ability to protect consumers from price-gouging during energy emergencies, and for other purposes)

At the end of the bill, insert the following:

TITLE I—ENERGY EMERGENCY CONSUMER PROTECTION

SEC. ___. UNFAIR OR DECEPTIVE ACTS OR PRACTICES IN COMMERCE RELATED TO GASOLINE AND PETROLEUM DISTILLATES.

(a) SALES TO CONSUMERS AT UNCONSCIONABLE PRICE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—During any energy emergency declared by the President under section 3, it is unlawful for any person to sell crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillates in, or for use in, the area to which that declaration applies at a price that—

(A) is unconscionably excessive; or

(B) indicates the seller is taking unfair advantage of the circumstances to increase prices unreasonably.

(2) FACTORS CONSIDERED.—In determining whether a violation of paragraph (1) has occurred, there shall be taken into account, among other factors, whether—

(A) the amount charged represents a gross disparity between the price of the crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillate sold and the price at which it was offered for sale in the usual course of the seller's business immediately prior to the energy emergency; or

(B) the amount charged grossly exceeds the price at which the same or similar crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillate was readily obtainable by other purchasers in the area to which the declaration applies.

(3) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a violation of paragraph (1) has occurred, there also shall be taken into account, among other factors, the price that would reasonably equate supply and demand in a competitive and freely functioning market and whether the price at which the crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillate was sold reasonably reflects additional costs, not within the control of the seller, that were paid or incurred by the seller.

(b) FALSE PRICING INFORMATION.—It is unlawful for any person to report information related to the wholesale price of crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillates to the Federal Trade Commission if—

(1) that person knew, or reasonably should have known, the information to be false or misleading;

(2) the information was required by law to be reported; and

(3) the person intended the false or misleading data to affect data compiled by that department or agency for statistical or analytical purposes with respect to the market for crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillates.

(c) MARKET MANIPULATION.—It is unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, to use or employ, in connection with the purchase or sale of crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillates at wholesale, any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance, in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of United States citizens.

SEC. . DECLARATION OF ENERGY EMERGENCY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—If the President finds that the health, safety, welfare, or economic well-being of the citizens of the United States is at risk because of a shortage or imminent shortage of adequate supplies of crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillates due to a disruption in the national distribution system for crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillates (including such a shortage related to a major disaster (as defined in section 102(2) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122))), or significant pricing anomalies in national energy markets for crude oil, gasoline, or petroleum distillates, the President may declare that a Federal energy emergency exists.

(b) SCOPE AND DURATION.—The declaration shall apply to the Nation, a geographical region, or 1 or more States, as determined by the President, but may not be in effect for a period of more than 45 days.

(c) EXTENSIONS.—The President may—

(1) extend a declaration under subsection (a) for a period of not more than 45 days; and

(2) extend such a declaration more than once.

SEC. ___. ENFORCEMENT UNDER FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT.

(a) ENFORCEMENT BY COMMISSION.—This Act shall be enforced by the Federal Trade Commission. In enforcing section 2(a) of this Act, the Commission shall give priority to enforcement actions concerning companies with total United States wholesale or retail sales of crude oil, gasoline, and petroleum distillates in excess of $500,000,000 per year but shall not exclude enforcement actions against companies with total United States wholesale sales of $500,000,000 or less per year.

(b) VIOLATION IS UNFAIR OR DECEPTIVE ACT OR PRACTICE.—The violation of any provision of this Act shall be treated as an unfair or deceptive act or practice proscribed under a rule issued under section 18(a)(1)(B) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57a(a)(1)(B)).

SEC. . ENFORCEMENT AT RETAIL LEVEL BY STATE ATTORNEYS GENERAL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A State, as parens patriae, may bring a civil action on behalf of its residents in an appropriate district court of the United States to enforce the provisions of section 2(a) of this Act, or to impose the civil penalties authorized by section 6 for violations of section 2(a), whenever the attorney general of the State has reason to believe that the interests of the residents of the State have been or are being threatened or adversely affected by a person engaged in retail sales of gasoline or petroleum distillates to consumers for purposes other than resale that violates this Act or a regulation under this Act.

(b) NOTICE.—The State shall serve written notice to the Commission of any civil action under subsection (a) prior to initiating such civil action. The notice shall include a copy of the complaint to be filed to initiate such civil action, except that if it is not feasible for the State to provide such prior notice, the State shall provide such notice immediately upon instituting such civil action.

(c) AUTHORITY TO INTERVENE.—Upon receiving the notice required by subsection (b), the Commission may intervene in such civil action and upon intervening—

(1) be heard on all matters arising in such civil action; and

(2) file petitions for appeal of a decision in such civil action.

(d) CONSTRUCTION.—For purposes of bringing any civil action under subsection (a), nothing in this section shall prevent the attorney general of a State from exercising the powers conferred on the attorney general by the laws of such State to conduct investigations or to administer oaths or affirmations or to compel the attendance of witnesses or the production of documentary and other evidence.

(e) VENUE; SERVICE OF PROCESS.—In a civil action brought under subsection (a)—

(1) the venue shall be a judicial district in which—

(A) the defendant operates;

(B) the defendant was authorized to do business; or

(C) where the defendant in the civil action is found;

(2) process may be served without regard to the territorial limits of the district or of the State in which the civil action is instituted; and

(3) a person who participated with the defendant in an alleged violation that is being litigated in the civil action may be joined in the civil action without regard to the residence of the person.

(f) LIMITATION ON STATE ACTION WHILE FEDERAL ACTION IS PENDING.—If the Commission has instituted a civil action or an administrative action for violation of this Act, no State attorney general, or official or agency of a State, may bring an action under this subsection during the pendency of that action against any defendant named in the complaint of the Commission or the other agency for any violation of this Act alleged in the complaint.

(g) ENFORCEMENT OF STATE LAW.—Nothing contained in this section shall prohibit an authorized State official from proceeding in State court to enforce a civil or criminal statute of such State.

SEC. ___. PENALTIES.

(a) CIVIL PENALTY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any penalty applicable under the Federal Trade Commission Act—

(A) any person who violates section 2(b) or 2(c) of this Act is punishable by a civil penalty of not more than $1,000,000; and

(B) any person who violates section 2(a) of this Act is punishable by a civil penalty of not more than $3,000,000.

(3) MULTIPLE OFFENSES; MITIGATING FACTORS.—In assessing the penalty provided by subsection (a)—

(A) each day of a continuing violation shall be considered a separate violation; and

(B) the Commission shall take into consideration the seriousness of the violation and the efforts of the person committing the violation to remedy the harm caused by the violation in a timely manner.

(b) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—Violation of section 2(a) of this Act is punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000,000, imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

SEC. . EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) OTHER AUTHORITY OF COMMISSION.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit or affect in any way the Commission's authority to bring enforcement actions or take any other measure under the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.) or any other provision of law.

(b) STATE LAW.—Nothing in this Act preempts any State law.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, my amendment is based on S. 1735 which has been sponsored by about 29 of my colleagues. I certainly appreciate the fact that this amendment is being cosponsored by Senators BAYH, SCHUMER, BOXER, CARPER, and LIEBERMAN. I thank my colleagues for paying attention to what I believe is a very important issue for us to address before we adjourn; that is, the issue of price gouging and the fact that the Senate should say loud and clear that we think price gouging should be a Federal crime. That is exactly what my amendment does. It creates a new Federal statute to make sure that consumers are protected from price gouging.

How did we arrive at this point? While my colleagues, I am sure, would like to adjourn and continue to think about the complications and challenges, the American economy is being hurt by the high price of gasoline, as we saw this summer prior to Katrina. Certainly, we are anxious about the winter months and home heating oil and the costs that consumers are going to pay when they get their bills in the next couple of months.

It is important to note that Americans will spend over $200 billion more on energy this year than they did last year. That is hundreds of billions of dollars coming directly out of family budgets and the bottom lines of businesses across the country. The airline industry is expected to spend $30 billion more on fuel alone this year, which is twice what they spent in 2003. In fact, if you look at what the airline industry is expected to lose this year, it is about $9.5 billion. If you look at the increase in the expense of fuel costs for the airline industry, it is $9.2 billion.

For the airline industry, there is a high correlation between their actual loss and the amount they are paying in higher fuel costs. For the trucking industry, where diesel fuel accounts for almost a quarter of their operating expenses, each penny increase in diesel fuel costs the trucking industry $350 million a year. And what about our farmers who are obviously on low profit margins—about 5 percent—and their challenge? Well, they have had a combination of record diesel fuel costs and price increases of fertilizer of more than 20 percent. So it makes it very challenging for the American farmer to be competitive in this kind of environment.

What about the Air Force? I know the Presiding Officer is interested in the Air Force. The Air Force energy budget is expected to increase 50 percent this year, costing taxpayers another $400 million. Even the Postal Service is paying higher fuel prices, expecting to add another $300 million to the Postal Service transportation costs.

And what about the taxpayers? Well, they pay every week at the pump for higher fuel costs and they want us to protect them. But I don't know if they know that the taxpayers are even paying more for the President's travel. According to reports, the per-hour fuel cost for the travel of Air Force One has increased from $3,974 to now $6,029.

The cost of energy integrated into our economy is costing us all more money and at a time when we are seeing oil companies reach record profits and billions are being sent to countries such as Saudi Arabia, Iran, and Venezuela. I guarantee you do not have our interests at heart.

I am offering an amendment today to say that price gouging is a Federal crime and we should pass this before we adjourn.

Why is it so important to pass new Federal legislation? First, there are 28 States in America, the District of Columbia included, Gulf States such as Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, and Texas, that currently have price-gouging statutes on the books. These States have taken legal action to try to make sure that gas distributors or service stations or oil companies are investigated when allegations of price gouging have occurred, and certainly when you have a state of emergency as we have had after hurricanes. So these State statutes are the very statutes we are saying ought to be in Federal law.

As to examples of how these have been prosecuted at the State level, retailers have been charged with unconscionable pricing attributed to an increase in unreasonable wholesale gasoline prices or because gasoline, oil, or fuel commodities in general are raised to what is an unconscionable price. We based this on what is a New York statute that has been upheld in court. I think it is very important to note that the Federal court system has taken this term of unconscionable pricing and has Federal case law related to it.

Why did we get to this point? We got to this point primarily because current Federal law and the focus of the FTC has been whether there has been collusive pricing activities by these oil companies, collusive meaning whether they got together and fixed the price.

That Federal statute gives very little room to investigate and examine what I believe are key issues about supply and demand. We hear a lot from the oil industry that this is about simple economics and supply and demand.

I guarantee you we ought to be demanding more information about the possible manipulation of supply and why supply was exported out of the United States at a time when it was so needed for American consumers.

We need to pass a Federal price-gouging law to make sure that the current law on the books does not leave us emptyhanded when coming to pursue this issue and to make our point in protecting the American consumers.

This last week we heard from attorneys general at a joint hearing of the Senate Commerce Committee and the Senate Energy Committee talking about this issue. One attorney general from New Jersey, Peter Harvey, who has utilized his own statute on antiprice gouging, told us:

> We need a Federal price gouging statute that applies nationwide to the sale of essential goods and services.

I am also pleased that the attorney general from New York—as I said, we have based this statute on New York law—has also championed this legislation in a letter of support that I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
New York, NY, November 8, 2005.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
Chairman, Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN STEVENS: thank you for your letter seeking input on the issue of gasoline price gouging, and in particular whether Congress should pass legislation increasing the FTC's powers in this area.

In the aftermath of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, my office received numerous complaints about the escalation of the price of motor fuel. In response, we launched an investigation and demanded information from about 75 gas stations around New York State that had been the subject of complaints. In those cases where retailers appear to have raised prices more than warranted based on their increased costs, we have undertaken further analysis to determine whether these stations have violated New York's price gouging law (New York General Business Law §396–r). Our investigation is ongoing, and we will vigorously pursue any cases where we determine that illegal price gouging has occurred.

As you undoubtedly are aware, a consumer's view of price gouging usually is focused locally on rising prices at the gas pump or the increase in heating costs over the previous winter, and their complaints are directed at state and local officials. Thus, retail manifestations of price gouging are best suited to on-the-ground scrutiny that state and local officials can provide.

However, the marketplaces for motor fuel and home heating fuel are complex, and are international in scope. If a large oil conglomerate abuses its market position during a real or perceived crisis, the effect is likely to be felt in many (or even all) states. Accordingly, there are levels in the chain of distribution where federal assistance would be both helpful and appropriate.

The FTC is particularly well suited to regulate price gouging in the motor fuel market. As indicated in the FTC's testimony to the House Subcommittee on Commerce, Trade and Consumer Protection on September 22, 2005, FTC staff already actively and routinely monitor prices at all levels of gasoline distribution and, as stated in the testimony, "[n]o industry's performance is more deeply felt or carefully scrutinized by the FTC." Currently, the FTC can act against such companies if they unlawfully agree to fix prices, but cannot act if unfair pricing practices occur simultaneously, but without collusion.

Recently, it was widely reported that oil industry profits soared during the third quarter of 2005, which includes the weeks when the hurricanes affected the Gulf Coast. The net income of Exxon Mobil rose 75% during that period, earning $9.92 billion in profit, and the profits of Royal Dutch/Shell increased by 68% during the third quarter. The Government Accountability Office (GAO) concluded that retail prices rose faster than the price of crude oil, and the magnitude of these increases suggest that the disruption caused by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita may have been exploited by the major oil companies to levy price increases not directly related to increased expenses.

For these reasons, I believe that expanded federal powers in this area are warranted. In particular: the President should be given the power to declare a temporary energy emergency at times of threatened or actual disruption of petroleum supplies, such as occurred during the recent hurricanes; declaration of such an emergency should trigger a prohibition against price gouging; there also should be a ban on manipulative pricing practices in the petroleum markets, similar to what Congress recently adopted for the electricity and natural gas markets; and there should be significant penalties to deter such conduct, and both the FTC and state Attorneys General should be permitted to enforce these violations.

I urge the Senate Commerce Committee to expeditiously consider and pass the Energy Emergency Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (S. 1735), which includes all of these provisions as part of a comprehensive approach to the problem. The bill was introduced on September 20, 2005 by Senator Cantwell, and would provide law enforcement with vitally needed tools to prevent price gouging, as well as allow greater federal scrutiny of possible market manipulation practices.

Thank you once again for soliciting my input on this important issue. It is essential that Congress, federal regulators and state law enforcement officials work together to prevent the types of abusive pricing practices that we have recently witnessed. By doing so, we will be able to protect motorists, homeowners, farmers and businesses across the country.

Very truly yours,

ELIOT SPITZER,
Attorney General.

Ms. CANTWELL. Attorney General Spitzer says:

> Accordingly, there are levels in the chain of distribution where Federal assistance would be both helpful and appropriate . . .
>
> Currently, the FTC can act against such companies if they unlawfully agree to fix price, but cannot act if unfair practices occur simultaneously but without collusion.

I think the Attorney General of New York has it right as to why we need this Federal statute.

We also want to make sure we are recognizing in the next several months what further damage is going to happen to the economy if we do not act, that is, if we leave here without getting a good Federal statute on the books.

For example, in my home State a farmer from Lamont, WA, wrote to tell me that his fertilizer prices have gone up 75 percent since May and 100 percent since last year, and fuel costs have gone from $2 to $3.15. Another eastern Washington farmer told me he is paying more for a gallon of fuel than he received for a bushel of grain. So these farmers are looking at this issue, and as Senator ROBERTS said the other day, the agricultural industry is facing something like a category 5 fuel and fertilizer hurricane. We can't leave these farmers emptyhanded this winter as we go away, without enacting a good, strong Federal statute.

Home heating oil is another issue in which consumers are going to feel an impact. For an American family, it is believed that they will pay an average of $306 or 41 percent more this winter than they did last winter. So we certainly want to implement the Federal statute to protect them during these winter months. I can tell you people are worried in my State. Unfortunately, our local jurisdictions are doing their best, but I think it shows what kind of anxiety Americans have about being able to keep warm this winter.

In my State, in Whatcom County, after the Whatcom County Opportunity Council advertised last week they would take up the low-income energy assistance applications but would only take 200 walk-ins or the first 400 phone-ins, they had over 200 people line up outside their doors, some people standing outside all night long, just to receive assistance from this program, and the local phone service, Verizon, called to say that the unusual volume of incoming calls trying to get energy assistance basically crashed the system for the entire area. I can tell you consumers are anxious about these high fuel costs.

We are dealing in the Senate with airline bankruptcies and pensions. I can tell you the airline industry has been hardest hit by the increase in fuel costs. As Southwest Airline CEO Steve Kelly told the Seattle Times recently:

> We are now facing energy prices that no airlines can make money at, at least with today's [ticket prices].

I want to make sure we do not have other pensions that are defaulted on, other people losing their jobs or their life savings because we have not enacted tough legislation saying that price gouging is a Federal crime.

The amendment I am offering today does a couple of things. First, it creates a ban on price gouging during a national emergency declared by the President of the United States. As I said earlier, the antiprice gouging standard is based on the successfully tested New York State statute.

Second, it gives the FTC and AGs and, because it creates criminal penalties, the Department of Justice the authority to levy civil and criminal penalties for proven price gouging of up to $3 million and 5 years in jail. Additionally it puts in place a new ban on market manipulation and falsifying information to the Federal Government about fuel prices, which is based on a provision of the Energy bill we passed here this year related to electricity and natural gas, trying to stop the market manipulation that happened in response to Enron and the market manipulation in the western energy crisis.

In addition, the bill gives additional remedies available to the FTC to levy fines up to $1 million for violation of market manipulation and false information.

I am very satisfied that this bill has the teeth in it that we need in a strong Federal statute to over the next several months give the Federal Government, attorneys general, and others the ability to prosecute market manipulation of energy prices.

Why do I think this is so important? My colleagues have been on the floor talking about the questions that were asked to oil company executives this week, the questions about whether they cared about tax incentives or tax breaks, whether they participated in energy meetings. My questions were more about the supply of fuel here in the United States and whether we have a greater understanding about the protection and possible manipulation of that fuel supply.

Now for my colleagues in the West who have been out on the floor, we have reeled from an energy crisis on electricity, and my colleagues, Senators WYDEN from Oregon and FEINSTEIN from California, all had economies that were very hurt by the manipulation of the electricity market. In fact, there are some cases in Federal courts now talking about the manipulation of natural gas prices. So I guarantee you with five refineries in the State of Washington, we are doing our part at refining fuel, but we still have some of the highest gas prices in the Nation and had those prior to Katrina, so my constituents want to know what are we going to do to make sure the prices are not manipulated.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from attorneys general across the country who are also supporting my legislation.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NOVEMBER 17, 2005.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
Chairman, Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, U.S. Senate, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.
Hon. DANIEL INOUYE,
Co-Chairman, Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, U.S. Senate, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN STEVENS AND CO-CHAIRMAN INOUYE: Even before the devastation caused by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, skyrocketing oil and gasoline prices were taxing American families and burdening our nation's economy—with the notable exception of the oil industry which continued to rack up record profits. In fact, according to the Department of Energy, Americans will spend over $200 billion more on energy this year than they did last year, totaling over one trillion dollars. These expenses seem directly proportional to the extraordinary $33 billion in profits reported by the five major oil companies for the third quarter of 2005. Exxon Mobil alone made an unconscionable $10 billion last quarter, a 75 percent increase over last year. Moreover, the profit that refiners are collecting from gasoline sales has reportedly more than tripled from $7 per barrel in September 2004 to over $22 per barrel on September 27, 2005.

Given the extraordinary impact these energy costs have on families, farmers, and businesses across America, we commend your joint efforts with the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee to hold a hearing last Wednesday to try, as Senator Majority Leader Frist put it, to "examine reasons for high energy prices." Given our society's absolute dependency on fossil fuels—whether to power our transportation system, keep our families warm this winter, or countless other uses—both American consumers and the economy are extremely vulnerable to the whims of those with sufficient market power to artificially constrain supply or influence prices.

As the chief law enforcement officers of our respective states, we are writing to urge you to pass federal legislation that imposes a ban on energy price gouging. Any bill must also provide new market transparency and market manipulation authorities for the President and the Federal Trade Commission to better protect consumers in the future.

To this end, we respectfully urge the Senate Commerce Committee to expeditiously consider and pass Senate Bill 1735. While 28 states already have price gouging laws on the books, the Energy Emergency Consumer Protection Act of 2005 introduced by Senator Maria Cantwell on September 20, 2005 and cosponsored by nearly a third of the U.S. Senate, in our opinion would provide law enforcement with vitally needed tools to prevent price gouging. S. 1735 would also finally shine a bright light on the practices of oil companies and refiners—a sector of the economy that historically has not received close > scrutiny from federal or state regulators. In addition, we strongly support section five which empowers States with the authority to pursue civil actions on behalf of their residents for violations of price gouging prohibitions.

> We look forward to working with you on this critical issue to the American public and our nation's economy. With ninety percent of Americans believing price gouging is occurring at the pumps, we have a responsibility to do everything we can to ensure it is not taking place. We believe the Energy Emergency Consumer Protection Act of 2005 can do that. Even if we determine that there is no market manipulation going on, then it would be a case of "no harm, no foul." Passage will help assure the public that government is providing the oversight they demand.
>
> Sincerely,
> Eliot Spitzer, New York Attorney General; Lisa Madigan, Illinois Attorney General; Bill Lockyer, California Attorney General; J. Joseph Curran, Jr., Maryland Attorney General; Tom Reilly, Massachusetts Attorney General; Peggy Lautenschlager, Wisconsin Attorney General; Patricia Madrid, New Mexico Attorney General; Mike Beebe, Arkansas Attorney General; Richard Blumenthal, Connecticut Attorney General.

Ms. CANTWELL. I am also submitting this letter for the RECORD because I think the attorneys general who are chief law enforcement officers across the country for their individual States said it well. If there is no market manipulation going on, then no harm, no foul. It does not mean this is an automatic incrimination; it simply means we have a good Federal statute in place. I certainly appreciate the support of those attorneys general who have signed this letter in support of this legislation.

What we found in our hearings—and the attorney general of Arizona brought this up—is over the last several years the oil industry has moved to a new inventory prop called "just-in-time inventory." Just-in-time inventory is a great idea for the oil industry because it actually saves them dollars because they don't have the same amount of inventory they used to. It used to be that oil companies had a 20 to 30-day supply inventory. Now they only have about 3 to 5 days of supply. You can imagine if you only have 3 to 5 days of supply versus 30 days of supply, the price is going to be different.

Here is what Attorney General Terry Goddard said:

> Just in time delivery almost leaves no cushion when supplies are delayed.

He testified that:

> The entire oil industry has moved to this just in time delivery system vastly reducing the number of refineries available on a nationwide basis and minimizing inventories at stage site. The effect is a constant and precarious supply-demand balance which is exceedingly beneficial to the industry in lowering operating costs but harmful to consumers so that supply is set at a fragile stage where price spikes can occur.

I applaud the attorney general from Arizona for pointing out how important this inventory issue is and how it ought to be investigated. The Energy Department itself had a similar analysis. It found in a 2003 study:

> The reduction of spare capacity has helped drive up the price at the pump and leaves the market vulnerable to shortages caused by plant breakdown or other unpredictable events.

So even the Department of Energy knows the supply issue is what can drive price spikes. But what we want to know is whether oil companies are purposely exporting product. I asked a question at the hearing I thought was very important; that is, have oil companies ever exported oil products to foreign countries for a cheaper profit than they would have gotten if they would have kept the supply in the United States?

The reason I asked this question is because I wanted to know if they were artificially trying to limit supply in the United States just to drive up the price. One would think that is not something they would do. They, obviously, want to sell in the United States. There is one case in the West that we have been very sensitive to, according to the Oregonian newspaper that has reviewed what had been secret reports and documents basically found that BP/Amoco systematically jacked up west coast oil prices by exporting Alaskan crude oil to Asia for less than it could have sold it to U.S. refineries. So there is a specific example where an oil company exported product for cheaper profits just to have less supply in the United States to drive up the overall market. That, I think, is exactly what my amendment is trying to get at.

According to the Department of Energy, between January and August of this year, over 48 million barrels of refined product was exported out of the United States. As my friend, the Senator from Wisconsin, Mr. KOHL, points out, that is 24 times the amount that is stored in the Northeast heating oil reserve, a critical safety net in times of shortage.

One can imagine that my colleagues want answers to why they would export 48 million barrels of refined product at a time when, if you would have kept it in a heating oil reserve for the Midwest, it might actually keep prices down in the Midwest this winter.

As I said, I have already had enough of this as it relates to Enron. In 2001 I sat in a lot of hearings in the Energy Committee and heard from a lot of different people testifying that the electricity market had nothing to do with manipulation. It was all about the fact that some environmental laws prevented us from building enough supply.

After 3½ years of investigation, we found out there was a lot of manipulation going on that terms such as Fat Boy, Get Shorty, and Ricochet were schemes perpetrated on the consumers of the western energy market just to manipulate supply. So you can bet we want to know whether supply is being manipulated in a similar fashion in oil markets today, and we want answers.

The only way to get answers is to put a new Federal statute on the books that says price gouging is a Federal crime and to give the Federal agencies the tools to prosecute that crime.

I feel very strongly that this body needs to act on this legislation before we adjourn. We need to get this to the President's desk and get it signed.

I know my colleagues are going to offer amendments about various tax proposals and tax incentives, whether the oil industry wants those or doesn't. But I care about what is happening to the consumer, to the American farmer who is really getting squeezed out of his family farm, to those flight attendants and pilots who are losing their pensions because we have seen a 293-percent increase in jet fuel costs over 5 years, and to the small businesses in my State that can't exist on low profit margins when they see a 50-percent increase in home heating and fuel costs. So I want to protect consumers, not just now, but if this crisis happens again in the future, I want consumers to be protected.

I hope we can pass this legislation in a good bipartisan effort, that my colleagues will support every effort right now to protect consumers as we head toward the winter months, and we act responsibly in giving Federal regulators the statutes they need to prosecute these crimes.

Mr. President, I also would like to add Senators CLINTON and SALAZAR as cosponsors of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. CANTWELL. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I might consume. This is for the purpose of addressing two amendments before the Senate. I wish to make a short comment on the amendment that was just proposed by Senator CANTWELL.

In regard to this amendment, what she terms the anti-gouging amendment, obviously I can't help but say the intent of the amendment might be good, but this is a tax relief bill that is before us. It is not a crime bill before the Senate right now.

We just received a copy of the amendment. There are all kinds of policy questions that need to be considered. So because of this and the fact that it is not germane to the bill. I will be raising a point of order at the appropriate time.

I also wish to make a comment on the amendment proposed about a half hour ago by Senator FEINSTEIN. Before I go into the problems behind the Feinstein amendment, let me say that it is unfortunate that our Nation has had to respond to so many unexpected crises over the past 4 years. Most recently, we have had to provide an enormous amount of hurricane relief to families in many of our Southern States. Despite this fact, our economy is growing and continues to grow and, even considering the hurricanes, growing at a rate that nobody would have anticipated considering a possible ripple effect that presumably is not rippling as much as we thought through the economy because of that natural disaster.

As far as Federal receipts are concerned, these are up $275 billion over the prior year, and Federal revenues are returning to their average level of GDP. That average level, if you want a little leeway, is somewhere between 17 percent of GDP and 19 percent of GDP, and that is not just recently, that would be a 50-year average where all Federal taxes coming into the Federal Treasury have fallen within that band. Also, it has been our policy, at least in this administration, to do tax policy that falls within that band of 17 to 19 percent of gross domestic product.

I would like to take a look at the tax increase that Senator FEINSTEIN put on the table. It would increase the top rate by almost 5 percent for ordinary income.

The premise of Senator FEINSTEIN's position seems to be that taxpayers in the top brackets are solely Park Avenue millionaires, that somehow these people are sitting around clipping coupons and drawing all the income from them. The facts show differently, so I would like to go to the facts that are put out by the nonpartisan people in the Treasury Department.

About 80 percent of the benefits of the top ordinary income tax rate go to taxpayers with small business ownership. Those of us from the heartland know that the definition of small business is not determined by some gross revenue taxable income that is used as a basis and the arguments for this amendment. It depends upon whether the business is locally based. It depends on where the business finances its growth from its earnings.

The people who own these businesses are drawn from the community. They go to the local church. They support the local little leagues. Small business, as I see it, and as I know it coming from a Midwestern State, is a very stabilizing yet very dynamic social and economic force in their respective communities and tends to be the bulwark of the strength of the American middle class.

Small business income is generally taxed at an individual rate. In most cases, owners of small businesses put the income of the small business on his or her tax return. As a practical matter, then, the individual tax rate is the rate that is paid by these small businesses as opposed to the corporate rate.

The corporate tax rate, with some exceptions, in the case of some older, smaller corporations, generally applies to big business. The relationship between the top individual rate and the top corporate rate then has a bearing on our policy toward small business and whether or not we are going to give small business the incentives to grow and create jobs because these people create 70 percent of the new jobs in America.

If the top individual marginal tax rate is higher than the top corporate marginal rate tends to be—it is very obvious that you can quantify it—then we are sending a bad signal to small business.

Before 2001, the top marginal rate for small business was 39.6 percent, the rate that Senator FEINSTEIN's amendment would return us to. The top corporate rate is 35 percent. When you look at the difference, that is about a 15-percent difference between the top rate for big corporations and the rate that is used for a small business that is not incorporated.

So small business was paying then, before we made these changes in 2001, about 15 percent more. It is what I call a 15-percent small business tax penalty. When you tax labor, when you tax business—the old principle, you tax more and you get less of it, that was the law at that time.

We recognized the detrimental impact that was having on the economy. So we looked at the Federal tax policy bias against small business, and then we had a bipartisan majority in this Senate, including Senator BAUCUS, the ranking Democrat, and one-fourth of the Democratic caucus at that particular time voted to gradually—because we couldn't do it all at once—gradually equalize the top marginal rate between big corporate business and small unincorporated business, small unincorporated business paying the individual rate that was 15 percent higher, a 15-percent small business tax penalty, something that common sense ought to dictate is totally unfair.

Since 2003, for the first time in many years, the top rate, 35 percent, has been the same for Fortune 500 companies incorporated, obviously, as for successful small businesses that file the individual return.

Senator FEINSTEIN's amendment would take the first step to restore and perhaps even enhance the 15-percent penalty on small business.

With all the appetite for taxing and spending around here, rest assured, small business will be facing even higher taxes.

Small business creates 70 to 80 percent of the jobs in this country. Why, then, at this time would any Member of this body want to raise taxes on people for their ingenuity and their willingness to take a gamble in creating a small business? Why would they want to do that to people who create 80 percent of the new jobs in America?

So, without a doubt, anyone voting for Senator FEINSTEIN's amendment is, in effect, saying they support raising taxes on these small business people who create 70 to 80 percent of the new jobs in America.

That does not pass the commonsense test. In 2003, it is worth noting that the business community told us reducing the top rate of taxation was their tax policy priority. The small business community told us, when we were writing this legislation, that doing away with this 15-percent penalty, the small business tax penalty, was their top priority.

Now let's think about this. There seems to be a link between tax relief, economic growth, and jobs. Taxes make a difference. They make a difference whether we are going to have economic growth. Without economic growth, there is no increase in jobs. We have seen evidence of that linkage since 2003. Economic statistics prove that when tax relief kicked in, the economy has grown and more jobs have been created. That is the dynamic of the American free market economic system.

Public policy made by Congress makes a difference, and reducing taxes on small business, or at least making sure there is not a penalty against small business vis-a-vis major corporations, have a great deal to do with whether the free market system works. So that tax policy has helped the enhancement of our economy.

We are in the process of thinking about reversing that course. Whether it is intended or not, that is the impact of Senator FEINSTEIN's amendment. Some would speculate that for the minority party—and that is the Democratic Party—it is good politics for the economy to go into the tank; raise taxes as the economy is coming back and economic growth will be stifled. If economic growth is stifled, then jobs will disappear. If jobs disappear, then voters are more apt to throw out members of the President's party, members of the Republican Party.

I am not that cynical. I do not believe some of the opposition would want to put short-term political advantages over the economic well-being of their constituents, but obviously that is the impact of this amendment. So it does make one wonder what everything is about as we deal with these issues.

To sum up, a vote for the amendment by the Senator from California is a vote that will increase taxes. It is a tax increase that comes during economic recovery. I remind people of a quote from somebody who people listen to more than anybody else on how the economy is going and they respect what he says, Chairman Greenspan. He says that the reason we have had these 2½ to 3 years of economic recovery is because of the tax policies that have been put in place in the recent couple of tax bills.

So we do not want a tax increase when we have a recovery. It is a tax increase on the folks that create jobs in America, and that is our hard-working small business owners. For those reasons, I ask that we reject the Feinstein amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINEZ). Who yields time?

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I believe that there is still time remaining so that Senator CANTWELL has an opportunity to speak on her amendment. In the meantime, I ask unanimous consent that the next amendments in order following the Cantwell amendment be the following: an amendment by the Senator from Illinois on FEMA, 30 minutes equally divided; the Senator from Massachusetts, Mr. KENNEDY, on poverty, 30 minutes equally divided; an amendment from the Senator from Rhode Island, Mr. REED, 20 minutes equally divided; and an amendment by the Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. COBURN, on the practice of medicine—there is no time limit at the moment on that one—and that thereafter there be 30 minutes equally divided on the Dorgan amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. I do not see the Senator from Washington on the floor to finish with her amendment. I ask that her time be reserved so she can offer it at an appropriate time, and the same for the time in opposition. So we can now proceed with the Senator from Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Illinois.

AMENDMENT NO. 2605

Mr. OBAMA. I call up amendment No. 2605 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. OBAMA], for himself and Mr. COBURN, and Mr. LAUTENBERG proposes an amendment numbered 2605.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: Expressing the sense of the Senate that the Federal Emergency Management Agency should immediately address issues relating to no-bid contracting)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ___. SENSE OF THE SENATE ON USE OF NO-BID CONTRACTING BY FEDERAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AGENCY.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) on September 8, 2005, the Federal Emergency Management Agency announced that it had awarded 4 contracts for emergency housing relief following Hurricane Katrina to The Shaw Group of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Fluor Corporation of Aliso Viejo, California, Bechtel National of San Francisco, California, and CH2M Hill of Denver, Colorado;

(2) these contracts were awarded with no competition from other capable firms, and up to $100,000,000 in taxpayer funds were authorized for each of these contracts;

(3) in the midst of concerns about abusive and irresponsible spending of taxpayer funds, the Federal Emergency Management Agency pledged to re-bid these noncompetitive contracts, with Acting Under Secretary of Emergency Preparedness and Response, R. David Paulison, stating before the Committee on Homeland Security and Government Affairs of the Senate that "[a]ll of these no-bid contracts, we are going to go back and re-bid";

(4) the Federal Emergency Management Agency has yet to reopen these 4 contracts to competitive bidding, and declared on November 11, 2005, that these contracts would not be reopened for bidding until February 2006;

(5) by February 2006, the majority of the contracts will have been completed and the majority of taxpayer funds will have been spent;

(6) large and politically-connected firms continue to benefit from no-bid and limited-competition contracts, and contracts are not being awarded to capable, local companies;

(7) according to an analysis in the Washington Post, companies outside the States most affected by Hurricane Katrina have received more than 90 percent of the Federal contracts for recovery and reconstruction;

(8) the monitoring of Federal contracting practices remains difficult, with a report by the San Jose Mercury News stating "The database of contracts is incomplete. Information released by Federal agencies is spotty and sporadic. And disclosure of many no-bid contracts isn't required by law"; and

(9)(A) there is currently no Chief Financial Officer charged with monitoring the flow of all funds to the affected areas; and

(B) the task of financial management is spread across disparate Federal departments and agencies with inadequate oversight of taxpayer funds.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that the Federal Emergency Management Agency should—

(1) immediately rebid noncompetitive contracts entered into following Hurricane Katrina, consistent with the commitment of the Agency made on October 6, 2005, before millions of taxpayer dollars are wasted on irresponsible and inefficient spending;

(2)(A) immediately implement the planned competitive contracting strategy of the Agency for recovery work in all current and future reconstruction efforts; and

(B) in carrying out that strategy, should prioritize local and small disadvantaged businesses in the contracting and subcontracting process; and

(3) immediately after the awarding of a contract, publicly disclose the amount and competitive or noncompetitive nature of the contract.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, in the immediate aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, there was an enormous urgency, not only in Congress but all across the Nation, to respond to the needs of the people of the gulf coast region. Although the sense of urgency appears to have subsided, unfortunately, somewhat in Congress, that sense of urgency remains all too real for the hundreds of thousands of Americans who are still dealing with the loss of jobs, the loss of family, and the loss of homes that too many Hurricane Katrina survivors have suffered.

I am pleased the bill we are debating today includes tax relief for those affected by Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma. I am fully supportive of those provisions. I also believe that before we go home for Thanksgiving to enjoy our homes and our families, we need to take some meaningful action to help those who might not have as much to be thankful for.

Nearly 2 months after Hurricane Katrina devastated the people of the gulf coast, we are seeing that our Government is still leaving too many Americans behind. Let me give some examples. This week, FEMA is telling 150,000 evacuees who are currently in hotels that they have to be out of their hotels in 15 days. Imagine, someone has lost their home, and they have 15 days to get out of the shelter they are currently in.

Yesterday, we heard a story on NPR that shelter residents in Iberville, LA, will soon be transitioned to a tent city when the shelter closes. That's right—a tent city.

Thousands in Mississippi are currently living in two-person tents, without running water or adequate heat, because FEMA has not provided the mobile homes they promised.

There are concerns that contractors participating in the gulf coast reconstruction are exploiting immigrant labor. There are stories from Mississippi and Louisiana of immigrant laborers being lured to the gulf by promises of good pay, only to be stiffed their salaries and charged for their temporary housing.

In addition to these stories—we are hearing enormous complaints—and I am getting them in Illinois, despite the fact that I do not represent the region—that local companies are being shut out of the reconstruction bidding process.

According to the Washington Post, companies outside the States most affected by Katrina have received more than 90 percent of the Federal contracts for recovery and reconstruction. Ninety percent of the contracts have gone to companies that do not maintain a place of business in the affected States. This is unacceptable.

The American taxpayers and this Congress provided $62 billion for the reconstruction effort precisely so that the people of the gulf coast region, including some of the most vulnerable citizens of our society, would be left behind no more. Yet right now we have no idea where that money is being spent, how that money is being spent, why it is not being spent on fixing the problems I mentioned and why FEMA is still sitting on nearly $40 billion that has not been spent at all.

Now think about that. The managers of this bill have been struggling with the fiscal constraints we are trying to deal with and we have $40 billion that is not spent and we do not know where the other $20 billion has gone. There is absolutely no accountability to this process at all, no accountability to the taxpayers and no accountability to the people who need this help the most.

I am a freshman in the minority party. I am accustomed sometimes to not knowing what is going on around here, but this is, unfortunately, one of those situations in which I do not get a sense that neither the majority party nor the administration has a clear idea of how our money is being spent.

The Hurricane Katrina contracting process has been rife with problems from the very beginning. Rather than use the reconstruction process to help companies and workers in the regions most affected, we are seeing many of the prime contracts going to the largest contractors in the country. These are the same contractors that received reconstruction contracts in Iraq and with only a few exceptions they are not the folks whose businesses were harmed by the ravages of the storm.

Small businesses are not being given a fair shake to bid on these projects, and it is unclear how many contracts have been provided to small businesses. Meanwhile, minority contractors have been left almost entirely out of the contracting process. The Congressional Black Caucus has proposed good legislation to address some of these problems and I hope the Senate will consider it, if it passes the House.

But let me be clear—this is not simply partisan complaining or political point scoring. At a hearing held on November 3, 2005, the inspector general of the Homeland Security Department, a Bush appointee, said about the reconstruction process: Obligations are being made at a rate of $275 million a day in an unstable environment and in an expedited manner. When you mix it all together, it is a potentially perfect recipe for fraud, waste, and abuse.

The GAO's preliminary observations indicate that the Army Corps of Engineers' $39 million purchase of portable classrooms may have resulted in the Army Corps paying more than necessary. The GAO will continue to monitor the reconstruction contracts.

I am certain that we are going to keep on seeing these stories surfacing almost daily about how taxpayer money is being wasted, while the people who are supposed to be helped are not getting what they need.

One of the most egregious examples of this potential waste, fraud, and abuse is in the Government's refusal to rebid $400 million worth of no-bid contracts that they already promised they would rebid. Immediately following Hurricane Katrina, FEMA awarded four $100 million no-bid contracts for reconstruction efforts. Acting FEMA Under Secretary Paulison made the following statement to the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee on October 6, 2005: I have been a public servant for a long time, and I have never been a fan of no-bid contracts. Sometimes you have to do them because of the expediency of getting things done. I can assure you, we are going to look at all of these contracts very carefully. All of those no-bid contracts, we are going to go back and rebid.

That is what Under Secretary Paulison said before the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee a month ago.

These contracts have not been rebid. In fact, FEMA officials testified on November 11, just a month after the statement by Under Secretary Paulison, that they would not rebid the contracts until February. Here is the only problem: By February, the contracts will have been completed.

Today, I am offering a sense-of-the-Senate amendment calling on FEMA to immediately rebid these contracts in a competitive fashion before nearly $400 million of taxpayer dollars are spent in an inefficient and potentially abusive manner.

I know this amendment only gets at one element of a multilayer problem, but I firmly believe this body must take a stand to ensure that these Federal agencies that have been entrusted with such a monumental job and so many taxpayer dollars stick to their promises.

I am pleased my colleague from Oklahoma, Senator COBURN, has joined me in offering this amendment.

Senator COBURN and I have also offered a bill that establishes a chief financial officer to oversee the use of Hurricane Katrina recovery funds so that we do not have further problems of this sort. That bill was voted out of the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee and is awaiting a vote. Unfortunately, that bill so far has not seen the light of this floor, so I am forced to offer this amendment today to provide some accountability and transparency into this contracting process.

I hope my colleagues will support this amendment. I appreciate the time and the attention of Chairman GRASSLEY and Ranking Member BAUCUS.

Before I yield the floor, I ask unanimous consent to call up a pending amendment that has no number yet, submitted by myself and Senator KERRY, filed earlier today by Senator KERRY, which provides relief from the marriage penalty and from the military service penalty faced by many low-income taxpayers who receive the low-income tax credit.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wonder if we can proceed with the second amendment. It was my understanding the Senator had one amendment and had a time agreement on it. Other Senators have come up, asking for consideration of their amendments. I do not want to inconvenience other Senators.

Mr. OBAMA. I was asked by the Senator from Massachusetts to read that, just to get it into the queue.

At this stage I am not speaking on it, and I am not asking for any additional action on it. I just wanted to get it in. If it is a problem, I am willing to defer.

Mr. BAUCUS. All things considered, Mr. President, I think it proper not to agree to the request at this point because the Senator from Massachusetts already spoke to us about an amendment of his, and that is in the queue.

In fairness to other Senators, I don't want to inconvenience other Senators.

Mr. OBAMA. Fair enough.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield such time as he might consume to the Senator from South Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senator yielding time on the bill or on the amendment?

Mr. GRASSLEY. On the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On the bill.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield off the bill such time as the Senator from South Dakota might consume.

IRAQ AND PREWAR INTELLIGENCE

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman, the Senator from Iowa, for yielding time off the bill. The issue we are debating obviously is one of great consequence, dealing with our budget and how we deal with the issue of the deficit and what we do to continue to keep the economy growing and creating jobs. That is what this debate is about.

I do, however, want to speak in response to something that was said earlier on the floor, also off the bill at hand that we are discussing today, and that has to do with the whole situation in Iraq.

The Democrat leader was on the floor earlier, once again attacking the President and the Vice President with respect to the issue of prewar intelligence. I think the American people deserve to know the facts in this debate. They deserve to know the truth. More important, our troops need to know we stand with them, we support them in completing their mission in achieving victory in the war on terror.

What we have seen instead is the Democrat leader come down here and accuse the President, because he is standing up and telling the truth to the American people, accusing him of deceiving and misleading on prewar intelligence.

Where is the evidence? Where are the facts to support those statements? The distinguished Democrat leader, as well as many Democrats who are still serving in this Chamber, back in 2002 had the same information, the same intelligence that the President of the United States had, the Vice President of the United States had, all our allies had, the United Nations had. Everybody came to the same essential conclusion, and that was that Iraq posed an imminent threat to the security of that region and the security of the United States, and we acted accordingly.

In this Chamber right here, 29 of the 50 Democrats at that time stood up and voted for a resolution authorizing the use of force in Iraq. In the House of Representatives, over 80 Democrats joined the Republican majority in the House of Representatives in support of the resolution for the use of force in Iraq.

What we are seeing now is an attempt to revise that history. You can try. You can disagree with the policy. You can disagree with the decisions that are being made by our commanders. But don't come to the floor of the Senate and don't go out to the public and attack this administration and this President for lying unless you have some evidence to demonstrate that.

There is no proof.

I believe the troops of this country, and our commanders who are valiantly and bravely and courageously leading the effort in Iraq and in Afghanistan to win the war on terror, are fighting to make this country more safe and secure and to make sure that country has a democracy. And all we focus on is the negative.

What about the positive things that are happening in Iraq? The fact is, today Iraq's GDP has more than quadrupled from 2003, Iraq's debt has been cut by more than a third from 2003, inflation and unemployment rates are down from last year while incomes have risen. Iraq's security personnel have doubled since last year, over 1,800 reconstruction projects have been finished, including schools and health facilities, the number of telephone subscribers has more than doubled since last year, and the number of independent television stations has doubled since last year.

We are making progress. It is hard work. The people who know that the best are the people on the ground in Iraq, the young men and women in uniform who are doing freedom's work.

I had the opportunity last week to go up to Walter Reed Army Hospital to visit with some of the casualties of that war, people who have lost limbs, amputees. I have to tell you it is inspiring, absolutely inspirational to see the courage and the determination and the spirit of these young people who have worn the uniform of the United States and have fought for something they believe in. They deserve to have elected leaders in this country, people in this Chamber, the Senate, and the House who are willing to at least acknowledge the good work they are doing and the progress we are making toward winning the war on terror, toward creating a democracy and standing up a government in Iraq, toward raising an army, a security force that can defend the Iraqi people.

What we do not need is demagoguery and people coming on the floor of the Senate and elected leaders getting up and making statements attacking the integrity and the credibility and the truthfulness of the President of the United States, our Commander in Chief, absent any evidence to support their claims. Furthermore, those are the ones who on this very floor have made statements in the past supporting our effort and concluding, based upon the intelligence that they received—just like the intelligence the President and the Vice President and all our allies and the United Nations received—that Iraq posed an imminent threat to the United States and to that region of the world. What we are seeing here is the worst of politics, and that is not the conduct we ought to have in the Senate or the discourse that we ought to be putting before the American people. The American people deserve the truth, and the American troops deserve our support.

I yield.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I have a unanimous consent agreement that I think has been accepted. I ask unanimous consent that at 3:30 today the Senate proceed to votes in relation to the following amendments in the order sequenced below; further, that they not be subject to second-degree amendments prior to the votes and that there be 2 minutes equally divided between the votes: Dorgan No. 2587; Feinstein No. 2609; Feinstein No. 2610; Cantwell No. 2612; provided further that at 3 today, there be 30 minutes equally divided for debate between the chairman and Senator DORGAN; provided further that following those votes, Senator COBURN be recognized in order to offer his amendment; further, that all votes after the first be limited to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

AMENDMENT NO. 2588

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], for himself and Ms. LANDRIEU, proposes an amendment numbered 2588.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in the RECORD of Wednesday, November 16, 2005, under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I think we have a time limit of 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty minutes evenly divided.

Mr. KENNEDY. I ask the Chair to let me know when there is 2 minutes left.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will so notify the Senator.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this amendment is a very simple amendment. It recognizes that we have had a dramatic increase in child poverty in recent years. I think the most dramatic recent exposure to that was Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, when the veil was taken off the United States of America and we saw so many of those families who were unable to leave New Orleans and leave the areas along the gulf because they were too poor and they suffered so many consequences that we are reminded about the growth of poverty among children in recent years.

This amendment does a very simple thing. It says for every joint tax return where the income is more than $1 million, there will be a 1-percent surcharge on that income. It will go into a dedicated fund. There will be a board appointed by the Members of Congress, and they will make recommendations to the President about how those resources will be expended.

The best estimate now is that we could have close to $3 billion to $4 billion raised in the first year. It will rise over the next 5 to 7 years up to $5 billion. This is dedicated to reduce the poverty of children in this country.

This chart shows what happened in the period of 2000 to 2004—13 million children are living in poverty. There has been a growth of 1.4 million children since 2000.

We know that in the United States at the present time one in six children lives in poverty. This isn't just general, across the country; it is reflected with different groups having a higher percentage. We find, for example, that children are much more likely to live in poverty than adults or the elderly.

If we look at who is living in poverty in the United States: seniors, 9.8 percent; adults 18 to 65, 11.3 percent; and for children, it is the highest at 17.8 percent. If you look at who is affected by this to the greatest extent, the national average being 17.8 percent, the highest is minority children. The national average is 17.8 percent. If you are looking at Latinos, it is 28 percent. If you are looking at African Americans, it is 33 percent.

Let us look at this chart where the United States has one of the highest child poverty rate in the industrialized world. This red line is the indicator of where the United States is in relationship to Italy, the United Kingdom, Germany, Scandinavia, Japan, Sweden, the Netherlands—all the way down the line. This chart is an indication of where we have the highest poverty rates generally, and the highest child poverty rates.

It should not be an enormous surprise that individuals have the highest child poverty rate down in New Orleans and along that gulf area. Those are the areas which have the highest percentage rate. They were high before and now breathtakingly high.

If we look across the country, this chart shows children living in poverty in every State. The States in blue have the highest concentration of poverty.

This is a real reflection of our national priorities. Are we as a country going to be indignant? Are we going to be sufficiently concerned or outraged about this that we are prepared to do something?

I must say that in the most recent Appropriations Committee conference report, we find that we have basically failed to deal with these issues, both from an educational point of view and a health point of view. We see reductions in terms of the Head Start Program, title I programs, and programs that help and assist disabled children. We are finding reductions as well in other health programs.

This is a way for us to be able to say that in the situation we are talking about, those at the highest end of the economic ladder, those individuals who have more than $1 million are going to pay a tax. Say they are going to pay a tax of $100,000; that is a 1-percent addition. This is just 1 percent. This is $101,000.

With that kind of increase on those who are the most privileged individuals in our country, the wealthiest individuals, they ought to be as concerned as all Americans are by this staggering situation of child poverty in this country.

We are not going in the right direction, as these charts indicate. We are going in the wrong direction. If someone gets up and says, "Senator, we are going in the right direction, why do we need this", every economic indicator shows these facts and these statistics are getting worse and worse every single year. They are not going to be altered or changed by what we are doing here in these budget considerations. Investment in these children in and of itself isn't going to be the complete answer, but, nonetheless, providing the help and assistance in a very targeted way to try to deal with child poverty, it seems to me, is an important reflection about what we ought to be about here in the Senate.

I certainly think it has a higher priority than many of the other priorities that are included in this legislation, which is going to provide some very generous tax reduction for some of the most privileged people in our country and in our society. That is basically the issue.

Finally, this is a basically moral issue. There is no great nation that can ignore this challenge. It is a defining issue in terms of what this country is about. It is a defining issue about what the values are for us as a people in this Nation.

I think so many of the great Judeo-Christian religions and other religions talk about the importance of feeding the hungry and clothing the poor and seeing to the needs of the least of those among us. This amendment is a targeted amendment and provides just that kind of help and assistance which is so important for this country.

I hope the Senate will accept what I call the Child Poverty Elimination Fund—as I mentioned, with a board to oversee the fund and design the Child Poverty Elimination Plan. It is a downpayment, a realistic first step toward achieving the goal of lifting children out of poverty.

In the 1960s, President Johnson talked about the "War on Poverty" that we are still fighting, but we are fighting and falling further and further behind. Clearly, we have made progress over the past four decades, through Medicaid, Head Start, food stamps, and other measures we have enacted. The poverty rate for all Americans reached a low of 11 percent in 1973, compared to 19 percent in later years.

We continued that battle through the Reagan administration with the enactment of LIHEAP in 1981 and welfare reform in 1996. But, sadly, in the most recent years, we have been falling farther and farther behind.

I am not going to take the time, because I don't have it here, to talk about the growth of hunger in this country in recent years, and particularly the problem of growth of hunger among children.

A 5-year-old named Connor from Massachusetts is one example of what is happening to the vulnerable people in our society. Some days, Connor pretends to be a "Power Ranger" fighting intergalactic evils, and other days he is fighting hunger, pretending to be a superhero, taking a lot of energy. And sometimes Connor doesn't feel like playing. That is when his hunger pangs become his worst enemy.

It is shameless that in the richest and most powerful nation on Earth, nearly one in five children goes to bed hungry every night.

Now because of Hurricane Katrina, the silent slavery of poverty is not so silent anymore. The devastation caused by the storm suddenly focused the Nation's attention on the immense hardships low-income Americans face each day. We saw the desperate plight of innocent children who were born poor and forced to bear the impossible burden of poverty.

In fact, the child poverty rate, as I mentioned, in the States hit hardest by Hurricane Katrina was all above the national average. In Louisiana, 29 percent of children live in poverty, 30 percent of children in Mississippi live in poverty, and 23 percent in Alabama.

Hurricane Katrina highlighted the struggle of the poor, but every State in this country is home to children and families who live in poverty. Children in the United States are more likely to live in poverty than any other age group. This particular amendment indicates what our priorities are.

Poverty is an education issue because poor children often lack the basic nutrition vital to healthy brain development. They have difficulty focusing their attention and concentrating in school. As a result, they often drop out. Some end up in trouble with the law, even in prison.

Poverty is a civil rights issue because minorities are disproportionately poor: 33 percent of African-American children, 28 percent of Latino children live in poverty, triple the rate of white children. How can we possibly keep turning our back on these children? We should all feel a greater, not a lesser, responsibility to them. Where is our compassionate conservatism?

Do they understand when Jesus said "suffer the little children to come unto me," he didn't mean "let the little children suffer." Don't they believe that children are included when he said:

> Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these, my brother, you have done it unto me.

We know how to lift children out of poverty in this wealthy land of ours. All it requires is the will to do it and the leadership to make it happen.

The words of Nobel Laureate Gabriela Mistral never rang more true:

> We are guilty of many errors and many faults, but our worse crime is abandoning the children, neglecting the fountain of life. Many of the things we need can wait. The child cannot. Right now is the time his bones are being formed, his blood is being made, and his senses are being developed. To him we cannot answer "Tomorrow." His name is "Today."

It is time for Congress to bring true hope, honest opportunity, genuine fairness to children mired in poverty in communities in all parts of our country. This amendment will put us back on the right track. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I ask unanimous consent I be yielded 5 minutes off the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I wish to speak today on an amendment that has been offered on this bill that I very much hope the Senate will not agree to.

The Dorgan amendment, which has been offered, would institute a windfall profits tax on the major oil and gas companies. There is the belief among many in this country that oil industry profits are excessive compared to profits of other companies that do business in our country. I do not believe that is the case.

In the second quarter of 2005, the oil industry earned 7.7 cents for every dollar of sales. The average profit for all U.S. industry in the second quarter was 7.9 cents for every dollar of sales. Thirteen U.S. industries earned higher profits in the second quarter than the oil and natural gas industry: banking, software and services, consumer services, and real estate.

The rate of return on oil sales for the third quarter of 2005 is slightly higher, at 8.1 cents for every dollar of sales. However, the damage to the oil industry caused by the hurricanes will eat into the bottom line in future quarters. British Petroleum has estimated it will take a $700 million hit to the company's energy production and infrastructure from Hurricane Katrina and Hurricane Rita. The Congressional Budget Office estimates capital losses from Hurricanes Katrina and Rita in the energy producing industries will range from $18 to $31 billion.

Reinvestment in infrastructure, both production and refining, is a critical issue. My good colleague from North Dakota and I would agree on that point. While I am sure his proposal is well intended, the impact would be contrary to the goals we all seek to achieve. His proposal takes a short-term approach to what is a long-term investment issue. Investments in infrastructure in the oil industry are over long-term windows.

What we must do is encourage the oil companies to take their profits and reinvest them back into exploration, production, and refineries. The oil companies seek to invest in refineries, but no one is investing in new refineries in America. In fact, there has been no new refinery built in America in over 20 years.

If we are going to have a bigger supply and bring the price of gasoline at the pump down, we must have more oil refineries and more production. We also need conservation. We also need renewable sources of energy. We need new sources of energy. We all agree on that.

This amendment seeks to single out oil companies, dub them "excessively profitable," take their profit and give it to the Government to spend as it would, rather than letting the oil companies keep it and invest it in the infrastructure, production, and refinery capacity. That is what will get to the issue we are all trying to address; that is, bringing the price of oil down so the price at the pump will be lower.

Senator SCHUMER has discussed another potential amendment that hits at the big oil companies. I realize that is a political thing for him to do right now. We are not here to do the political hit and run. We are here to do the right thing for our country. We are here to try to build more reserves, more production capacity, and more refinery capacity to bring the price of gasoline down at the pump and to bring the price of energy down for the farmer who is trying to use natural gas. The price is rising such that our small farmers are in a tough position. What Senator SCHUMER has discussed doing is instituting a double tax on any income made by a company overseas.

We are severely restricting the ability for an oil and gas company to drill in America today. You basically cannot drill off the East Coast or the West Coast, nor Florida. We can drill in the Gulf of Mexico, but it is very expensive and requires deep drilling. We hope we will be able to open ANWR—but right now we are very limited. We need to have a supply in our country, with American jobs and more production coming back to America. More and more production is going overseas.

I end by saying, the double taxation of one industry is unfair. If we have an oil company and a computer chip company doing business in Italy and they pay taxes in Italy, the computer chip company would get a credit for that tax paid when it files in America, but the oil company would not, thereby paying tax twice. Is that the way to have more oil coming into our country and to drive the price down at the pump? I don't think so. It is counterproductive.

I hope the Senate will do the right thing. It may not be the political thing, but it is the right thing if we are going to reach our goal, which is to bring down the cost of natural gas and gasoline at the pump for the consumers and the small business people of our country, keeping our economy strong and keeping jobs in America. The way to do this is not to single out the oil companies. We must invest in infrastructure, more production, and additional refineries. If we will help them with a regulatory system that does not penalize them and delay construction for 10 or 15 years, we can bring the price of oil down. It will be to the benefit of everyone in our country.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the Dorgan amendment and any potential Schumer amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. BAUCUS. So as not to interrupt the flow, the chairman would like to speak on the Senator's amendment first, if that is all right.

Mr. KENNEDY. All right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself such time as I might consume off of our side of the Kennedy amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I am pleased to be able to report to Senator KENNEDY that we do not need a board to tell us how to end poverty.

I quote Washington Post columnist William Raspberry, writing in a recent op-ed piece:

> Fatherless families are America's single largest source of poverty. The Annie E. Casey Foundation, "Kids Count," once reported that Americans who failed to complete high school, to get married and to reach age 20 before having their first child were nearly 10 times as likely to live in poverty as those who did these three things.

The Brookings Institution, obviously a liberal think tank, published an analysis of a variety of factors that could reduce poverty. The authors from Brookings concluded that the combination of education, full-time work, and marriage could reduce poverty rates from 13 percent to 17 percent.

The bipartisan welfare reform bill reported out of the Senate Committee on Finance would make substantial progress in helping families make progress in areas that we know would reduce poverty. We could not get an agreement with the other side to get this legislation discussed on the floor. We got it out of the committee in a bipartisan way. It deals with the issues of education, work, and marriage.

Following upon the views of the Brookings Institute and the views of the Annie E. Casey Foundation, rather than engage in politically motivated efforts, we should work together to implement these serious policies of education, of work, and of marriage. Together, by implementing these policies, and we know these policies work, we will take one giant step toward reducing poverty.

I don't think Senator KENNEDY's amendment is necessary. I yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. I ask if the minority would yield 5 minutes?

Mr. BAUCUS. No objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I listened to my friend from Iowa. This is the fact: We have one of the highest child poverty rates in the industrial world. I am not saying this afternoon how to do it. The Senator from Iowa can have good ideas. The Senator from Tennessee can have good ideas. The fact of the matter is, we are not doing it now.

There is significant and dramatic growth of child poverty in the United States. I am saying let's do something about it. Give us the opportunity to do it this afternoon. That is the point I make.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, under a unanimous consent agreement we entered into earlier, we are now waiting for Senator REED of Rhode Island to offer his amendment, and also Senator COBURN to offer his amendment. And under the agreement, thereafter, there is time remaining on the Dorgan amendment. But while we are waiting for Senator REED and/or Senator COBURN, or anyone else, to come to the floor, I will say a few words about the alternative minimum tax.

The bill before us today does extend the alternative minimum tax exemption level and provides for an increase in inflation. That is the good news. But it is not all good news because there will still be about 600,000 additional Americans paying higher taxes next year under the alternative minimum tax, sometimes called the stealth tax.

Why is that? That is because the so-called hold-harmless provision in the legislation before us today, or the patch, as some have called it, does not hold everyone harmless. For example, for the year 2005, there are 3.6 million American taxpayers paying the alternative minimum tax. Under the bill before us today, there will be 4.2 million taxpayers paying that tax in 2006. That is an increase of 600,000 taxpayers, and it is an increase I hope we can avoid.

The alternative minimum tax, to refresh recollections, was originally enacted in 1969. Why did Congress do that? Congress discovered in that year there were about 155 very wealthy taxpayers making over $200,000 a year but who paid no taxes. Congress felt: Well, gee, that is not right; people earning over $200,000 a year at least should pay some taxes. So Congress passed the alternative minimum tax. What was once a class tax, unfortunately, has now been morphed into a mass tax.

To refresh your recollection, whenever individuals calculate their income taxes, they calculate their income taxes and then they have to go through a separate, parallel calculation under what is called the alternative minimum tax. Under that separate, parallel calculation, there are certain provisions that cannot be deducted, and that includes the standard deduction or the personal exemptions, and some others. Then you look at the bottom line of the two calculations, and if one is higher than the other—it does not make any difference which one it is—you pay that higher tax.

Because these provisions were not indexed to inflation, over time more and more people are finding they have to pay this stealth tax, this alternative minimum tax. Frankly, if it is not changed by the end of this decade, that tax will ensnare about 30 million Americans, a majority of who will have adjusted gross incomes below $100,000.

The Internal Revenue Service National Taxpayer Advocate has identified this alternative minimum tax as the most serious problem facing individual taxpayers. By the end of the decade, the majority of filers with incomes between $75,000 and $100,000 will be paying this additional tax; that is, the majority of Americans with incomes between $75,000 and $100,000 will be paying this, unless it is fixed.

In addition, virtually all married couples in that income group—$75,000 to $100,000—with two children will be paying the AMT by the end of the decade.

Now, I have filed legislation to repeal the AMT altogether. I am joined in that effort by the chairman, Senator GRASSLEY, and 20 other Senators who have the same view as me. I think we should do it. It is clear, though, that repeal is very expensive. But it is the right thing to do, and we should do our level best to try to find a way to work toward total repeal, and try to find the revenue to pay for it.

In the meantime, though, we should do all we can to make sure this stealth tax does not hit one more family next year.

As you may know, Mr. President, the House companion bill on this same subject, tax reconciliation, which is working its way over here, does not in any way address this AMT issue. But it does contain provisions to extend the capital gains and dividends cuts for 2 more years. Under current law, which we enacted in 2003, deductions will stay in effect at least until the end of 2008. Nevertheless, the House in their bill made the decision to extend that capital gains and dividends cut for 2 more years past 2008. But they did not include the alternative minimum tax. That is wrong.

Senator GRASSLEY and I have discussed this. We want to make a change. At the appropriate time I think we will make a change to the underlying bill so not one more American pays this stealth tax compared to current law. As I mentioned, under the bill currently before us, about 600,000 more Americans will pay it. We feel that is wrong. It is a mistake. We shouldn't do that. We will find a way, as the chairman and I have found, to make sure not one more American has to pay this additional tax.

Otherwise, I might say that under the House-passed version of tax reconciliation, 17 million families will see a tax increase next year. Under the House bill, working its way over here to conference, 17 million families will see a tax increase next year thanks to the alternative minimum tax.

In fact, CRS has found that if the House proposal prevails, next year a family with three children, making $63,000 a year, will also be hit by this additional stealth tax, the AMT. I believe, and I know the chairman believes, and many of us in the Senate believe, this family-unfriendly AMT should not be allowed to creep deeper and deeper into the middle class each year. At the appropriate time, we are going to make that change, that adjustment, because it is the right thing to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I might consume off the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I appreciate the cooperation I have had with Senator BAUCUS in working out some differences on this bill, which he has enunciated very well. I look forward to, hopefully, getting done what he said before we get this bill through the Senate tomorrow.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business, and the time will be off of the bill.

THE FDA

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, today is the anniversary of the hearing on the worldwide withdrawal of Vioxx, the blockbuster drug that became a blockbuster disaster. As chairman of the Committee on Finance, I called for this hearing a year ago. The Vioxx hearing turned the spotlight on a troubled agency in denial. The type of problems exposed during the hearings have proven to be not isolated but systemic.

Over the past year, my committee staff has investigated allegations coming from within and outside the Food and Drug Administration. Brave whistleblowers, such as Drs. Andrew Mosholder, David Graham, and others, have come forward to expose the too cozy relationship between the agency and the drug industry. I can tell you today that problems exist not only within the Center for Drugs but extend to the centers for devices, biologics, and even into veterinary medicine.

I am concerned—and every other Member of this Senate should also be concerned—about this agency's cozy relationship with industry. To further illustrate this problem, I am sending today a letter to another drug company that appears too cozy with the Food and Drug Administration. Last year, 2 days after the Vioxx hearing, the drug company Wyeth met with former Commissioner Crawford. Why did Wyeth's CEO want to talk with the commissioner? Because Wyeth recently had to remove one of its most profitable veterinary drugs from the market.

So what did Wyeth do? They launched an investigation of a Food and Drug Administration employee, Dr. Victoria Hampshire. It was Dr. Hampshire who concluded that Wyeth's drug was killing hundreds of dogs. I have in my hand what Wyeth presented to former Commissioner Crawford. Every page of this document has on it things that are referred to as confidential. It is a 29-page PowerPoint with 10 pages of backup material. It is dated November 19, 2004. Besides being marked confidential, it says:

> ProHeart 6 Apparent Conflict of Interest.

In summary this PowerPoint alleges that Dr. Hampshire had a personal and financial conflict of interest. Dr. Hampshire approached my committee staff because she was scared and felt unfairly targeted by the Wyeth Company and also by her agency. Why? Because she was simply doing her job to check to see if drugs were as effective and safe as they were said to be.

Last week, the Food and Drug Administration briefed my committee investigators on this matter. It turns out that Wyeth succeeded in having Dr. Hampshire removed from reviewing its drugs. Dr. Hampshire's hard work and dedication to science and drug safety placed a bull's eye on her back and destroyed her reputation and career—I should say temporarily destroyed her reputation. When you hear the end of this, she got commendation. Without her knowledge, the Food and Drug Administration also launched a criminal investigation against her.

This sordid story is still unraveling. I can say that no action was taken against Dr. Hampshire, and after the investigation closed, the Food and Drug Administration rewarded Dr. Hampshire for her work on the Wyeth drug, which remains off the market. Unfortunately for Dr. Hampshire, Wyeth's efforts to discredit her did not end when the FDA cleared her. At least one Wyeth sales representative attempted to discredit Dr. Hampshire in the veterinary community. Fortunately for Dr. Hampshire, the salesperson's comments about Wyeth's investigation of her and her alleged conflicts of interest were made to a former colleague of Dr. Hampshire. My letter to Wyeth today seeks information and documents related to Wyeth's investigation of Dr. Hampshire and the salesperson's comments.

So a year later, we are still uncovering the cozy relationship between the agency and the drug industry.

In this case, a company had the guts to go to supposedly an unbiased regulating agency and tried to get somebody fired, removed, and even a criminal investigation against them, do everything to discredit them. That sort of culture and environment should not exist in any regulatory agency with the economic sectors that they are regulating.

Dr. Hampshire's sad story is further proof that the Food and Drug Administration needs a permanent commissioner who can restore order and respect for independence. The Food and Drug Administration cannot serve the American people and the interests of the drug industry at the same time.

A year ago, Dr. Graham created a firestorm when he said at the Vioxx hearing:

> I can tell you right now, there are at least five drugs on the market today that I think need to be looked at quite seriously to see whether or not they belong there. . . .

Dr. Graham identified those five drugs: Accutane, Bextra, Crestor, Meridia, and Serevent, when asked by my distinguished colleague, Senator BINGAMAN of New Mexico. Some roundly criticized Dr. Graham's testimony as inflammatory a year ago. Today it is noteworthy that the agency has taken regulatory action or action is pending on four out of the five drugs named by Dr. Graham.

Less than a week after the hearing, the Food and Drug Administration announced it was strengthening its plan to reduce the risk of birth defects associated with Accutane. Then in August the agency issued a public health advisory to help make sure females do not become pregnant while taking this medicine and to release more information about depression and suicidal thoughts associated with that drug. A month after the hearing, December of last year, the Food and Drug Administration issued a public health advisory for Bextra. The agency announced it changed Bextra's label to provide consumers with upgraded warnings about possible heart and blood clotting problems. Ultimately, the agency asked Pfizer to voluntarily remove Bextra from the market in April of this year.

Less than 4 months after Dr. Graham's testimony, Crestor was subject to a public health advisory as part of the agency's effort to notify the public of potentially significant emerging safety data. Crestor's label was changed to highlight important information on the safe use of Crestor. Eight months after the hearing, the Food and Drug Administration convened an advisory committee meeting related to the safety of Serevent and other asthma drugs. The advisory committee recommended strengthening the labels for Serevent as well, but the agency has yet to act. Only one drug, Meridia, has not been the subject of any action by FDA.

American consumers are the beneficiaries of these actions. I don't know if the agency would have acted without Dr. Graham's testimony before my committee a year ago. But I know from experience that sunlight is the best disinfectant. The scrutiny of the last 12 months is just the kind of medicine that the Food and Drug Administration needs. Things have not turned around overnight. Reforming this agency is a long-haul task.

For those of us in Congress committed to oversight, reform, and improvement, the Vioxx investigation and hearings, as well as other investigations, prompted me to cosponsor two Food and Drug Administration reform bills this year. Senator DODD of Connecticut and I introduced a bipartisan bill, the Fair Access to Clinical Trials Act, in February and the Food and Drug Administration Safety Act of 2005 in April of this year. These bills represent part of a sustained effort to restore public confidence in the Federal Government's food and drug safety agency. A number of you have cosponsored these bills with Senator DODD and me. I urge everyone else who hasn't to consider them again.

Enactment of these bills will be a meaningful step towards greater accountability and transparency for the Food and Drug Administration. And if enacted, they would provide the agency with some much needed authority to ensure the safety and efficacy of drugs.

One big opportunity that absolutely cannot be missed right now is the appointment of a new full-time commissioner who is committed to reform. This leader must recognize the problems of a culture that has become too cozy with the industry.

Then that leader must be tough enough to make necessary changes happen.

The FDA has to do a top-notch job on ensuring the safety of the products it regulates.

And where the FDA lacks the tools and resources to do so, Congress has to step in and help.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. GRASSLEY. You mean we have used up all the time on our bill? I took time off of my bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time between now and 3:30 is equally divided between the chairman and the Senator from Montana.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Then I will forget my last three sentences.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. BAUCUS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Rhode Island be recognized to offer his amendment and speak for 10 minutes, and the time thereafter until 3:30 be equally divided on the Dorgan amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, my understanding is that we have 15 minutes equally divided on the Dorgan-Dodd amendment, and that was to start at 3 o'clock. My recommendation would be that if there is 10 minutes now allocated during that period we simply move the vote to 3:40 so that we will have the 15 minutes equally divided—30 minutes equally divided.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I amend my request to accommodate the request of the Senator from North Dakota. The Senator from Rhode Island can offer his amendment, and when he is finished, there will be a half hour on the Dorgan amendment. He gets 15, and the other side gets 15, and the vote will now occur at 3:40.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COLEMAN). Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REED. Parliamentary inquiry: What is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Kennedy amendment is pending. The Senator is authorized to set it aside for his amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2626

Mr. REED. The Kennedy amendment being set aside, I would send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. REED] proposes an amendment numbered 2626.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(2) SUBSECTION (d).—The amendments made by subsection (d) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. REED. I offer this amendment along with Senator KENNEDY, Senator SCHUMER, Senator KOHL, Senator ROCKEFELLER, Senator KERRY, Senator CARPER, Senator LEAHY, Senator LIEBERMAN, Senator DAYTON, and Senator STABENOW.

Mr. President, this amendment is about LIHEAP, the Low Income Heating Assistance Program. Each of us, at this point, is very familiar with the struggle that is taking place today—and if you were outside early this morning, you understand temperatures are falling—that many families are having to heat their homes for this winter. According to EIA's Short-Term Energy Outlook released last week, energy costs for the average family using heating oil are estimated to hit $1,500 this winter, an increase of $325 over last year's heating season. Natural gas prices could hit $1,000, an increase of $300. For a family using propane, prices are projected to hit $1,300, an increase of $230.

Despite these sharp increases in fuel costs, we sadly continue to fund LIHEAP, the one program that can provide sufficient help, at the same level as last year, which in reality means an actual cut in the level of assistance we can provide low-income consumers this winter's heating season.

The responsible thing for Congress to do is to fully fund LIHEAP at the full $5.1 billion authorized in the Energy Policy Act enacted earlier this year. Indeed, we have tried to do that—not once but three times—in the past few weeks. Senator COLLINS and I, along with some 30 of our colleagues, have offered amendments to the Defense bill, the Transportation-Treasury-HUD bill, and the Labor-HHS bill to fully fund LIHEAP. We have reached across the aisle and across the country to provide more assistance for the LIHEAP program, and in each instance a majority of this body has gone on record to support full funding.

Today, I come to the floor to offer another amendment to fully fund the LIHEAP program. This time I seek to offset that increase with a temporary 1-year windfall profits tax on large oil companies. This tax would be on the excess profits large integrated oil companies have earned as fuel prices reached record heights over the past year.

My amendment draws from Senator SCHUMER's legislation to define windfall profits. My amendment creates a temporary levy on the excess profits of U.S. oil companies and foreign companies that do substantial business in the United States. I would like to thank Senators DORGAN and DODD for proposing the windfall profits tax, and Senator SCHUMER for his modification to this proposal.

The temporary levy applies to major integrated oil companies which have an average daily world-wide production of crude oil of at least 500,000 barrels for the taxable year. Under our revenue mechanism companies will calculate the average of annual profits for the years 2002 to 2004, subtracting the highest year, and then adding 10 percent. The resulting number is the reasonably inflated average profit for calculating the amount of windfall profits. Any profits earned from U.S. operations in 2005 that exceed this reasonably inflated average profit are deemed a "windfall profit" and is taxed at the rate necessary to raise the required $2.92 billion needed to fully fund LIHEAP.

This is a temporary 1-year measure. The tax rate is set simply to fund the authorized level of LIHEAP. In America no family should be forced to choose between heating their home and putting food on the table for their children. No senior citizen should have to decide between buying fuel or buying pharmaceuticals. But, unfortunately, this sadly is the case and this winter it will be the case in too many situations. The heat-or-eat dilemma is not just rhetoric. The RAND Corporation conducted a study and found that low-income households reduced food expenditures by roughly the same amount as increases in fuel expenditures. In some respects this is a tidal wave not of rising water like Katrina but of rising energy prices.

We have all gone out and had the opportunity to visit with constituents and get a firsthand glimpse of the struggle they are faced with. I visited a few weeks ago with Mr. Aram Ohanian, an 88-year-old veteran of the U.S. Army in World War II, living on a $779-a-month Social Security check, and money is so tight that sometimes he has to eat with his children or go to a local soup kitchen, and he also has to get assistance from a food bank. These price increases to Mr. Ohanian will be very difficult. He received assistance last year with respect to LIHEAP funding, but that assistance will be relatively less this year because of rising prices and maybe because the demand will be much more.

Last month, the Social Security Administration announced that cost-of-living adjustments for 2006 on average is about $65. That $65 increase to Mr. Ohanian is not going to take up the slack in terms of these tremendous fuel prices.

Now, this amendment would increase LIHEAP funding by $2.92 billion. In fact, even if we did this, there would still be a significant number of Americans who qualify for the program but will not get help. But at least we are taking a step toward fully authorizing this very important program.

I hope we can, in fact, support this effort. Some have objected not because the LIHEAP program does need money but because there was no offset. Today there is an offset. This windfall profits tax will pay for the additional cost of LIHEAP, and I can't think of anything more appropriate than asking fuel companies, oil companies to take some of their very extraordinary profits and put them back so that poor people can buy their products. I think that is fair. I think it is just. I think it makes a lot of sense.

I asked them voluntarily, sent a letter to all the oil executives saying: Would you pledge 10 percent of your profits to the local community agencies that provide support? I have heard but from one company, CITGO, who talked about their plan to give bulk fuel. Everyone else has said nothing. They are going on as if American families are not in desperate situations because of the price of heating oil.

Mr. President, I hope my colleagues, in fact, are able to support this method which fully pays for the increase to LIHEAP which so many of us agree is absolutely necessary.

I yield back the Senator from Montana any time I have.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, if my colleague will yield a second, I ask unanimous consent that after the Coburn amendment is debated or set aside, Senator SANTORUM be recognized to speak for 15 minutes, Mr. BYRD be recognized to speak for 30 minutes, and Senator FEINGOLD be recognized to offer his amendment on pay-go with 30 minutes of debate equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, may I ask—the understanding at this moment is Senator DORGAN and myself are recognized for how much time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifteen minutes on each side—15 minutes for the Senators from Connecticut and North Dakota and 15 minutes on the other side.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, let me thank, again, my colleague from North Dakota for offering this amendment. I am pleased to be the lead cosponsor of it.

This was brought up a number of weeks ago. This isn't something the Senator from North Dakota conjured up in the last several days. It is one he suggested back a number of weeks ago when the first skyrocketing prices occurred and the information emerged about these incredible, historic profits.

Just to put it in perspective in these few minutes, we have remaining before we vote on this amendment, in the space of 12 weeks—12 weeks—the five largest integrated oil companies secured profits approaching $33 billion.

Now, again, let me state the obvious, or hopefully what is the obvious. The Senator from North Dakota and I have no difficulty whatsoever with the idea that businesses, including energy companies, make a legitimate and decent profit because of their investments and their work. But from time to time we have seen in our Nation's history profiteering where excessive profits are made at the expense of what needs to be done for the good of the country. In this case, to develop additional energy resources.

What we are suggesting with this amendment is that with windfall profits that exceed $40 a barrel, we offer the integrated companies an alternative. One: take the windfall profits and invest them back in the development of existing or alternative energy sources; or two: give rebates to consumers in this country who are paying these incredibly higher prices in gasoline and home heating oil. Don't just go out and buy your own stock or engage in merger acquisitions at a time when we need to be less dependent on politically fragile parts of the world such as we are today.

We know over and over again, that the companies are bragging in their own annual reports about record profits. In 2004, one major oil company, in its annual report, stated that it had recorded 48 percent higher profits because of the higher prices of oil and gasoline. And at the same time they announced to the world in that annual report that they actually reduced their production by 3 percent. We know that refining capacity is near 100 percent. We also know that many of these same integrated companies virtually eliminated 176 refineries in the last 25 years. It is not because of environmental problems or people objecting to existing refineries. They decided themselves to reduce their refining capacity.

Again, you don't need to have a Ph.D. in economics to understand a company is profiteering to such a degree that it hurts our country. We ought to be doing a better job than that.

With this amendment, we are asking this industry to either reinvest these excessive profits into increasing the availability of supply in our country or provide the rebates for individuals who could use the help. It is not just taking the money and putting it in the general fund and saying. We will decide what to do with it later.

I heard my colleague from Rhode Island making an impassioned plea for the LIHEAP program, and I agree with him. I have watched him offer this amendment on several occasions over the last few years. This body has seen fit to turn down those amendments over and over. So we are not going to get much help there.

The suggestion is, why not ask this industry that is recording nearly $33 billion of profits in 12 weeks to do a little something to help the folks in Connecticut, Minnesota, or North Dakota who are going to be paying very high home heating prices. In fact, in my State, the estimated cost in that area alone would be about $325 more this year per household, not to mention, the continued high gasoline prices. While gasoline prices are coming down somewhat, they are still about 32 cents higher than last year.

Again, I think the industry owes it. We saw during another time in our Nation's history, World War II, that another Senator in this body, Harry Truman, demanded a stop to the profiteering that was occurring in this country.

We are not denying anybody a right to make a legitimate profit, but when those profits put our Nation at risk, when they cause people who deserve better to pay exorbitant prices to stay warm and to use the automobiles they need, then we ought to be standing up as a collective body saying: You have to stop that. There is no justification for it. Remember, these prices began to climb before August 29. It wasn't Katrina. These prices began to climb during the spring and summer months. Katrina has caused some problems, no question about it, but to use Katrina as the excuse for these skyrocketing prices is not based on fact at all. We are urging our colleagues to join us in this effort. This would be a major source of relief for people across the country. Alternatively, the industry could do the right thing and invest those windfall profits in new energy sources and refineries instead of merging and buying back their own stock. Half of the profits last year were spent on buying back stock, not in new exploration. The amendment serves as an incentive. That is what the Dorgan amendment does.

I am pleased to be a cosponsor of the amendment. We urge our colleagues to support it.

I yield to my colleague.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, how much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Nine minutes.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, first, I thank my colleague from Connecticut for his support on this amendment.

I want to spend a little time responding to some of the opponents who have completely mischaracterized the amendment, which is everyone's right on the floor of the Senate. It is important for everyone to hear the facts.

We did hear last evening a colleague say he was sick of populism, just sick of populism. When the little guy gets hurt, and the little guy is getting rich at the same time, populism means you stand up for the little guy. And I would say, get used to it. If you are sick of it, get used to it, because this Senate floor is where you stand for people who don't have the capability to stand for themselves.

In this case, what is happening in our country is unfair, just unfair. The oil giants, larger because of mergers, are recording record profits, the highest in the history. Here are what the profits look like, unbelievable profits, the highest in the history of corporate America, and the consumers experience all the pain. They wonder, as they see the headlines, "Big Oil's Burden of Too Much Cash," "High Energy Prices Lift Profits at ConocoPhillips by 89 Percent." I could go on and on. ExxonMobil, $9.9 billion in the third quarter. I could go on.

The consumers wonder, as they fill their tanks, about these headlines. They wonder about these headlines as they try to heat their home this winter and pay 40, 50, 60 percent more to do it. They wonder out on the farm someplace about these headlines when they try to figure out, How am I going to be able to buy a tank of fuel?

This proposal is very simple. This proposal says that for oil over $40 a barrel price, we would impose a windfall profits tax, except that no company would pay it if all their profits are being invested into the ground to search for more energy or above ground to build more refineries. If that is what they are doing with profits, this doesn't affect them. They don't have to worry.

We have had all kinds of folks coming out to the floor with talking points. If I was the oil industry, I wouldn't like what we are doing either. I understand that. It is perfectly logic. The talking points say if this amendment is passed, we are going to see less production of oil and gas. That is total rubbish, complete nonsense. In fact, the most significant incentive for the increased production of oil and gas in this country would be the prospect of having to pay a 50-percent excise tax on profits if you don't use them for that purpose.

We say: If you do use them to expand supply of energy and therefore reduce price, you are exempt. Don't worry about this. Let me show what BusinessWeek says:

> Why Isn't Big Oil Drilling More? Rather than developing new fields, oil giants have preferred to buy rivals—drilling for oil on Wall Street.

If you are buying back stock, drilling for oil on Wall Street, or if you are not using the money to expand the supply of energy, then you risk being hit with a windfall profits tax, the entire purpose of which would be to provide rebates to consumers, not to bring money into the Federal Treasury, but instead to provide a recapture and provide rebates to consumers. It is painfully simple.

Again, I say, as my colleague from Connecticut has, I think profits are fine. It is what makes our businesses work. But these are profits the likes of which we have never seen. Last year, the average price of oil was $40 a barrel, and the industry had the highest profits in history. This is unfair in this country, and we need to do something about it.

I have quoted before Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys, but what he said in that song in the thirties certainly does apply to this:

> The little bee sucks the blossom, but the big bee gets the honey.
> The little guy picks the cotton and the big guy gets the money.

And so it goes. At this point, using energy is not a luxury. Using energy for every American is a necessity. The question is, should the oil giants, made larger by blockbuster mergers, be showing record profits and then using the money to drill for oil on Wall Street, hoard cash or buy back their stock at the same time average Americans are trying to figure out how on Earth do I pay this fuel bill? Our amendment tries to solve that.

How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 4 minutes 20 seconds.

Mr. DORGAN. I reserve my time. If there are speakers on the other side, I prefer they use their time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, we are back on the amendment again. This morning we went through this, but I think it is worthwhile going through it again to talk about the difficulty of trying to do something with a windfall profits tax.

We have done this before, and I know my colleagues put some exemptions in there. The fact is, they are still taking windfall profits, something we tried before and doesn't work. Distribution doesn't work. We have been through that. This is something that is not consistent with the marketplace functioning. I don't know how many times we have to go through this, but I suppose it is an issue that is certainly worth talking about.

I think, as I said this morning, there are several issues involved in this bill. One of them is the economy, and the economy is to develop jobs, to have organizations that make profits that create jobs and build the economy, and we need to do that.

The second issue, of course, and the most important perhaps for many of us, is energy—to have energy. We can see the energy bills are going down. We are moving beyond that crisis, down to where it was before. But the long-term issue still remains, and that is the one that is important to talk about. That is why we spent 2 or 3 years with an energy policy, a policy that recognizes that what we have been doing in the past, the kinds of sources we have had in the past are not going to always be there. We have to have an opportunity to move forward.

This idea of saying, We will not charge you if you go ahead and invest—there is going to be investment. There has always been investment. I come from a State where energy is being put out there. A lot of you don't. You don't understand what it costs to do some of these things. It is going to cost even more as we go to deeper wells, as we go to oil shale, as we go to secondary recovery. But the idea that is being used by my friend over here is that the energy companies are making too much money.

Take a look at this chart. This chart shows earnings of major industries during the second quarter of 2005. And then it is adjusted to the third quarter of 2005, where we are now. Take a little look here. What is the highest one? Banks. Maybe we ought to have a little windfall profits tax on banks, do you think, and put that money out? Why don't you try that one. Here is pharmaceuticals. My gosh, 18-percent return. That would be great. Then you can hand out a bunch of free drugs. I think that would work into your philosophy. Software services, semiconductors, diversified financials, household personal products, consumer services, insurance, communications, food and beverage, real estate, health care, materials, U.S. industry average, 7.9. Oh, my goodness, here is oil and natural gas, 7.6, below the national average. And this whole thing is predicated on these people making too much money. I don't understand that. That has been adjusted. Now they are right above that, 8. Look where they are. What is unusual about that?

These are big dollars, that is true, but the return on investment is not extraordinary. There has been more activity there, so obviously there are more dollars.

I wish my colleagues would come with me and talk about what we anticipate happening, what we are going to do about changing some of the energy that is going into other kinds of products so that we can have it for the future. Do you think that is going to cost a lot of money? Of course it is. Do you think they want to have to justify what their investment is with the Federal Government? I don't think so.

If there is anything around here we need to be doing, it is getting the Federal Government out of some of these kinds of private sector investments instead of getting into it more and more.

What the Senator is suggesting is, if I am an energy company, I have to go to an agency and find out whether what I am doing justifies me not having a withholding tax. Those are not the kinds of things we need to do.

We continue to hear more and more about let's get the Federal Government involved in making these kinds of decisions. These aren't the kind of decisions that need to be made. That is the marketplace, and that is what the marketplace is about. We can see it changing almost daily, and it should, there is no question about that.

Again, this whole discussion that has gone on today and yesterday makes me wonder why we messed around trying to get an energy policy that gives us some direction in the future, that gives us some idea of how we should be investing in the future, with new kinds of energy and doing it without getting the approval of a Federal Government agency or somebody in the Congress to decide whether that investment is a sound investment. That is what the marketplace is for. We are making real progress in doing that.

I think this idea—and I know the idea is basically how we are going to get some money out to everyone, which is not a brand-new idea. My friends on the other side are big on that one, and I understand it, but this is not the way to do that. This is not the way to take windfall profits, and if so, let's start up here at the top of the chart. Let's start up here. If we are going to play that game, why, that is probably the way we ought to go.

I will stop here and reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes. That was about as good a presentation supporting windfall profits as could be made. These charts of an 89-percent increase, the highest profits in the history of corporations, and so on, it is a pretty hard case to make on the floor of the Senate that these profits don't exist or this industry somehow isn't very profitable.

My colleague talks about the long run. The problem is you don't heat your home in the long run, you heat your home tonight. And if you are stuck with a 50-percent increase to heat your home tonight, you don't worry about the long run; you have to figure out how you do it now.

My constituents and his, when they order a load of fuel to be delivered to their farm and ranch, they are not going to pay for that in the long run; they are going to pay for it now.

My point is this: This notion of the marketplace functioning—I would love to have a debate about the marketplace. This is so far from the free marketplace, it is unbelievable. There is no free market here. You have OPEC ministers sitting around a table deciding supply and price. There are the biggest oil companies, much bigger because of mergers, that have more raw muscle in the marketplace, and then there are the futures markets which, instead of providing liquidity, have become grand casinos of speculation. Now we call it the marketplace. Too bad for the consumers.

Somebody ought to probably stand on the side of the consumers—that is the point of all of this—to say that this is not fair. This marketplace does not work for everybody. It works to provide the biggest profits in history for the oil companies.

My colleague says: Well, they are just doing a really good job. Yes, they are. BusinessWeek itself says what they are doing is drilling for oil on Wall Street, not drilling for oil underground.

Our point is simple: No major oil companies will pay this windfall profits tax if they are doing the right thing. And if they are not, we will recapture it and send rebates to consumers. If my colleagues are against that, vote against the amendment, and I understand it.

I reserve our time.

The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I will just pick up and then let my friend from Wyoming conclude this debate. Again, I commend him on trying to make as strong a case as he could.

There is a fundamental difference here. We are talking about not just any other commodity or service; we are talking about things that are essential for people to survive. We are about to enter the winter season. We have been feeling it in the Nation's Capitol the last 24 hours; the temperature has dropped to 40 degrees. I suspect our Indian summer is over. Across the northern tier States and western States alike, people on fixed incomes do not have any choice on whether to heat their homes and take care of their families. So unlike other sectors of the economy where there are some choices involved, when it comes to this commodity, oil, America depends upon it for people to remain safe, healthy, and sound.

Many people across the country, certainly in western States more than eastern states, have no other alternative in terms of how they get to their jobs or their schools or those places they must be. It is the automobile. That is what they have to rely on. Mass transit systems do not exist everywhere. So this is not just some random commodity or service we are talking about. That is the first point.

No. 2, the point was made earlier by my colleague from North Dakota, that we are talking about the large, integrated oil companies. I showed the list yesterday. We now talk about ExxonMobil; it used to be Exxon and Mobil. It used to be Conoco and Phillips; now it is ConocoPhillips. At some point we may have one or two companies left. When OPEC sits down, that is hardly free enterprise or a free market system. These prices are being established by a handful of people basically deciding what we will pay as consumers.

One tries to find some economic justification for it and some people are saying it was Katrina. Again, I admit Katrina has caused disruption, but these prices moved long before Katrina occurred. There is no economic justification that I can find. In fact, the industry itself admits that they showed record profits while they reduced production.

Their own annual reports indicate what they are doing with the profits. They are out there buying back their own stock. They are engaging in mergers.

We are saying, Look, you owe some responsibility to increase production or help us develop some alternatives. We just gave you massive tax breaks in the Energy bill. Alternatively, provide some relief to the businesses, the farmers, the consumers who are going to be paying these higher prices. This provides an alternative, an incentive. We provided an incentive with the Energy bill by providing tax breaks for the industry. They get the tax break if they will do certain things.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. DODD. We urge the adoption of this amendment. These are essential needs. There is no choice for consumers today. This is a proper role for Government, to go in and demand this kind of accountability.

We yield back the remainder of the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. Do I have some time remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8 minutes 46 seconds remaining.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, it is interesting, the proper role for Government—I guess that is a choice we make. Certainly we have a different point of view about the role of Government, not only on this but on many things.

We talk about how important oil and gas is. It certainly is important. What about food and beverage—is this important? No, that is just something that we play with. What about insurance—is that important? Of course, all of these things are important. Somehow we want to pick out one commodity and do something with it. We keep talking about these profits. Again, let me say that the profits in these companies are not as equal as these. So the idea that they are overly profitable—they are not.

I am not sure that the Senator is familiar with the costs of energy production. We are talking now about doing offshore things. It costs millions of dollars to drill a well. These are not small-dollar kinds of things.

Again, I say one should not have to subject themselves to the oversight of a Government agency to decide whether they can use the money they earn to invest in their own business. That just does not make much sense.

We talk about reducing the costs. Well, everybody wants to reduce the costs. Take a look at the gas pump over the last 6 months. It has been reduced from about $3 a gallon to now below $2, so we are making some progress.

He talks about OPEC setting the price. Why do my colleagues think that is? Because we are so dependent on importing energy. Our job ought to be to allow ourselves to have these investments in domestic energy, alternative energy, and do some things to avoid what has been done there.

So I understand my friends over there who have a different point of view, but it is quite a different point of view. It is quite a different point of view than we have had in this bill. It is quite a different point of view than we have had in the Energy bill. It is quite a different point of view in the ideas we have had to create a stronger economy and more jobs. So I certainly urge people to vote against this amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise today in opposition to Senator DORGAN's windfall profits tax amendment. This amendment seeks to punish oil companies with a punitive tax on profits when oil prices go above $40 per barrel. This amendment is shortsighted and extremely bad fiscal policy.

First, this bill already includes a $4.923 billion tax penalty on large integrated oil companies. The Dorgan amendment would simply add on to the penalty currently in this bill. The belief persists that the oil companies' profits are "extreme" or "excessive." However, this belief is unfounded. Yes, most oil companies did have record-setting profits during the 3rd quarter. But history has clearly shown that the oil industry is "boom or bust." One needs look no further than my home State of Kansas. During the 1970s and 1980s, the economy in Kansas was tied directly to the oil and natural gas industry. As their profits spiked or fell, our economy would do the same. I say this to prove that I have firsthand knowledge of how volatile the oil industry is. We need not tax a single industry simply because it had a good quarter. Even a record-setting quarter is not reason to add a windfall tax. This is bad policy and sets a negative precedent. This clearly puts a disincentive in the marketplace for American companies, in all sectors of our economy, to not perform their best. This is not the signal we want to be sending in a competitive, global economy.

Building upon the fact that the oil industry has many fluctuations, a windfall tax on profits would reduce needed private investments in energy infrastructure. If the industry is not allowed to benefit during periods of high prices because of a tax on profits, there will be precious little incentive to invest in domestic production. These investments lead to more production, which in turn lead to lower prices. A windfall profit tax would disrupt the normal cyclical movement of the energy industry.

Finally, a windfall profits tax would harm the numerous individuals who have invested in the energy industry through pension plans and mutual funds because this new tax would reduce capital gains and dividends payments.

Mr. President, I believe it is clear this amendment would do much more harm than good. It is shortsighted, market distorting, and sets a bad precedent for every industry in our economy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Connecticut is out of time.

Mr. DODD. I yield back our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I raise a point of order that the Dorgan amendment is not germane to the underlying legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, I move to waive the applicable sections of that act for purposes of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

AMENDMENT NO. 2609

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are now 2 minutes equally divided in relation to the Feinstein amendment No. 2609.

The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I present this amendment on behalf of Senators SUNUNU, GREGG, WYDEN, CANTWELL, FEINGOLD, BURR, MCCAIN, KERRY, COLLINS, CLINTON, SCHUMER, SNOWE, and myself.

In April of this year, the President of the United States stated this:

> With oil at more than $50 a barrel, energy companies do not need taxpayer-funded incentives to explore for oil and gas.

Before a joint Senate hearing last week, the big companies—ExxonMobil, Chevron, ConocoPhillips, BP, and Shell—said they do not need these tax incentives. Each CEO said they did not need it.

This amendment removes those tax incentives. I think the time has come to do that.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I offer my strong support for Senator FEINSTEIN's amendment to change section 263(C) of the Tax Code, and I thank her for her work on it. The provision that her amendment targets allows large, integrated oil companies to expense, instead of capitalize, intangible drilling and development costs, such as fuel costs, workers' wages, and drilling equipment. This is a complicated way of saying that U.S. taxpayer dollars have been subsidizing the regular costs of integrated oil companies doing business, something that doesn't make sense.

Repealing this provision of the Tax Code could result in upwards of $2 billion more dollars in the Treasury over the next 5 years. Two billion dollars instead of simply transferring this significant amount of money to companies we all know are currently experiencing record profits, these funds could support a variety of important programs or could be used to reduce our skyrocketing deficit so that our children don't inherit our fiscal mess. Integrated oil companies are some of the largest corporations in the world—they simply don't need this tax break.

This amendment makes common sense and I encourage my colleagues to vote in favor of it.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from New Mexico.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, first, the Senator is offering an amendment which purports to respond to what some executives had to say about whether they needed or wanted the tax provisions in the Tax Policy Act we passed. These provisions—the principal ones—are 50 years old. They are not part of the energy package. They have been there for 50 years, upon which the energy companies rely when they drill expensive holes and invest expensive amounts. It has to do with the amortization of costs. Some of it is intangible, meaning it is not a product because part of the cost is intangible. Part of the cost that goes into producing these is seismic information and the like. That is why it is called that. But these were not adopted in the energy package. They have been part of the production of energy in the United States for eons. We want more production, and we come along and take those away.

It seems to me this is the wrong time, and it is not germane.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I raise a point of order that the Feinstein amendment is not germane to the underlying bill.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, I move to waive the applicable sections of that act for the purposes of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

AMENDMENT NO. 2610

There are now 2 minutes equally divided prior to a vote on the Feinstein amendment No. 2610.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, we have all seen the HHS bill go down in the Senate. There is a message in this. That is that the people of America are only going to accept so many cuts in health care, in Medicaid, in Medicare, in transportation, and other vital areas.

This amendment directly targets our budget deficit. If the budget is not in balance, tax rates for income, capital gains, and dividends will return to previous levels and deductions for taxpayers earning more than an adjusted gross income of $1 million a year.

According to the Joint Committee on Taxation and the Tax Policy Center, this amendment could increase revenues by more than $100 billion over 5 years. It is a strong step, a first step in helping the budget deficit and also saying to people in this country that millionaires are prepared to forego tax cuts to benefit the very poor of our country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I am against the Feinstein amendment. It is a typical Democratic response to a budget: Raise taxes. They happen to think that Americans are crying, "We are undertaxed." I don't hear that from my constituents. I bet they don't hear it in California either.

If those taxpayers she is talking about were only coupon-clipping, Park Avenue millionaires or somebody from Rodeo Drive, a resident of Beverly Hills, I would not be concerned. But we are talking about taxing small business people 80 percent by the Treasury Department. The people that fall into this category whom she wants to tax are the small business people that create 70 to 80 percent of the jobs in America. There is no reason, when we finally have the individual tax rate at 35, the same as the corporate tax rate, to treat small business the same as we treat corporations—not have a bias in the tax bill. We shouldn't go back to that bias.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I raise a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 40, the nays are 59. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected. The point of order is sustained and the amendment falls.

AMENDMENT NO. 2612

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are now 2 minutes evenly divided prior to a vote in relation to the Cantwell amendment No. 2612.

The Senator from Washington.

Ms. CANTWELL. My amendment makes price gouging a Federal crime. It does two things. It implements what is in 28 different States the law to make sure consumers are protected from price gouging, and it gives the FTC, the Department of Justice, and State attorneys general the ability to look at market manipulation as a Federal crime when energy markets are manipulated. I urge my colleagues to support, at a time when we are going home to high heating oil prices, something that will protect consumers by giving new tools to the Federal statute.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the Cantwell anti-price gouging amendment to S. 2020, the tax reconciliation bill. This amendment is identical to Senator CANTWELL's Energy Emergency Consumer Protection Act of 2005, a bill that I cosponsored with 29 colleagues. This amendment will, for the first time, give our Federal Government the needed tools to prosecute those unscrupulous individuals and companies that seek to take advantage of emergencies and disasters by price gouging consumers in the sale of gasoline and other petroleum products.

We have all seen the suffering caused to consumers when gas prices spike in the wake of disruptions in supply caused by natural disasters. While gas prices have come down from their record levels of over $ 3.00 per gallon in many places in the last few weeks, they are still too high. And the experience of this past September teaches us that the danger to consumers resulting from tight supplies and high demand remains acute. We cannot allow consumers to remain vulnerable to price gouging and market manipulation the next time our essential energy supplies face disruption.

Recent experience shows us beyond doubt the need for this amendment. Allegations of price gouging and drastic price spikes were unfortunately commonplace in the immediate days following the Hurricane Katrina disaster—including, for example, gas being sold at $6.00 per gallon in the Atlanta area. It appeared that the human suffering caused by loss of life, housing, and employment, was compounded by some unscrupulous individuals and businesses who took advantage of the emergency by gouging consumers. Yet, under current law, the Federal Government had virtually no ability to prosecute such price gouging. This amendment will correct this critical deficiency.

This amendment contains several important provisions. First, it gives the President the authority to declare an energy emergency during times of disruptions in the supply or distribution of gasoline or petroleum products. Second, the amendment, for the first time, declares illegal under Federal law selling gasoline or petroleum products at a price unconscionably high or when circumstances indicate that the seller is taking unfair advantage to increase prices unreasonably in times of energy emergency. Those who violate this law face civil penalties of up to $3,000,000 per day and criminal penalties, including jail terms of up to 5 years for individuals, as well. The amendment also forbids market manipulation in connection with the sale of gasoline and petroleum products and empowers the experts at the Federal Trade Commission to write regulations setting forth specific conduct constitution market manipulation. Additionally, our amendment gives States attorneys general the power to enforce these provisions as well.

These measures are an urgently needed deterrent to prevent all those would seek to profit from disasters such as Hurricane Katrina by price gouging consumers in the price of gasoline or other essential energy supplies. Our amendment will protect consumers—both those who were the victims of Hurricane Katrina and those who may be victimized in the future—who suffer every day at the gas pumps from the real and growing economic pain caused by high gas and energy prices. As ranking member on the Senate Antitrust Subcommittee, I believe that this measure is necessary to prevent unscrupulous companies from ever again using a natural or manmade disaster to justify uncompetitive gas price hikes. All of us can agree that profiteering and price gouging in the price of an essential commodity like gasoline is simply unacceptable. Such conduct violates every principle of free and fair competition. We must give the Federal Government the necessary tools to prevent such misconduct, and prosecute those who do so.

I urge my colleagues to support the Cantwell amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, the committee held a hearing on this and some of the items we are pursuing, some of the concepts, might be involved with this amendment. But this is not germane to this bill, nor the place for the Senate to consider this action. The FTC may need some jurisdiction here, but the jurisdiction that would follow with the Cantwell amendment is much too broad. Twenty-seven States have this authority now. The question is whether we should at some time give the FTC jurisdiction over multiple State problems. This is no way to go about it. It is not germane to the bill. I raise a point of order that the amendment is not germane to the underlying bill.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, I move to waive the applicable sections of the act for consideration of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

NOT VOTING—1

Corzine

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote the yeas are 57, the nays are 42. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is not agreed to. The point of order is sustained and the amendment falls.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I propose that we reach a time agreement on this next pending amendment, which is the Coburn amendment. I ask unanimous consent that the time on the Coburn amendment be limited to 1 hour equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, I probably don't have a problem with that. I do not want to make a time agreement——

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, the Senate is not in order. I have a hard time hearing the Senator.

Mr. COBURN. It is my hope that we could finish this in 1 hour, and I will do everything I can to do that. I do not want to limit my ability to answer questions in this case. The Senator has my word that I will limit the amount of debate so that we can try to finish in an hour. But I would object to limiting it formally, and I will do everything I can to finish it in an hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. I hear the Senator from Oklahoma, with all due respect. I wonder if we could agree to maybe 1½ hours.

Mr. COBURN. I have no objection to that whatsoever.

Mr. BAUCUS. With the understanding that perhaps an hour and a half may not all be used.

Mr. COBURN. I have no objection.

Mr. BAUCUS. I renew my request for 1½ hours equally divided.

The Senator from Mississippi.

AMENDMENT NO. 2633

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 2633 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT] proposes an amendment numbered 2633.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To clarify treatment of outside income and expenses in the Senate)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ___. CLARIFICATION OF TREATMENT OF OUTSIDE INCOME AND EXPENSES IN THE SENATE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of rule XXXVI and paragraph 5(b)(3) of rule XXXVII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, compensation or outside earned income for any calendar year shall be reduced by actual and necessary expenses incurred by a Member of the Senate in connection with the practice of medicine. A Member of the Senate shall include information with respect to such expenses with any report in which such compensation or income is required to be included.

(b) PAYMENT OR REIMBURSEMENT.—If expenses described in subsection (a) are—

(1) paid or reimbursed by another person, the amount of any such payment shall not be counted as compensation or outside earned income; and

(2) not paid or reimbursed, the amount of compensation or outside earned income shall be determined by subtracting the actual and necessary expenses incurred by the Member from any payment received for the activity.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, this is the amendment dealing with the resolution of the Senator from Oklahoma, and I just want to clarify that because it will be referred to as the Coburn amendment. I want to make sure everybody understands that is what we are talking about.

Before I get into my remarks, I would like to yield, as a convenience to him, the first 2 minutes to Senator HATCH, or for additional time if he needs it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I thank my colleague.

Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by our colleagues from Mississippi and Oklahoma. the Coburn amendment.

First of all, let me say I am sorry this amendment is even necessary.

It is obvious to everybody that Dr. COBURN, Senator COBURN, is an intelligent and dedicated medical doctor whose respect and love for helping people is legendary.

It is equally obvious that Dr. COBURN is an accomplished legislator whose contributions to the work of this body are important. No one can raise an issue about Dr. COBURN's work ethic, his loyalty to the Senate, to Oklahoma, or his constituents. and I say this as someone who has agreed with him on many occasions and as someone who has clashed swords with him on occasions.

There is no question in my mind the Government in general and the Senate in particular benefit from informed legislators. To preclude. Dr. COBURN—a recognized medical expert—from practicing medicine without any profit motive whatsoever is nonsensical.

There are a lot of people who depend on him and need his services; at the same time, he needs to keep up his clinical skills so that he can continue to practice medicine whenever he decides to leave the Senate. And he will not be able to maintain his surgical skills or his hospital privileges if he doesn't have this privilege.

In fact, it is a simple precept of government life that policymakers should develop some expertise in the issues they are deliberating.

To compare him to attorneys—who very often have a profit motive—is the wrong comparison, I think.

We all know Dr. COBURN to be a fine man who has a great deal of affection for his patients. I believe he deserves the opportunity to continue to help his patients, continue his medical privileges, and be able to pay for any liability insurance that he may need. He will not make a penny from his efforts, but he will be able to up his skills, which I think is a benefit on all levels.

What better way for a doctor to develop that expertise than to continue the practice of medicine, helping real, live people with real, live problems in the real-world hospital or clinic setting?

I happen to know a little about this, even though I am a lawyer by training.

As my colleagues are aware, I have taken a great interest in health issues since coming to the Congress.

It has been my practice to solicit actively medical professionals to help advise me on health legislative matters.

I have been fortunate, for many years, to have been aided in my working representing Utahns, by the assistance of very capable Robert Wood Johnson Foundation health policy fellows.

These fellows, doctors, nurses, dentists, and health professionals, work each year in congressional offices on both sides of the aisle, and I think all of my colleagues who are fortunate enough to work with RWJ Fellows feel their work as been enriched by the presence of these very capable men and women.

I think back on those who have worked in my office, and I am so proud of what we accomplished together—David Sundwall, M.D., now the head of the Utah Health Department, Phil Marion, M.D., Michael Ashburn, M.D., Larry Kerr, PhD, Marlon Priest, M.D., David Russell, DDS, Mark Carlson, M.D., Kira Bacal, M.D.—they are all superstars.

Several years ago, before my current health policy director, Pattie DeLoatche, joined my staff, I talked to a previous fellow, Dr. Priest, about joining us in the Senate.

I hoped to woo him away from the University of Alabama.

Marlon had been an outstanding addition to my office, as an astute emergency room physician who thrived on the give and take of the Senate. His work on many issues, particularly anti-tobacco efforts and radiation compensation, stands out.

Marlon would have been a fantastic Hill staffer. And we would have benefitted greatly by his presence.

But, you know what? He said to me, "Senator, as attractive as this offer is, I am almost 50 years old. If I come to the Senate, I can't practice medicine. I will lose my license. And when you leave office, I will no longer have a medical career. I just can't take that chance."

That was our loss.

Similarly, it is our loss if Dr. COBURN cannot practice medicine while he is a Senator. It is the loss of this body, which can benefit so much by his expertise, and it is the loss of Oklahoma, the Nation, and indeed the world, if he cannot practice medicine.

Some have suggested, in error I believe, that medical doctors should be treated no differently than other professions, such as lawyers.

There is a big difference between those two professions.

I can serve here as a lawyer, and I do not lose my license.

That is not true for a doctor.

With all due respect to my colleagues on the Ethics Committee, and their staff, the ruling by the Ethics Committee is a bureaucratic response to a non-problem.

Dr. COBURN is not asking to make a profit here.

He has sworn to the committee and to this body that a reasonable reinterpretation of the Senate rules should allow him to practice medicine on a not-for-profit basis.

There is no conflict there.

But even more, I find it so commendable that Dr. COBURN has pledged to his constituents that he will be a citizen legislator, a central part of his Senate campaign.

If Dr. COBURN wants to honor and restore the long-standing tradition in this body of serving as citizen legislators, then so be it. More power to him.

And as I noted in the case of my former staffer, a doctor cannot become a Senate employee and retain his or her licensure.

So as a consequence, for all practical purposes, dedicated medical professionals, be they Dr. FRIST, Dr. COBURN, Dr. Priest, or any other doctor, dentist, nurse or other health care worker, cannot give their expertise to the Senate on any extended basis.

What we are asking for here is not a conflict of interest by any means.

There would be no profit motive, indeed no profit. So what is the conflict?

Indeed, as Dr. COBURN has noted, no pregnant woman will choose him hoping to sway his vote.

I think it is also safe to conclude with Dr. COBURN's notation that no PhRMA representatives will line up for a physical at the Oklahoma Senator's office.

Mr. President, I think that any objective analysis of the facts would yield one conclusion: the Senate and the American people benefit by having doctors serve here.

We should be turning cartwheels that we have such talented individuals as Dr. FRIST and Dr. COBURN who want to share their expertise with the Senate and our country.

The rules should encourage their working here, not discourage it.

I hope my colleagues will agree.

All I can say is this.

This is a good man.

He is in it for the right reasons.

This amendment will ensure he keeps his medical privileges active.

He is not going to make any profit from it, but he will be able to pay for his medical liability insurance.

Most of all, he will be able to help unfortunate people, patients who believe in him, patients this good doctor helps so selflessly. I think everybody in the Senate should feel happy they have enabled our colleague to continue a vital, valuable medical practice without any hint of ethical compromise. That is what this amendment is intended to do, and I urge that it be adopted.

I hope our colleagues will give some consideration to this issue and allow this man the privilege of doing this. I will be very disappointed if we don't.

I thank my dear friend from Mississippi for granting me this time.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, again, I know we will need to alternate back and forth. As a courtesy to a colleague, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. SPECTER.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Mississippi for filing his resolution and for yielding me a few minutes to talk about the merits. I support the resolution. I believe it would enhance the Senate to have Senator COBURN continue his medical practice on a basis where he does not seek a profit, where he covers his expenses, and where he continues to perform very important medical services for many people who are his patients now and who may become his patients.

When the issue arises as to whether it interferes with Senator COBURN's duties and responsibilities in the Senate, I believe I am in a position to answer that question, categorically, based upon what he has done for a year in the Senate, where I have had very close contact with him on the Judiciary Committee.

He is prompt in attendance. We have grave difficulties maintaining a quorum but not because of Senator COBURN. He lends an expertise which is absent. We had hearings today on the asbestos reform bill, and Senator COBURN was cross-examining the medical witnesses in a way that regular Senators, plain Senators, even though they have some experience in questioning witnesses, can't do. I said to Senator COBURN, after the hearing concluded, that he might be in the wrong profession; he ought to be practicing cross-examination. He thought that was related to being a lawyer. He didn't like that suggestion very much, but it was made only in jest.

He knows things as a result of his medical profession that the rest of us do not know. We have a great many professionals in this body but not medical professionals. There is no conflict of interest, as the Senator from Utah, Mr. HATCH, commented about lawyers and a profit motive and there might be some connection between representing clients in matters to come before the Senate. That is not the situation with Senator COBURN.

There is no conflict of interest. In fact, there is a substantial confluence of interest. That may be a new phrase. If I could attract Senator COBURN's attention, I said there is a confluence of interest with his work as a doctor and with his work as a Senator.

While I agree with the limitations generally, I think they do not apply to Senator/Dr. COBURN's situation. I believe the resolution ought to be adopted.

Again, I thank my colleague from Mississippi. I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may consume so I can get into some of the specifics of the resolution.

The resolution simply provides that a Senator who is a physician can continue to practice in his profession while serving in the Senate. However, there is an important caveat included in this resolution. A Senator who continues to practice medicine may not receive fees and other payments for medical services that exceed the actual and necessary expenses incurred by the Senator in connection with his medical practice. In other words, the Senator cannot make a profit from his practice.

I have discussed this issue with a lot of our colleagues. There are those who are concerned that once we open this door, we will open it more and more and there will be more and more exceptions to the rule. That is not my intent here. That is a debate for another day, and maybe we should have it, in my opinion. This is narrowly crafted legislation that would allow for Senator COBURN to continue his practice.

I think he should have that opportunity. I think it is fair to him, and I think it is needed in his community. In talking with him, it is not that he is an obstetrician/gynecologist, he is a general practitioner. He treats people who come to him for all kinds of problems. We have a need for more, not less, doctors.

Also, there is a unique difference we have to remember. As lawyers, I guess as long as you keep your bar membership up, when we leave here, oh, yes, we are still lawyers because we got a law degree 40 years ago. But as a doctor, if you don't keep up your practice, you can't go back and say, Oh great, I will take care of your gynecological needs or deliver a baby. They need to keep their skills honed.

Some people say he can practice, he just can't have any income to cover his expenses. Based on the Senate salary, he would not be able to pay for the expenses, primarily because of the exorbitant amount of money now that is involved in medical malpractice.

I note that allowing a physician to continue practicing medicine to the extent of covering actual costs is consistent with an approach that was taken by the House of Representatives. I think it is a very critical point. We are going to have more of a disallowance over here than even the House. This matter was worked through a very lengthy process in the House, and they came to the conclusion they needed to have this exception.

Moreover, the definition of compensation contained in the resolution is identical to the definition used in the U.S. Office of Government Ethics.

The resolution applies only to physicians who practice as sole practitioners and only when the Senate is not in session. So there is not going to be a conflict with his responsibilities. Knowing this Senator from Oklahoma, as we all do already, he would never do that. He wouldn't fly home and start delivering babies when we were having votes.

It also limits it to a sole-practitioner role. The resolution retains the current Senate rule that prohibits a Senator from affiliating with a firm. In addition, the current rule that prohibits a Senator's name from being used by any affiliated firm or company is retained.

Physicians need to continue to practice in order to maintain their skills, as I noted. Because we have not been able to get medical malpractice insurance reform, it costs hundreds of thousands of dollars, in many cases, to stay in practice. We all hear from our doctors about how difficult that is getting to be. I think it is probably even more difficult if you are an OB/GYN to pay the fees that are involved for providing this medical service.

Should a Senator who is a physician have to be recertified to practice when he leaves the Senate because he has been unable to maintain his practice because of Senate rules? I don't believe he should have that additional responsibility. We are putting an additional burden on physicians who would serve in the Senate. We need more diversity here, not less, even though we have had doctors throughout history serve in the Senate. Most of them—in fact, I guess all of them until very recent history—continued to practice medicine. It was never a problem. I am sure the Senator from Oklahoma is going to give us a history of doctors and physicians in the Senate and what they did. I am sure he is going to give us the history of lawyers who continued to practice, great Members of the Congress and Senate who went on to become President.

I think we are setting up a situation that is indefensible. It is not just about this Senator. I want to make the point, too, about why we are doing it this way. I don't want to take away the responsibilities of the Ethics Committee to interpret the rules. I hoped this would be worked out. We have a time problem now. At some point soon, the Senator from Oklahoma is going to have to decide what to do: Is he going to completely shut down his practice or what is he going to do? There are certain limits on how long he has to close out his practice.

I would like the Rules Committee to have acted on this issue, but there is the issue of getting the matter through the Rules Committee and then getting it scheduled for time on the floor. We are doing it this way because it is the only way it could be done. I think the Senator at least deserves to have his case considered.

The current Senate rules do not completely bar outside profit by Senators, I should note. Many Senators now are writing books, and they are able to keep the royalties. There is an ethics exception, I believe, for teaching classes, and that is earned income. Yet that exception is made. Of course, if you are a Senator and you marry a person with money or if you inherit money, that is fine. But if you have an ability, a talent that you can offer, a service that you can provide, even if you do it not for profit, no, you can't do that.

I am very concerned about what we are doing to ourselves. I practiced law. I looked at staying affiliated with a law firm. I think I could have practiced estate law without running afoul of the ethics rules, but you could not do that.

This is a narrow exception that I think is the fair way to allow this Senator to continue his practice without conflicting with the ethics rules or with his duties. This is a profession we need more of, I repeat.

I hope my colleagues will seriously consider this modest exception to the rules of the Senate. This is a Senator who wants to continue serving the medical needs of his constituents without earning a profit. That is pretty magnanimous, it seems to me. I think we should do this. I think what we are doing to this Senator and the people he serves is wrong. At least he will have a vote, and I hope that maybe sometime later we will consider this whole issue in a broader sense. But for now, we should make this narrow exception, as the House of Representatives did in the past.

I yield the floor, Mr. President.

Do we want to alternate. How much time does the Senator desire? I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I thank the Senator. I stand here in two capacities: speaking as a Senator trying to find a compromise that would be good for the institution and as a friend of TOM COBURN.

If I had any doubt about the effect this would have on the institution, I would not rise in support of my friend, because we all know why we are here. We are here to make the country stronger and the Senate better. Having TOM COBURN here as a physician I think makes the country stronger and better.

It is not about him making money. All of us know Senator COBURN and what he does in Oklahoma. He is not practicing medicine to make money. He is practicing medicine to stay in touch with his constituents, to provide a vital service to rural Oklahoma, and to try to pay the bills. He is doing it for all the right reasons.

You can, as Senator LOTT said, have outside income. This is not about outside income. This is about trying to maintain the skills that are very much in demand in Oklahoma and a relationship that I think will be beneficial to the people he serves and the Senate as a whole.

The bottom line is, it worked in the House. They had the same debate in the House. They had a compromise where Senator COBURN could practice medicine not for a profit but for the privilege of serving his constituents in two ways: as a Representative and a doctor. It worked very well. It was a win-win. It can be a win-win for the Senate. Physicians who served in the Senate in the past have been allowed to practice.

Perception is important. We don't want to do anything in the Senate on our watch that would give a perception that the body is not at its highest level. And reality is important too. I think the reality of allowing Dr. COBURN to continue to practice in the Senate, such as he did in the House, is extremely beneficial to real people who need a good doctor who is competent at delivering medical care and who has a great heart for serving people. Those individuals need the Senate to understand they are affected, and whatever perception problems anybody is worried about, it did not hurt the House at all, and it is not going to hurt the Senate.

The reality is there are people counting on Dr. COBURN, and it would be a shame for them to be denied medical care from a very good man.

From the Senate's point of view, I think it would be good for us to have a commonsense view of what our role in society is, that we are not a body that should be totally disconnected from everyday life. If you can have a Member of the body serving in a very vital capacity that improves everyday life, then we ought to let that happen. It would be a win-win for the Senate, and it would be a win-win for the people of Oklahoma.

I am here to say that TOM COBURN is not only a great Senator, he is a great doctor, and he practices medicine for all the right reasons. Any perception problem should not stand between him and the ability to deliver a vital service. We are not reduced as a body by him taking care of people in Oklahoma. I think we are enhanced.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I believe I manage the time in opposition on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

Mr. BAUCUS. Accordingly, I yield 20 minutes to the chairman of the Ethics Committee, Senator VOINOVICH.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, first I would like to say I have a great deal of respect for Senator COBURN. I think he is acting from honorable motives. I would remind Senators that our colleague, Senator FRIST, is a doctor and is not asking for dispensation from the rule. He continues to practice without compensation on occasion.

I have been hopeful that working in a truly bipartisan manner with the Ethics Committee, which I chair, the Rules Committee, our bipartisan leadership, and Senator COBURN, that we could come to an agreement which would address Senator COBURN's concerns.

While I would like to be able to detail the long history of the Ethics Committee's work to find an accommodation with Senator COBURN to effectively address his concerns, in an effort to maintain the privileged nature of the communications between the committee and the Senator, I must speak only in generalities.

Let me assure my colleagues that we have done everything that the Senate rules will allow us to do to help Senator COBURN in this matter. I can assure you that Senator JOHNSON and I have spent a great deal of time, and the staff of the Ethics Committee as well, trying to accommodate Senator COBURN. Ultimately, we found ourselves in a situation where we were asked to reinterpret what the Senate rules meant or to endorse a change of those rules for Senator COBURN. As I will soon detail, the specific language and legislative history of Senate Rules XXXVI and XXXVII and Federal law prevent us from reinterpreting the rules. With regard to changing the rules themselves, we did not believe the Ethics Committee should be involved in the sole jurisdiction of the Rules Committee.

As my colleagues know, the Rules Committee establishes the rules of the Senate. The Ethics Committee is charged with enforcing those rules. This matter should not be on the Senate floor. It should be before the Rules Committee of the Senate.

Despite these realities and all the work to accommodate Senator COBURN over the past year, here we are considering a sense-of-the-Senate resolution to clarify Senate Rule XXXVII in an effort to put pressure on the Senate Ethics Committee to reinterpret what "compensation" means. Unfortunately, this resolution has not been approved or considered by the Rules Committee. There have been no hearings on this matter in the Rules Committee. Nevertheless, here we are.

First, allow me to lay out the Senate rules which guided the Ethics Committee's determination on the Coburn matter.

Senate Rule XXXVII prohibits Senators from, No. 1, affiliating with a firm, partnership, association, or corporation for the purpose of providing professional services for compensation; 2, permitting his or her name to be used by a firm, partnership, association, or corporation which provides professional services for compensation; and 3, practicing a profession for compensation to any extent during regular office hours of the employing Senate office.

The Senate Ethics Manual, the meat the committee provides the Senate for the bones of the Senate's rules, indicates on page 71 that Rule XXXVII "prohibits the paid practice of fiduciary professions," which includes the medical profession. On page 72, the manual indicates that the rule applies to "payment for professional services."

This is important because it goes to the heart of why the committee determined that Senator COBURN's proposal to allow him to receive reimbursement for expense in lieu of compensation should not be approved.

Senator COBURN has publicly stated that the purpose behind his effort today is to allow him to receive reimbursement to cover the medical malpractice costs associated with providing medical care. He believes that in order to maintain his medical skills and licenses and in order to be a "citizen legislator," he should be allowed to receive this compensation.

Again, to be absolutely clear, as chairman of the Ethics Committee, my job is to provide Senators guidance to help them comply with our rules. Our rules clearly state that payment of any kind for any purpose for fiduciary work is prohibited. Rule XXXVII prohibits exactly what Senator COBURN is asking for today.

The Senate looked at this exact specific situation in 1977. Senator Thurmond, with whom a good number of us had the opportunity to serve—and this is 1977—served as cochair with Senator Gaylord Nelson of the Special Committee on Official Conduct. This committee was charged with developing the original Senate Code of Conduct upon which many of our current Senate ethics rules are based. Senator Thurmond said on the Senate floor in 1977:

> If [doctors] value their duties and they want to keep up, they can visit hospitals and go out and participate, so long as they do not do it for compensation.

Additionally, the Nelson committee report formed the basis for what is now Rule XXXVI and addresses the possibility of outside earned income. Specifically, the report states:

> During its deliberation on this Rule, the Committee was aware of clear and unmistakable practical facts of political life. For example, most Americans regard service in the Senate as a full-time job.

And I can say that was 1977. This is 2005. I can say that I think it is more of a full-time job today than it was back in 1977.

> Senators work long hours devoting a substantial amount of not only their own time, but also time that they could be with their families, attending to Senate business on behalf of their constituents.

Consistent with these duties is the notion that since service in the Senate is a full-time job, considerable skepticism is often raised in the minds of the public whenever outside earned income is received by a Senator because of personal services outside regular Senate duties.

Now, this is to be differentiated from other outside income like farming because the personal services or fiduciary relationship is fundamentally different. A Senator engaged in farming is not put in the situation where he or she would have to choose between tending to their fields or serving a constituent. A doctor, who is in a fiduciary relationship, could face a situation where he had to choose between constituents and providing medical treatment for a patient. Writing a book is not a fiduciary relationship and would not interfere with a Senator's business because he can pick it up and lay it down.

Not only do our own rules and history prevent the arrangement that Senator COBURN is asking for, but Federal law does as well. The Ethics Reform Act of 1989, enshrined as paragraph 5(b) of Rule XXXVII, explicitly prohibits Senators from entering into professional fiduciary relationships. The rule, again based on the Ethics Reform Act, prohibits:

> (1) receive compensation for affiliating with or being employed by a firm, partnership, association, corporation, or other entity which provides professional services involving a fiduciary relationship.
> (2) permit that Member's, officer's, or employee's name to be used by any such firm, partnership, association, corporation, or other entity.

There may be an argument made to the Senate today that the "compensation" that Rules XXXVI and XXXVII and Ethics Reform Act refer to is profit. We may hear that the resolution we are considering encourages the Ethics Committee to define compensation as money received for costs or that compensation should only apply to for-profit enterprises or that "breaking even" is not compensation. Well, allow me to share some facts for the Senate to consider on what "compensation" means.

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code finds that gross income includes "compensation for services including fees, commissions, fringe benefits and similar items."

The U.S. Court of Claims held in 1968 "that the statutory definition of gross income is broad enough to include as compensation any economic or financial benefit from any source, conferred in any form on any employee, unless specifically exempted by statute."

Nowhere in the Internal Revenue Code or in our case law will one find "compensation" defined as "breaking even."

Let me raise some other facts. The Federal Acquisition Regulation defines compensation as "all remuneration paid or accrued for services rendered by the employees to the contractor during the period of the contract performance."

Again, in contracts with the Federal Government, breaking even is not an option.

Finally, allow me to offer one more piece of information for my colleagues to consider when the "actual and necessary expense" argument is made on behalf of this resolution. The Code of Federal Regulations, 5 CFR section 2636.303(b), states:

> Outside earned income and compensation both mean wages, salaries, honoraria, commission, professional fees and other forms of compensation for services other than salary benefits and allowances paid by the United States Government.

Again, the idea of defining compensation as profit is not considered in our Federal Code.

Finally, allow me to offer some thoughts on what changing the committee's interpretation of rules XXXVI and XXXVII, the Ethics Reform Act, the Internal Revenue Code, findings of the U.S. Court of Claims, and our Federal Code would mean.

Enforcement of this rule change will be impossible. The Ethics Committee would need to hire a small army of auditors and accountants to effectively evaluate what expenses were actual and necessary as the resolution would allow. These accountants would need to have some specific, specialized knowledge in the medical field to evaluate if the expenses Senator COBURN had were "actual and necessary." Frankly, the committee is not equipped to handle this responsibility. Moreover, I do not believe that the committee should be asked to take this on.

The rule change would inevitably lead to violations. I can hardly envision a scenario in which every procedure Dr. COBURN is involved with is billed exactly at the actual and necessary expenses. While Dr. COBURN does have a degree in accounting, I believe that should he be permitted to practice medicine, his focus should be on his patients, not on his accounts receivable. If his rates were to exceed or fall short of his actual or necessary expenses, he would be in violation and subject to an Ethics Committee violation. No one wants that.

The rule change would lead to other calls for changes from our colleagues that are fraught with even more dangers. Why should we not provide the same arrangement to our two colleagues who are veterinarians? Do they not need to continue their practices to maintain their skills and licenses? Is this not their chosen profession and one that they may want to return to eventually? How long will it be before one of the many excellent lawyers amongst us will ask to practice but only receive actual and necessary expenses? If we decide today to allow a colleague to pursue their profession and receive compensation to cover their expenses, how will the committee say no to other requests like this? This is the slippery slope and one that I believe we must carefully avoid.

Again, I am sorry this matter has come to the floor of the Senate. I believe Senator COBURN means well in his efforts today. He wants to continue his services as a doctor to help people. I applaud that altruistic commitment to public service. Rather than debating the possibility of reinterpreting our rules, we should be talking about a real, practical solution that would allow Senator COBURN to continue serving people and to maintain his medical skills and licenses.

The committee has long indicated to Senators that they could provide medical services to patients on a volunteer basis where no compensation is received, as the Senate majority leader does, and we are very familiar with it.

The committee has indicated to Senators, consistent with Senator Thurmond's comments in 1977, that they can pursue a volunteer relationship with a VA hospital in their home States or in Washington at Walter Reed or at the Bethesda Medical Center where no compensation is provided. I understand they have arrangements to cover the malpractice insurance of doctors who operate there, so that malpractice problem would not occur.

Unfortunately, instead of congratulating Senator COBURN for finding a solution that will allow him to continue practicing, we are debating a Senate resolution to instruct the Senate Ethics Committee to ignore Rules XXXVI and XXXVII, the Ethics Reform Act, and definitions of compensation that are in Federal statute. We cannot do that.

With that, I urge my colleagues to reject this effort, and I raise a point of order that the Coburn amendment is not germane to the underlying bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order must be made at the conclusion of all debate.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I would ask the Chair to remind me of that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Arizona.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I lend my strong support for the amendment offered by Senator LOTT. It is measured, it is common sense, and it will help to allow Members of the Senate in the medical profession to function on a not-for-profit basis—I emphasize again, not-for-profit basis.

Dr. COBURN is not fabulously wealthy. He needs to be able to break even. If one Member of the Senate is very wealthy and can afford to carry out medical duties without adequate compensation for it, that is fine.

He is not seeking permission to shirk his Senate responsibilities in any way. I also appreciate the fact that he does not want to walk away from the medical profession. We need people with hands-on health care experience. One of the greatest challenges we face in the coming years is health care costs and health care issues. Would it not be wonderful to have a person who has daily hands-on experience with these health care issues, which is $40 trillion in unfunded liability in the case of Medicare?

He is not turning Senate rules on their head. Somebody is going to have to explain to me how we can have a blind trust and make money from a blind trust, but we cannot make money from a break-even standpoint in the practice of medicine.

It is bizarre. It is bizarre.

He has demonstrated he is more than a full-time legislator. He has offered dozens of amendments on bills in his first year in office, not making every Member of the Senate happy when he is doing so. No one can question his tenacity, his work ethic. As chairman of the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management, Senator COBURN has already held 20 oversight hearings.

I believe Senator COBURN can walk and chew gum. I believe he can practice medicine when he is back with his constituents in Oklahoma and serve that State even more admirably, serving them in more capabilities than one. I wish I had the capabilities the doctor from Oklahoma has.

I hope there is an overwhelming vote in favor of the Lott motion.

I appreciate the courtesy of my colleagues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I ask to address the body for 5 minutes on this issue.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today as vice chair of the Ethics Committee to discuss the resolution being considered by the Senate. I say at the outset that I have great respect for my colleague, Senator COBURN. The resolution before us seeks to provide a special carve-out for the practice of medicine, and medicine only, from the current Senate rules limiting outside compensation and income.

The Senate rules that govern this issue and their interpretation do not come at the whim of the Senate Rules or Senate Ethics Committees, but from a longstanding determination and precedent of this body. In fact, this has been a part of the Senate rules since 1977, when the original Senate Code of Conduct was adopted.

The committee that was established to develop the Senate Code of Conduct was known as the Nelson Committee, after its chairman, Senator Gaylord Nelson, and specifically addressed the restrictions on Senators practicing fiduciary professions in its report by saying:

> This provision reflects the committee's belief that the practice of a profession usually requires substantial amounts of personal involvement and time, and may also present conflicts of interest or in some cases the appearance of such conflicts.

During the Senate debate in 1977 on these rules, Senator Strom Thurmond delivered a strong statement on the purpose and the intent behind including the prohibition on Members of the Senate from continuing to practice and being compensated for outside professional work. He said:

> The job of a U.S. Senator is a full-time job, and if one is able to find time to render professional services for compensation, I seriously question his ability to render the commensurate service necessary to be a full-time Senator.

At that time, the Nelson Committee and the Senate recognized the pitfalls of allowing Members to receive income or compensation for outside professional work. Those pitfalls still exist today.

First, the proposal before the Senate would create a net profit standard in conjunction with medical professionals accepting outside compensation. It is my understanding this would allow physicians to accept payments for services from such sources as individuals, insurance companies, or even Medicare and Medicaid, up to the point at which all of their expenses have been covered.

A major concern I have about this proposal is it does not contain any direction as to how compliance with this net profit standard would be monitored to ensure that the instant all expenses were covered, the compensation would be ended. Without a clear ability to monitor compliance, the potential for violations, abuse of the system, or even mistakes that would affect the credibility of this Senate is very high.

I question whether the Ethics Committee has, or in fact whether it should have, the resources that would be required to properly analyze the complex accounting needed to ensure compliance with this net profit standard.

Furthermore, at this time I simply do not believe the Senate should vote in favor of any proposal that would loosen our ethical boundaries and increase the opportunities for ethical violations.

The resolution also does not provide any limitations on the outside practice of medicine. It appears that under this resolution, a Senator could spend a majority, if not all, of his or her time practicing medicine, to the detriment of the Senate, and without any recourse for the Senate.

As stated before, the Senate has determined our responsibilities are full-time. If the proposal before us is adopted, it will set up a conflict between constituents and a Senator's outside medical responsibilities for which he or she is being compensated.

The question has been raised about whether this carve-out ought to apply only to the medical profession. The fact is there are other professionals in this body of great skill—lawyers, engineers, business people, people of other professions. The fact is each and every one of them could practice their professions outside their service in the Senate, and without that practice, their skills, indeed, do erode as well. There are lawyers here whose membership in the bar is retained but whose skills certainly do erode over time. That is true of every profession. There is no profession, I believe, that is immune from or more prone to profit motives, and I do not think that any profession can be singled out in that regard.

I am not completely insensitive to the motivations behind the resolution, but I remind my colleagues that there is nothing in the Senate Rules that forbids a physician in the Senate from practicing medicine, as the Senate leader, Senator FRIST, oftentimes does. The argument here is not that doctors who serve in the Senate should never be allowed to practice medicine. The rules allow doctors serving in the Senate to practice medicine for free. The argument is that no Senator should practice a profession of any kind and receive outside compensation, no matter what the expenses of that particular profession might be.

If there is going to be a change, then the proper place for that change is through the Rules Committee and the ordinary process where hearings can be held and thoughtful deliberation can be had, and the parliamentary rules of this body would apply. It would be a mistake and an unfortunate precedent for this body to permit an end run around the Rules Committee in order to avoid the supermajority vote that ordinarily would be required to change the rules during the middle of a congressional session.

I do not believe we should take a step today to weaken the Senate rules, and I encourage my colleagues to oppose this resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. I yield 4 minutes to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, a vote for this amendment is a vote to restore the original purpose of an ethics rule. It was a rule developed to keep special interests from unduly influencing Members of the Senate by forbidding us from receiving outside income while serving here, on either side of the Congress. But, as the Government often does, we seem to have forgotten the original purpose of this rule and are now focusing on a technical interpretation. We are asking for some common sense.

The patients of a doctor delivering babies, many times a poor Medicaid mother, are not going to influence the votes of Members of the Senate. Senator LOTT has mentioned a number of exceptions that already occur. The House, acting on the same rule, decided to allow Dr. COBURN to continue to deliver babies because of the benefit to this institution as well as the benefit to his patients.

Senator LOTT mentioned other exceptions we already make for each other. We can receive millions from a book. But even more important, every Member of this Senate receives compensation every time we travel to speak to a group in different parts of this country. It is compensation only to cover expenses, but it is still compensation. And many Members of this Senate are still involved with businesses and take passive income and help to make some management decisions. It is compensation, but it is not direct compensation.

Senator COBURN's situation is very similar. He is providing an important service, often to poor mothers, and he does not want to make a profit, only to cover his expenses. My appeal to my colleagues tonight is to remember the purpose of these ethics rules.

These women are not going to influence votes. The only time he spends is when we are not in session here.

Let's straighten out one other thing, if we could. This amendment is not to help Dr. COBURN. It is about allowing him to help others, which is what he is doing on the weekends. He is not making any profit from doing this. He is serving others as he has done for years. But it is also about helping us, as an institution, to keep contact with people in the real world and the problems they have—on his own time.

I encourage my fellow colleagues to remember the purpose, to use some common sense, and to allow Dr. COBURN to continue to serve his constituents in ways that many of us are often doing in different ways.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Connecticut, Mr. DODD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, let me begin by saying these are the sorts of uncomfortable moments in the Senate when we start to deal with each other on a personal level. I have been in this body for 24 years and I take no comfort in engaging in this kind of discussion. But as the ranking Democrat on the Rules Committee, serving with my friend and colleague from Mississippi, TRENT LOTT, as the chairman of the committee, I felt it was important to at least express to my colleagues here the position this Senator has as a member of that committee and as a former chairman of the Rules Committee.

Very simply stated, as a matter of process—putting aside for a second the arguments on behalf of our colleague from Oklahoma and his noble determination and desire to continue the profession in which he has been engaged for years—there is a means by which we go through changes in the rules in this body. We have established that process for orderly reasons. What is being suggested here by this amendment is a change in the rules of the Senate, and there is a committee established by this body to consider such proposals.

There is nothing in the rules of the Senate which prohibits any Member of this body from engaging in the practice of a profession, except as constrained by Rules XXXVI and XXXVII. As the Senator from Ohio has pointed out, what is being suggested here is that a member be allowed to earn some level of compensation in order to defray certain expenses. That would require a modification of Rule XXXVI and/or XXXVII.

There is a way of doing that and the way is, you come to the Rules Committee, you have a hearing, you listen to witnesses. A person can make a suggestion to modify the rules. We do that all the time. If the Rules Committee decides in its wisdom it believes the rules ought to be modified or changed, then we recommend that change to this body as a whole and we move forward and accommodate a request such as the Senator from Oklahoma is making. But to bypass all of that process, even if you believe strongly that what the Senator from Oklahoma is suggesting he ought to be allowed to do, we ought to be following the process here. You would be setting a precedent, even if you agree with my colleague from Oklahoma and what he suggests here.

There is a way by which you do things here. When you begin to sidestep and short circuit the process, then you put the entire process in jeopardy. I begin by stating that to my colleagues. Even if you feel strongly—and I say I know many of my colleagues do, and I have listened to the remarks over the last several minutes in support of Senator COBURN's request—there is a process which we should go through to achieve that end. I urge the body, if for no other reason than that, to support the motion that will be made by the Senator from Ohio.

Then if the Senator desires to go forward with this, I certainly would be willing—I say this to my colleagues here; my colleague from Mississippi is not here—but if he wants to have a hearing on this matter, I will attend the hearing. I will attend all the hearings on it and listen to witnesses come forward and then consider the proposed change in the rules. If that is what we want to do, we ought to do that process. But I am uneasy about bypassing that process.

As I said earlier, there is nothing in the Senate Rules that precludes a Member of this body from practicing a profession while in public service. But that practice is limited by Rules XXXVI and XXXVII and limitations on compensation earned in a fiduciary relationship. The history of these provisions shows that they are designed to ensure the membership in a profession does not so impose on the responsibilities of a Senator as to effectively render the Member a part-time public servant.

Again, there are circumstances which could be pointed out which I am sure would cause us to consider some changes in all this, but there is a process to go through. When the Founding Fathers envisioned citizen legislators some more than 200 years ago, they did not envision the kind of world we live in today and a Congress, today, that meets not only year round but often throughout the day, well into the night. Witness this evening. We are likely going to be here until 10 or 11 o'clock tonight debating these amendments on the reconciliation bill. We may be here tomorrow and Saturday and Sunday.

Certainly, the Founding Fathers had times when that occurred but not with the regularity that we engage in these practices. My colleague, the chairman of the Rules Committee, whom I have referenced already, suggests that Senator COBURN will not fly home and deliver babies when there are votes.

I can personally bear witness to this—I am sure my colleague from Oklahoma will verify this—that babies don't normally set their time for delivery based on the Senate schedule. I can say as the father of two new recent arrivals that they decided to arrive not during the Senate schedule; they had their own schedule for arrival. Even though we may try to accommodate our colleagues in these areas, it doesn't normally occur on any sort of predictable pattern. It is not elective surgery, in most cases.

Moreover, while I am sympathetic to the concerns that physicians should maintain their skills. In fact, I relish the fact that we have Senator COBURN here as a physician, along with Senator FRIST and the two Members before our body who are veterinarians, who add, I think, to the discussion and debate. It adds a dimension to our deliberations. But again, we have four Members of this body who practice medicine—two who practice the human variety and two who practice the animal variety. I respect them immensely and enjoy speaking to them about their profession. But if we begin this process, what argument is there in response to my colleagues here who practice veterinary medicine? Should they no be able to seek to cover their costs? What about those who like to maintain their skill level as attorneys, engineers, or otherwise?

We decided to put some parameters around this. Again, there is a process we can go through if we decide that we want to change it. It is not in any way to try to impugn the reputation or the contribution of Members. But to suggest that in this 21st century, we ought to begin to start compromising these rules in order to accommodate Members who wish to go back and practice their profession and to receive compensation, which is a critical element here, on their own time I think would be a step in the wrong direction. We have come some distance over the years.

In the previous century, there were Members of this body who would go down on the first floor and try cases before the Supreme Court and then come back up here to vote on the very bills that might have changed the law.

There was a wonderful Senator from New York, Chauncey Depew. He was the president of the New York Central Railroad while a Member of this body and never had a second thought about voting on railroad matters affecting the compensation of the company he was running. But, of course, the world has changed. I believe we are far better off today because we moved away from that kind of practice in the past.

I am not suggesting that my colleague from Oklahoma is suggesting anything like the behavior that we saw in previous centuries. But, nonetheless, we have established some parameters. Again, that is the reason we have a process here by which we make modifications.

The provisions in the rules are not biblical, they are not etched in marble or granite. They can be changed. But I suggest that if we are going to change them, we ought to go through the normal process of doing that. Taking up what is essentially a sense-of-the-Senate resolution on the tax reconciliation bill is not the way to go.

Again, I say to my friend, we don't know each other terribly well. We haven't engaged in much business together, and I don't want the Senator to perceive what I am saying as disrespectful of his intent—I am not comfortable with these debates. My colleagues have known me over the past quarter of a century, and they know I try to stay away from these matters. It does begin to reflect or suggest somehow our feelings about one another. I don't want anything I have said here to suggest any negative feelings about my colleague because we disagree in the way at which we have arrived at this debate. This is really not an Ethics Committee matter. It is a Rules Committee matter, and that is where it belongs. We ought to consider it there and some of the questions and implications raised in this debate and then come forward. It may be that a majority of the Rules Committee will say the rule ought to be modified or changed. If that is the wisdom, then we come to the body, and have an informed debate. But we ought to be careful about trying to short circuit that process.

I am going to support the motion by the Senator from Ohio. I urge my colleagues to do so—not in any way to impugn the motives of the Senator from Oklahoma but to protect the process of the Senate.

With all due respect, that is a much larger question, it seems to me, than the ambition or desires of any one Member of this body. We bear responsibility to be good caretakers of this institution and to see to it that we preserve and protect the way in which we conduct ourselves. If we wish to change the means by which we do that, there is a process we should follow in doing so. Again, to bypass that process by bringing it directly to the floor I believe does potential damage to this institution that none of us should want to be party to.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I yield 4 minutes to the Senator from Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, will you notify me when I have used 2 minutes? I will try to keep this within 2 minutes. I wish to make a couple of points.

I am a licensed veterinarian and am still currently licensed. When I was first elected to the Senate, when we were going through the ethics routine very similar to what they have in the House of Representatives, I still owned an animal hospital when I was in the House of Representatives. I never really gave it much thought because I heard you can own a small business. That is what it was—a small business. But as I was listening to the ethics briefings when I was elected to the Senate, I said: I don't think I can own my animal hospital. I don't think I can be partners anymore in the animal hospital.

What I liked about owning my animal hospital was that I thought it kept me in touch with the real world; that we passed the Congressional Accountability Act because Congress was so out of touch with the laws that we passed up here for the real world. We were so out of touch, we said at least we should live under the same laws in our offices as they live out in the real world. I thought my veterinary practice allowed me to stay in touch with the real world much better.

But I went to the Senate Ethics Committee and asked them about it, and they said, sure enough, you are going to have to sell the animal hospital. That wasn't something that I counted on when I was elected.

I spoke to Don Nickles when it was all done, and he said he thought it was a disservice and that I should have fought it at the time, that I should have fought for a rule change back then.

I apologize to Dr. COBURN for not fighting for a rule change back then. I don't think Dr. COBURN wants to go as far as he actually should be able to go or I should have been able to go. All he wants to do is break even because of the high cost of medical malpractice today and to be able to make enough money to be able to pay his premiums and stay in touch with his patients and practice medicine. Health care costs in this country are skyrocketing, and we need people who understand the practice of medicine and our health care system in the United States.

I wholeheartedly support the Senator from Oklahoma in his efforts to do this. This is not the same as practicing law where you have somebody come down and lay down a retainer of $100,000 or $200,000 with the look of corruption that we may be trying to avoid. The practice of veterinary medicine isn't like that, and the practice of human medicine is not like that. This is somebody who will be a much better Senator if we allow him to practice; somebody who is going to be a better doctor. He is not going to be here forever, and we want him to keep his skills up because when he goes back to the practice of full-time medicine, he will still stay solvent.

As we go forward in the debate, I hope people keep this in mind: Let's us put some common sense back in here. He is one of most ethical people I have ever met in my life, and to allow him to practice will make this institution a better institution.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. INHOFE. Thank you.

Mr. President, I may want to ask for a couple more minutes.

First of all, let me state to the junior Senator from Oklahoma that I was not aware of this debate coming up. However, I don't have to practice for a debate; it comes from the heart.

Let me also say to one of my best friends in the Senate, Senator VOINOVICH, that he is doing his job. We may come to a different conclusion on this particular issue, but I know he is in a real situation. You have shared that with several of us.

Let me suggest to you, Mr. President, that there is something sadly lacking in this debate; that is, in the State of Oklahoma. There are only two of us in the Chamber from Oklahoma. We know what Oklahomans want. It is kind of interesting because Senator COBURN and I have kind of the same philosophy—we want to keep it the same place. We have different styles when we talk about trying to reduce the size of government. He talks about projects, and I talk about reducing appropriations. We both want to get to the same place. He has been an advocate and has talked about term limitation. I believe that everyone, if they don't want to go along with term limitations, ought to have to go out like I did and serve in the real world for 30 years, get beat up by the bureaucracy, and then you can come here and speak from the heart as a citizen back home.

But when you look at our State of Oklahoma—and I read this section out of the U.S. Constitution, article I, section 4, which says the time, places, and manner of holding elections for the U.S. Senate preside in each State. That is what it says. That is what the Founding Fathers said—that we should make that determination from our own States. So here we are from the State of Oklahoma. We made the decision. And I have to say this: I know what people in Oklahoma want.

One other thing Senator COBURN and I have in common is we go back every weekend. He may deliver a few babies while he is back there. But I would suggest to you, ask the question. A lot of people stay here in Washington all the time. Would you rather have your U.S. Senator staying in Washington and playing golf all weekend or going back to the State from which he came? We made a decision to go back.

I have to say also that I have a bigger dog in this fight than most people think. I had the honor of going out many years ago and recruiting this bright young doctor to run for the U.S. House of Representatives. And he did. He came in and agreed to do that. He got an exception to allow him to work hard and still keep up his practice. He did that very successfully.

I have to say this: When the Senator from Connecticut referred to a part-time Senator, which we hear now and then, let me tell you that there is no part-time Senator in Senator COBURN. I know this because we go back every weekend. I go around the State. I know what people want. The State of Oklahoma is not a Republican State or a Democrat State, it is a swing State. For him to come along and get in the race late—he got in the race so late for the U.S. Senate that I was already supporting another Republican. But when he got in and worked hard and went out, he won by 12 points. It wasn't a squeaker it was a landslide. And he was outspent by the other side.

This is what we think in Oklahoma about TOM COBURN.

You can talk all you want to about the rules in the Senate, but I can tell you right now that the Constitution is right when they say in article I, section 4, that the times, places, and manner of holding elections for the State for the office of Senator is within the State.

I am here on behalf the State of Oklahoma, unlike anyone else who has spoken saying this is the right thing to do to carve out this exception, if you want to call it that, for Senator COBURN, he is a hard-working Senator, and he is doing what we in Oklahoma want him to do.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time to the Senator from Oklahoma, Dr. COBURN.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I will consume what time I may and then ask for the remaining time when I finish.

The first thing I would like to say is I hold no ill will toward anybody who opposed me on this whatsoever. The Members here understand what their role is, and I understand what mine is. But I also understand that one of the things our country needs is citizen-based legislators. That is what I was in the House.

During my time in the House of Representatives, nobody ever accused me of being anything other than the most hard-working there. I delivered 400 babies in 6 years while I was in the House. I never missed a vote during those times. I might have missed votes associated with the airlines or committee meetings, but I never missed a vote. I campaigned on the fact that I was going to be term limited. I am a term-limited Senator. The most I will be here is 12 years, and maybe not more than 6.

But the point is: Why would I want to practice medicine? I want to practice medicine so I can be involved in what real people experience every day in this country. We don't get to see that enough. We don't get to see that at townhall meetings when we give speeches. But I will tell you that sitting in the middle of a patient's room when there is conflict in a family or death and dying or a new complication associated with an old disease and lives get impacted, I get to measure and I get to see what none of you get to see—what we do and how it affects people.

I want to practice medicine to be the best Senator I can be. I want to maintain my skills so I can go back and deliver babies. There is nothing better in the world than delivering a baby. It is a reaffirmation of why we are all here. It is a reaffirmation of life.

I will tell you that we need to think long and hard about our ethics rules. We have shot ourselves in the foot. Every Member in the Senate is ethical and wants the same thing for our country as I do—a bright and golden future, security and opportunity for our kids. But our ethics rules lack common sense.

I will address one particular statement. This word is all about compensation. Arbitrarily, the decision was made by the Ethics Committee to define "compensation" as any compensation. I will read what 5 CFR 26236-303(b)6 of the U.S. Government Office of Ethics for the rest of the Government says.

Compensation in this aspect is net compensation.

This could have very well been solved by the Ethics Committee in a broad and consistent and commonsense interpretation of the word "compensation," but they chose not to do that. I don't know why. I am disappointed and hurt.

I was not allowed to come before the Ethics Committee. I was not allowed to present my case. I was not allowed to discuss with any Ethics member my issue, to explain the basis of why I wanted to do it, and where I thought their interpretation was wrong. I had to secure legal counsel to have any communication with the Ethics Committee. I was notified by the Ethics Committee before I was ever sworn in that they had made this decision even though they lacked or asked for no input from me on my situation.

If that is the pattern under which we operate the Ethics Committee, we have real problems. I don't blame that on the chairman of the Ethics Committee or the ranking member. It is a problem we see in lots of other areas of Government, that staff tend to drive things. People who do not have the ultimate responsibility take the ultimate responsibility.

What I want to do is very simple: I want to be a great Senator. I want to contribute. I know I can contribute in ways that I would not be able to contribute by being a doctor and continuing the practice.

The question of Senator FRIST: Senator FRIST has a wonderful arrangement. It is not available to me. He has a limited number of days that he has a malpractice firm, insurance firm, that will insure him. That is not available in the practice of obstetrics in Oklahoma. It is not available to me, period. If I could do that, I would practice just as Senator FRIST. But I don't have that available to me, so I have expenses four to five times what Senator FRIST would pay for the same type of insurance. Could I secure that, I would be happy to do it.

The other thing we ought to talk about is the history of the Senate. We had reference to the rule change in 1977. There were no doctors in the Senate then. Senator Strom Thurmond's words, in adding physicians, was because he was trying to kill it. He was not trying to put physicians on there—and it backfired on him. That was his own rules. If you read his history of what happened in 1977, his attempt was to exclude many of us by adding doctors in the hopes that the Senate would turn that around.

Some history on the Senate: There have been 37 doctors who have been in the Senate. Senator FRIST and myself are the last two. Every doctor who was a practicing doctor who came to the Senate prior to Dr. Frist practiced, received payment and acted in an ethical fashion while they were here.

It is not about money. It is about the ability to practice. I know not all Senators share my zeal for citizen-based legislators. There is a real difference. To the people of Oklahoma, when I campaigned, I made three promises to them: One, I would guarantee I would not be here for a long time; No. 2, I would continue to practice; and No. 3 is that I would work hard to solve the problems of the country before I tried to solve the problems of Oklahoma.

I put the priorities out there. Oklahomans believe in that. Not necessarily all the editorial writers, not the talking heads, but the people who voted for me, every one of them knew I planned on continuing to practice medicine.

It is also important to look at the confluence of the rules we have, the rules that say I could own a business and not directly direct it but indirectly direct it and have no limitation on my income whatever. I can farm, own a farm, collect government subsidies, with no limit whatever. I can write books. I can write music. I can counsel. I can advise. There is no limitation on us, except if you are a professional that has a fiduciary responsibility.

The question ought to be what was behind the meaning of the rules. Do you think the intention was not to have a doctor practice medicine? That wasn't their intention. The fact that the malpractice crisis has created such a situation where you cannot practice for under $100,000 a year in terms of your expenses and overhead associated with that was never thought about in 1977.

I understand there is going to be a motion, a point of order raised against this. I understand that. That is a high bar for any Member to change anything around here with 60 votes. I understand the feelings and the reasoning behind the Ethics Committee on why they want to do that. And I understand their motivation and their thinking. But I make one point to my Senate colleagues: There has not been one subcommittee that has had more subcommittee hearings than I have. As a matter of fact, there is not one subcommittee that has had half as many subcommittee hearings as I have. I have missed one vote in the entire year. I practice medicine on Saturdays, on the weekends, and from 6 to 9 a.m. on Mondays. I catch my flight, and I am here for votes. My practicing of medicine does not interfere with my Senate duties. It enhances my Senate duties.

If we don't change our rules, I will live with whatever the Senate says. I will figure out a way to practice medicine in some way that accords me to try to keep my skill and try to do that within the ethical guidelines of the Senate. But I believe we are discouraging anybody else who is a physician to run for the Senate, No. 1. No. 2, we discourage other professionals to run for the Senate. And it would be my hope that you would think about the long-term consequences of what we are doing. This does no damage to the Senate. In fact, it will enhance the Senate.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, is there time on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixteen minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield whatever time the Senator would appreciate having.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I haven't known Senator COBURN very long. I didn't know him when he served in the House. During his tenure in the Senate I found him to be a most gracious person. I like him.

I had the good fortune of having served for many years on the Ethics Committee. I am sure there may have been a person or two in the past who served longer than I have, I just don't know, though, who they were. One of the most important responsibilities I have, and I think Senator FRIST has, is putting people on the Ethics Committee. There are six Senators on the Ethics Committee, three Democrats and three Republicans. It ia a very difficult job. The ethics code is large and voluminous. They have an outstanding staff.

Senator VOINOVICH and Senator JOHNSON are the two leaders of that committee and work with the other four members. Having been there, I want everyone here to know they spend hours and hours each week of their time. What do they do? They protect us. They handle complaints that come from the public. They handle complaints that come from other sources. Their job is very difficult.

In the past few weeks—certainly, I will not disclose any names; I could not do that, it would be unethical to do so—they have resolved some very big cases in the Ethics Committee.

These six Senators deserve our support. If we are going to overrule the Ethics Committee, we might just as well get rid of the Ethics Committee. That would be a terrible disaster for this institution.

When I first came here from the House of Representatives I had a law practice at home. I went home and had the ability to practice law. I don't think that was good for the institution.

We now make far more than our constituents make. We make $165,000 a year, or thereabouts. That is a lot of money. It is a full-time job to be a Member of the Senate, to be a Member of the U.S. House of Representatives.

I know Senator COBURN is a nice man. I know he has a big heart. But he is going to have to, I believe, use that big heart and the medical skills he has in keeping with the rules of the Senate and not, in effect, thwart what the Ethics Committee has told us must happen.

If this passes, it would tremendously undermine the work the Ethics Committee does. And speaking from experience, it is a very difficult, and quite frankly, a thankless job. The only thing you get from that is the knowledge that you are doing the right thing for the institution. It takes a tremendous amount of time. I repeat: Senators JOHNSON and VOINOVICH, every week we are back here, spend not a few minutes but hours of their time. No one knows what they do because it is secret. It is confidential.

No matter how we feel about Senator COBURN, no matter what a gracious, nice, thoughtful, caring man he is, it would not be good for the Senate to follow what has been recommended in the form of this amendment that is now before this Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I take whatever time I might consume.

The real difference for my colleagues to know is the definition of the word "compensation." The same lawyer that is on the Senate Ethics Committee today worked for the Senate Ethics Committee in the House when the determination was made for the practice of medicine that compensation was net compensation.

There is no damage done to the House or the institution of the House. As a matter of fact, because that rule was changed, there are now, I believe, 11 doctors in the House. I reject the idea that this would do damage to the Ethics Committee. This is a simple definition. It is one that the Ethics Committee could have chosen to use but chose not to. I don't know the motivation behind that. I know they could have solved the problem, and we wouldn't be where we are today.

AMENDMENT NO. 2647

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the pending amendment be set aside, and I send an amendment to the desk that has been cleared by both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY] for himself and Mr. BAUCUS proposes an amendment numbered 2647.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The amendment is as follows:

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, this is an amendment sponsored by Senator BAUCUS and me. It remedies two matters in the bill. The most important one makes the amendment hold harmless, a pure hold-harmless amendment. The amendment also clarifies that Government contractors will receive the research and development credit. This amendment is fully offset.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this is very important. It helps tremendously to improve some provisions in the underlying bill so no one else has to pay AMT; and, second, R&D provisions, enhanced R&D and contractors are not excluded. I support this.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 2647) was agreed to.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

AMENDMENT NO. 2633

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I think we are ready to wrap up debate on the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I will clarify again for my colleagues the fact that the Ethics Committee genuinely tried to accommodate the concerns of the Senator from Oklahoma. We, as I say, worked hard to do it. But the fact is, the rule is clear on its face, and we are being asked to reinterpret what the Senate rules mean or to endorse a change in those rules for Senator COBURN.

I think the specific language and legislative history of the rules and the Federal law prevent us from reinterpreting the rules. I believe, as I mentioned when I started my remarks earlier, this matter should not be here being debated on the floor of the Senate but, rather, as Senator DODD suggested, Senator COBURN should go before the Rules Committee. And if Senator ENSIGN is unhappy that he cannot practice veterinary medicine, perhaps he should go before the Rules Committee and have a hearing and discuss this matter, and do it according to the procedures of the Senate.

If this were to pass today, I think it would set a very dangerous precedent that would encourage people—rather than going through the process of the rules and procedures we have here in the Senate, it would cause them to come to the floor. I do not think that is good for the institution. I ask my colleagues to not support this resolution.

Mr. President, at this time I raise a point of order that the Coburn amendment is not germane to the underlying bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, I move to waive the applicable sections of that act for purposes of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is time remaining on the amendment.

Mr. COBURN. I yield back all time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, a little bit out of order here, but under the previous order, Senator SANTORUM and Senator BYRD were to speak after the disposition of the pending amendment. At this point I have learned Senator SANTORUM and Senator BYRD wish to speak at a later point.

I ask consent that the pending amendments be laid aside so Senator FEINGOLD may offer his amendment, that is, after the disposition of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield back the remainder of his time on the Coburn amendment?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if the manager of the bill will yield, procedurally, do we have any other amendments pending that votes need to——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time must be yielded back on the pending amendment, the Coburn amendment.

Mr. REID. If, in fact, the time were yielded back, what would be the first vote in sequence?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A sequence has not been established.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, how much time have we locked in under the unanimous consent agreement that is now before the Senate as to time that has been allocated? Senator FEINGOLD has 30 minutes; is that right?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. REID. Senator SANTORUM has 15 minutes; is that right?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. REID. Is there any other time allocated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator BYRD for 30 minutes.

Mr. REID. It is my understanding Senator BYRD has indicated he will not be giving his remarks.

Mr. BAUCUS. That is correct.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, that leaves not a lot of time for others who want to come and debate their amendments. So if anyone wants to come and debate their amendments, I am not sure if Senator FEINGOLD will use all of his time or if Senator SANTORUM will use all of his time.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Senator SUNUNU wants a couple minutes.

Mr. REID. Senator SUNUNU wants a couple minutes.

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. President, if I may make a point through the Chair to the minority leader, I would seek 2 minutes to offer an amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Not now.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the first vote to occur in this long stack of amendments be in relation to the Coburn amendment, and that the two managers will determine the sequence of votes following that vote, and that Senator BINGAMAN be given 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. President, I would ask unanimous consent to be added to that list for 2 minutes to offer an amendment at the end of that list.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator so modify his request?

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, it is after Senator FEINGOLD's amendment? After that?

Mr. SUNUNU. Yes.

Mr. BAUCUS. OK, fine.

Mr. REID. I accept the modification.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I might also say that means as to the list of Senators who come to me and say they want to speak on their amendments, I have said to them they could, but there will be a short period in which to speak, and they will have to come down here and speak some time before 7:30, if they want any time to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, all time has expired on the Coburn amendment.

Is there a point of order made?

Mr. VOINOVICH. A point of order was made.

Mr. COBURN. And a motion to waive, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, was the unanimous consent request approved?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Did the Senator indicate a time for the first vote?

Mr. REID. Ten minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. The first vote would be at 7:30.

AMENDMENT NO. 2650

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. FEINGOLD], for himself, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. OBAMA, and Mr. SALAZAR, proposes an amendment numbered 2650.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To fully reinstate the pay-as-you-go requirement through 2010)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ___. PAY-AS-YOU-GO POINT OF ORDER IN THE SENATE.

(a) POINT OF ORDER.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—It shall not be in order in the Senate to consider any direct spending or revenue legislation that would increase the on-budget deficit or cause an on-budget deficit for any 1 of the 3 applicable time periods as measured in paragraphs (5) and (6).

(2) APPLICABLE TIME PERIODS.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "applicable time period" means any 1 of the 3 following periods:

(A) The first year covered by the most recently adopted concurrent resolution on the budget.

(B) The period of the first 5 fiscal years covered by the most recently adopted concurrent resolution on the budget.

(C) The period of the 5 fiscal years following the first 5 fiscal years covered in the most recently adopted concurrent resolution on the budget.

(3) DIRECT-SPENDING LEGISLATION.—For purposes of this subsection and except as provided in paragraph (4), the term "direct-spending legislation" means any bill, joint resolution, amendment, motion, or conference report that affects direct spending as that term is defined by, and interpreted for purposes of, the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985.

(4) EXCLUSION.—For purposes of this subsection, the terms "direct-spending legislation" and "revenue legislation" do not include—

(A) any concurrent resolution on the budget; or

(B) any provision of legislation that affects the full funding of, and continuation of, the deposit insurance guarantee commitment in effect on the date of enactment of the Budget Enforcement Act of 1990.

(5) BASELINE.—Estimates prepared pursuant to this section shall—

(A) use the baseline surplus or deficit used for the most recently adopted concurrent resolution on the budget; and

(B) be calculated under the requirements of subsections (b) through (d) of section 257 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 for fiscal years beyond those covered by that concurrent resolution on the budget.

(6) PRIOR SURPLUS.—If direct spending or revenue legislation increases the on-budget deficit or causes an on-budget deficit when taken individually, it must also increase the on-budget deficit or cause an on-budget deficit when taken together with all direct spending and revenue legislation enacted since the beginning of the calendar year not accounted for in the baseline under paragraph (5)(A), except that direct spending or revenue effects resulting in net deficit reduction enacted pursuant to reconciliation instructions since the beginning of that same calendar year shall not be available.

(b) WAIVER.—This section may be waived or suspended in the Senate only by the affirmative vote of ⅗ of the Members, duly chosen and sworn.

(c) APPEALS.—Appeals in the Senate from the decisions of the Chair relating to any provision of this section shall be limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided between, and controlled by, the appellant and the manager of the bill or joint resolution, as the case may be. An affirmative vote of ⅗ of the Members of the Senate, duly chosen and sworn, shall be required to sustain an appeal of the ruling of the Chair on a point of order raised under this section.

(d) DETERMINATION OF BUDGET LEVELS.—For purposes of this section, the levels of new budget authority, outlays, and revenues for a fiscal year shall be determined on the basis of estimates made by the Committee on the Budget of the Senate.

(e) SUNSET.—This section shall expire on September 30, 2010.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am pleased to bring an old friend back to this body—the pay-go rule. I am even more pleased to say this is not some new pay-go, but rather good old-fashioned "Classic" pay-go. This is the pay-go we used to have in the Senate—a rule that said you had to pay for what you wanted. If you want to increase entitlement spending, you have to pay for it. If you want to increase tax expenditures or cut tax rates, then you have to pay for it.

In offering this amendment, I am pleased to be joined by the Senator from Rhode Island, Mr. CHAFEE, the Senator from Illinois, Mr. OBAMA, and in particular I am pleased to, of course, have the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. CONRAD, as a cosponsor.

As I said during the debate over the first part of the reconciliation scheme that was included in the budget resolution, there is no Senator more dedicated to a fiscally responsible Federal budget and to restoring sound budget rules than Senator CONRAD. He is an acknowledged expert on the budget and the rules that govern its consideration, but as I also said during that debate, you do not have to be a Kent Conrad to understand the pay-go rule.

It is a straightforward, commonsense requirement that whenever Congress wants to increase spending through entitlements or wants to reduce revenues from the Tax Code, then we have to pay for it or find 60 votes to make an exception to the rule.

I say to the Presiding Officer, as you well know—and I thank you for your help on this amendment—that rule was an effective restraint on the fiscal appetites of Congress and the White House, and it was critical to our ability to actually balance the Federal books. We balanced the Federal books during the 1990s using the pay-go rule.

Of course, when this body stopped following that rule, the bottom dropped out from under the budget. We went from a projected 10-year unified budget surplus of $5 trillion to massive projected deficits and backbreaking debt.

I marvel at how rapidly this institution loses its fiscal bearings. In 1992, thanks in great part to the remarkable campaign of Ross Perot, the budget deficit became the No. 1 domestic priority of the Nation. I ran on that issue in my 1992 campaign for the Senate. Perhaps a little naively, I offered a plan to balance the budget with over 82 specific proposals to cut wasteful programs in just about every area of Government.

As optimistic as I was, I was surprised at how passionately many in the Senate actually embraced that cause. And because of a tough deficit reduction package in 1993 and a more modest package in 1997, we put the budget on track to be balanced. We actually balanced the Federal budget without using the Social Security surpluses. We actually started paying down the Federal debt, most of which had been run up during the 1980s.

Central to our ability to get on the right fiscal track was this pay-go rule. But all that work, all those tough decisions were squandered in the blink of a budgetary eye. The Federal budget is now in disastrous shape. Worse, we are on a track for even darker times. As Al Jolson famously said, "You ain't seen nothin' yet."

As the Senator from North Dakota has tirelessly said: We are in the sweet spot right now. That means the retirement of my generation, the baby boom generation, is around the corner. And with it, we will witness enormous new demands on the budget. If we can't get our act together now, there is little hope that we can face those demands responsibly.

We have to stop running deficits. Running deficits caused the Government to use the surpluses of the Social Security trust fund for other Government purposes rather than to pay down the debt and help our Nation prepare for the coming retirement of the baby boom generation. As Senator CONRAD has noted, it isn't just the annual budget deficits that are the problem, it is our debt as well. Every dollar that we add to the Federal debt is another dollar that we are forcing our children to pay back in higher taxes for fewer Government benefits.

As I have noted before during previous pay-go debates, when the Government in this generation, in our generation, chooses to spend on current consumption and to accumulate debt for our children's generation to pay, it does nothing less than rob our children of their own choices. We make our choices to spend on our wants, but we saddle them with debts that they must pay from their tax dollars and their hard work. That is not right.

That is why this amendment is so critical. We absolutely must reinstate the pay-go rule. We need a strong budget process. We need to exert fiscal discipline. When the pay-go rule was in effect, that tough fiscal discipline actually governed the budget process. Under the current approach, it is the other way around. The annual budget resolution actually determines how much fiscal discipline we are willing to impose on ourselves. That simply has not worked, and it won't work. When Congress decides that it would be nice to create a new entitlement or enact new tax cuts and then adjust its budget rules to permit those policies, we are inviting a disastrous result. That is exactly what has happened.

This amendment is simple and straightforward. It would simply return us to the rule under which Congress operated for the decade of the 1990s. It was instrumental in balancing the Federal budget. Many of us lived under that rule, and we know how effective it was.

A real pay-go rule by itself would not eliminate annual budget deficits and balance the budget, but we will never get there without a real pay-go rule.

I urge my colleagues to support this commonsense, time-tested amendment.

I reserve the remainder of my time and yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 2651

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. SUNUNU] proposes an amendment numbered 2651.

Mr. SUNUNU. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To repeal State and local taxation exemptions applicable to the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ___. REPEAL OF STATE AND LOCAL TAX EXEMPTION FOR FANNIE MAE AND FREDDIE MAC.

(a) FANNIE MAE.—Section 309(c) of the Federal National Mortgage Association Charter Act (12 U.S.C. 1723a(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) [Repealed.]".

(b) FREDDIE MAC.—Section 303(e) of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation Act (12 U.S.C. 1452(e)) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) [Repealed.]".

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. President, I offer an amendment today that deals with what I consider to be a tax loophole that is in the Code that fully exempts private, for-profit corporations, owned by shareholders that have had very high levels of profit in recent years, from paying any State or local taxes. The entities I am talking about are the Government-sponsored entities Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. These are chartered by the Federal Government. We give them a number of benefits. They help with the secondary mortgage market and have been very successful in that mission. But they are in fact private, for-profit corporations with very large profits, and they do not need to be exempt from paying State and local taxes. In fact, I think if they are really committed to the local communities and the homeowners they serve across the country, they ought to be happy to pay State and local taxes.

We have heard a lot of debate over the last several hours about Big Oil. We have even had some amendments that take away tax benefits from oil companies. Some of those amendments I have supported. There have been other amendments that actually impose special taxes on oil companies. Given the concern people seem to have with high levels of profits at oil firms in recent months, I think people should embrace the idea of getting rid of this tax loophole, imposing the same kind of legitimate State and local taxes on the GSEs as we see anywhere else.

It might be one thing if the levels of profit at these entities had been plowed back into the community. But that isn't the case. The lion's share of these profits have gone to shareholders or in some cases to exorbitant executive pay—$5 million for some of the executives at these corporations, $10 million a year in one case. Clearly, these profits are being used to put back into homeownership. These are companies that can afford to pay State and local taxes. They ought to pay State and local taxes.

I certainly encourage my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendments be set aside so that the Senator from New York may offer an amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2624

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, before I offer my amendment, I ask unanimous consent that Senators WARNER, SANTORUM, and COLEMAN be added as cosponsors of amendment No. 2624, the Leahy amendment, of which I am a lead cosponsor.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 2635.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

(d) NONREFUNDABLE CREDIT.—In the case of taxable years beginning in 2005, for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, the tax liability of each taxpayer otherwise determined under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be reduced by $100 for each personal exemption (within the meaning of section 151 of such Code) claimed by such taxpayer for such taxable year.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning in 2005.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise to offer this amendment which will help balance the oil markets and help families balance their budgets this winter by pulling some of the money out of the gas pumps and putting it back in people's pockets. It would do so by instituting a windfall profit levy on the oil companies and transferring those proceeds back to where they came from, the consumer.

I am going to not use all the rhetoric. We have talked about a windfall levy before. But this one is considerably different than the one that was offered before in a number of ways. I would like to outline those ways.

First, the revenues go directly to the individual's pockets. It does not go through the Government. It does not go through any agency. It simply adds a tax credit of $100 for every person. That means the money goes to everyone. Big families will get more than small families, and it will certainly help taxpayers at the lower end.
